REBELS REACH TOWN ON ROAD TO SEA TEN MILES AWAY

Fight Way to San Mateo, Which Controls Highway to Port of Vinaroz, After Loyalists Are Driven From Nearby Mountains.

DEFENDERS FALL BACK INTO CITY

Government Troops Take Village of La Gralla, Then Lose It — Advance West of Madrid — More Men Called to Colors.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France (at the Spanish Frontier), April 9.—Spanish insurgents announced fresh advances tonight against a Government army fighting desperately to protect its Mediterranean coast lifeline highways. The southern wing of the insurgent army, driving to separate northeastern Spain from the rest of Government territory, sent word that insurgent advance guards had fought their way into suburbs of San Mateo, less than 10 miles from the sea, which controls the road to the port of Vinaroz.

The advance was made against Government militiamen who, fighting as they did a year ago when the Madrid-Valencia road was menaced, had won earlier today one of their first victories in a week of hard battling. Government troops, massed in coastal ravines and ridges, took the village of La Gralla in the Turmell foothills only to lose it again at nightfall.

Mountain Range Taken.

Despite the bitter Government resistance, insurgent infantrymen, aided by bombing squadrons and fighting planes which strafed the defenders, conquered the whole of the Turmell mountain range north of San Mateo.

Insurgent dispatches said a part of the extreme southern column was forcing its way around San Mateo preparatory to an attack into the heart of the town. Government troops fell back from the mountains into San Mateo itself.

The Government line for defense of the highway chain between Valencia and Barcelona, the main Government seaboard strongholds, stretches southwest from a point near Tortosa to a point near San Mateo de las Fuentes.

In the Tortosa region, the insurgents are about nine miles from the sea while at the southern tip of the line the distance is about 10 miles.

Behind the Government's coastal lines, the highways still were open to traffic, but only desperate groups of refugees and trucks carrying troops and vital supplies risked the bombing and machine-gunning by insurgent planes.

One group of refugees escaped from Madrid to France under repeated insurgent fire. Twice they were forced to seek cover in ditches until the bombing planes disappeared.

Action Southwest of Madrid.

The Government reported its offensive in Caceres Province, southwest of Madrid, was being carried forward toward the Portuguese frontier.

A communique said Government forces advanced 12 miles from Villar del Pedroso to Valdescasa. Insurgents were said to be surrounded and under shellfire in the nearby village of Sordo.

Half of Scattered Americans Find Way Back to Own Lines.

By the Associated Press.

MORA LA NEUVA, Spain, April 9.—Half of the 400 American fighters scattered by insurgents at Gandesa on April 1 have found their way back to their own lines. They straggled into this Government Spain haven, exhausted and emaciated from days of wandering and anxious to know the whereabouts of their comrades of the Lincoln-Washington brigade.

The latest arrivals were Capt. Leonard Lamb, New York City school teacher, and Capt. Milton Wolff, New York City artist. They reported Robert Merriman of Berkeley, Cal., commander of the headquarters staff of the Fifteenth Brigade, and David Doran of Pittsburgh, Pa., political commissar, were among those last seen at Corbera. John Gates of Youngstown, O., is now acting political commis-

Hitler Calls German Annexation Of Austria 'Will of God'; Urges Yes Vote in Plebiscite Today

Vienna Decorated as if for Pageant—Millions Hear Radio Broadcast of Fuehrer's Speech.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, April 9. — Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight declared his sudden annexation of Austria was "the will of God" and pleaded for 50,000,000 voters to indorse the creation of Greater Germany in tomorrow's plebiscite.

Addressing 30,000 cheering followers in the northwest railway station in the final appeal of the plebiscite campaign, the Austrian-born Hitler said:

"I believe it was the will of God to send this little boy to Germany to make him Fuehrer of the Reich and to bring Austria back to Germany."

He warned his enemies never to attempt to seize power here because 75,000,000 Germans would rise against them.

"Now I am in power and I shall not give it up," he said. "My name will stand out forever as the son of this great country."

Pleading for a favorable vote tomorrow, he said: "Just as you don't have to be ashamed of me, I don't want to be ashamed of you."

Millions of Germans throughout Greater Germany and elsewhere listened to a broadcast of the speech.

Today's Plebiscite.

Tomorrow they will vote on Austrian-German union, effected after German troops marched into Austria March 12, and the new Reichstag of the greater Germany.

The polls will be open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. (1 a. m. to 10 a. m. St. Louis time).

For once the famous "Hitler weather" failed. There was alternating hail, snow and rain during the afternoon.

Nothing in the 1900 years of Austria's recorded history equals the demonstrations with which the Nazis made their last bid for favor in the plebiscite.

Golden eagles on pylons 120 feet high were placed at intervals along Vienna's main avenue. Miles of flags fluttered. Every store, even in the Jewish districts, every bus and street car, truck and automobile displayed Adolf Hitler's picture, red, white and black Nazi banners and slogans.

Crowds Cheer Hitler.

Crowds filled the streets from daybreak, long before the Fuehrer arrived by special train at 11 a. m., reviewed his honor guard and rode through shouting crowds to receive formal welcome at the City Hall.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels proclaimed today "The day of the greater German Reich." He ordered a two-minute silence in memory of Nazi dead. During it no vehicle or person moved.

Similarly in Berlin, marching, singing and blaring bands spread the festivity at noon at the command, "Raise flags," broadcast from the Vienna City Hall.

Throughout the world, Germans in foreign countries have been boarding German ships for the last week to cast their ballots.

Among the 50,000,000, from whom the Nazis expect an overwhelming indorsement of Austrian-German union, are tens of thousands who have streamed into Greater Germany from nearby foreign countries.

Bedridden to Vote.

Even the lame, the halt and the blind will vote. The German Red Cross and municipal hospitals in all cities will provide ambulances for the bedridden.

Berlin's receiving hospital alone contributed 25 ambulances. Each locality has a minimum of 15 orderlies and 15 nurses assigned to assist ailing and maimed voters.

Automobiles of the Nazi Motor Corps will transport the blind, aged and others who need help.

Able-bodied voters have been urged to vote before 1 p. m. tomorrow so as to keep the afternoon clear for those the ambulances will take to the polls.

Jews cannot vote because they are not considered citizens.

All voters must be checked against the registration lists which are estimated to contain 50,000,000 names in Greater Germany out of a population of 75,000,000. Hitler has said: "When I cast my ballot I will have behind me an army of 50,000,000—the greatest in the world."

What the Ballot Provides.

Each voter, after proving that he is registered, will receive a ballot on which is printed simply:

"Do you approve of the reunion of Austria with the German Reich March 15, and do you vote for the list (of a new, Greater German Reichstag) of our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler?"

The voter will enter the voting booth alone and mark his ballot with a pencil—"Yes" in a big circle or "No" in a small circle.

When he emerges from the booth he will receive a circular badge bearing Hitler's portrait as evidence that he has voted and as a

NO BRITISH COURT PRESENTATIONS FOR VISITING AMERICANS

Kennedy to Limit Lists to Families of Officials or Those Domiciled in England.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, closed the doors of the Court of St. James today to American women who are merely visiting in London.

He wrote Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Rep.), Massachusetts, that he considered "undemocratic" the practice of American Ambassadors in selecting every year a "small number of young ladies from a long list, very few, if any, of whom he has ever seen."

Accordingly, Kennedy said he had concluded to confine presentations to the families of American officials in England and to members of American families who are domiciled in England.

Lodge had written Kennedy concerning the presentation application of a young woman from Massachusetts. Kennedy said he regretted he could not meet the request.

Lodge made public a letter to Kennedy indorsing the Ambassador's stand.

"I think this is a good decision and that you have adopted a truly democratic policy," the Senator said.

Kennedy told Lodge the British court was ready as always to receive as many American ladies as in the past. He said the Embassy for many years had presented between 20 and 30 annually. The average, he added, had been "twice as great as the number of ladies presented by all the other diplomatic missions together."

Every year, Kennedy said, the Ambassador is faced with the "distasteful" job of selection.

GALE-SCARRED U. S. WAR FLEET STEAMS INTO HAWAII HARBOR

First Phase of Maneuvers Shows Up Certain Soft Spots in Pacific Defenses.

HONOLULU, April 9. — After weathering a gale which smashed motorboats, carried away lifeboats and twisted steel deck fittings, warships of the United States fleet entered Pearl Harbor yesterday, ending the first seven phases of their annual maneuvers.

Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander-in-chief, said 57-knot winds kept the quarterdeck of the battleship Pennsylvania awash with seas for three days in an area several hundred miles northwest of Honolulu. The storm preceded a simulated attack on Oahu Island.

Bloch said the attack disclosed certain unspecified deficiencies in Hawaiian defenses, but the problem had shown the Hawaiian area was well organized and may be depended on to make the most efficient use of the personnel and equipment available.

ROOSEVELT MAY STUMP COUNTRY FOR HIS PROGRAM

In Letter He Commends Fight for Reorganization Bill and Urges No Recrimination.

DEFEAT SLOWS UP HIS PLANS

Administration Leaders Apparently Hopeless of Regaining Control of This Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — An upsurge of opposition appeared tonight to have forced Roosevelt Administration leaders to abandon hope of regaining control of the Seventy-fifth Congress. Instead, they looked for a fairly quick adjournment, to be followed by a nation-wide struggle between the President and his critics in the 1938 political campaigns. It was considered certain that the President would carry the fight for his policies to the voters, perhaps in a stumping tour.

Mr. Roosevelt's first official reaction to the blow the House dealt his program by defeat of the reorganization bill last night was a letter declaring there should be no "personal recrimination" over the bitter fight.

Roosevelt's Letter.

He sent the following letter to Majority Leader Sam Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, one of the leaders of the unsuccessful struggle to put the reorganization bill through:

'Dear Sam': Thanks for the fine fight. Will you also thank the Speaker and the others. The reorganization bill is intended to simplify and improve the public service. With this single objective in view, I have given it my earnest approval.

"The question presented is solely one of policy. Therefore, the legislative developments of yesterday offer no occasion for personal recrimination and there should be none."

Interpreting the Note.

It was thought by some observers that the last paragraph was an effort to avert any widening of the breach in the Democratic party. It was recalled that in the vote of 204 to 196, by which the House sent the reorganization bill back to committee, many ordinarily faithful New Dealers joined the opposition.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the reorganization bill in the present tense, indicating perhaps an intention to try to revive it at a later date. There was no sign in Congress, however, of any move to bring the bill back for debate this year.

Moreover, there was a widespread opinion that chances of 1938 action on the wage-hour bill, a key item on the Roosevelt program, had virtually vanished. Chairman Ramspeck (Dem.), Georgia, of the House Labor Subcommittee, which revised the wage-hour bill after it was recommitted by the House last December, said the defeat of the reorganization bill would "militate against the wage-hour bill at this session."

Ramspeck added that the House definitely indicated it did not want to consider controversial matters on the eve of campaigns for reelection. However, he said the reorganization and wage-hour issues were not parallel, and that there was much organized support for the latter measure.

Slows Up Roosevelt Program.

Senator Hatch (Dem.), New Mexico, who voted for the reorganization bill, said the effects of its defeat had been "greatly magnified" but added that much of the Roosevelt program would be slowed up.

"The action of the House," he said, "may tend to slow up steps toward so-called reform, but it will have no effect on efforts to promote and carry on its general recovery program."

There was a feeling that, after final action on a few measures, like the tax revision bill next year's relief appropriation and possibly a new public works program, Congress would adjourn. The Senate has revised the tax bill in a manner highly displeasing to the administration, and Congress has yet to receive the other two measures.

Speaker Bankhead repeated his hope Congress would be able to wind up its tasks and go home by May 15.

Opponents of the reorganization bill declared that a step toward dictatorship was averted by last night's vote. Against their contentions that the Administration had exerted improper pressure in favor of the measure, New Dealers contended the House vote was "a victory for lobbyists and propagandists."

DEWEY SUGGESTS WHITNEY RECEIVE 'PUNITIVE' TERM

Broker May Get Sentence Up to 10 Years on Pleas of Guilty to Two Larceny Charges.

PENALTY TO BE FIXED TOMORROW

Defendant Said to Have Refused $800,000 Rescue Offer of Lehman Bros. as Too Late.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Apparently no obstacle remains to the sentencing of Richard Whitney on Monday morning by Judge Owen W. Bohan of the Court of General Sessions, on two pleas of guilty of grand larceny in the first degree. The Securities and Exchange Commission finished with Whitney as a witness yesterday, and neither District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey nor State Attorney-General John J. Bennett Jr. is expected to ask for further postponement. Whitney's counsel, former United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, has said: "We shall not ask for a single second's delay."

It is in Judge Bohan's discretion to impose a penalty ranging from a suspended sentence to 10 years in prison on each of the two convictions.

Dewey Ask for Punitive Sentence.

In a statement presented to Judge Bohan this morning, Dewey recommended "a substantial and punitive sentence," in view of the fact that Whitney, "with full knowledge of the consequences, embarked on a deliberate course of criminal conduct covering a period of six years."

Gossip about the District Attorney's office is that "a substantial and punitive sentence" would be from five to eight years in Sing Sing on each charge, the terms to run concurrently.

Together with Dewey's summary of the case, Judge Bohan will have before him a psychiatrist's report on Whitney's mental state, which is expected to stress the factor of an "exaggerated ego," and a biography of the defendant compiled by the Probation Bureau.

The case is regarded as unusual in that Whitney is to be sentenced at the same time under indictments obtained by two rival officials, both of whom have been prominently mentioned as candidates in the New York election for Governor next fall. They are Dewey, nationally known vice crusader, who is a Republican, and Bennett, a Democrat.

The Two Charges.

Dewey's indictment charges Whitney with having unlawfully converted to his own use securities belonging to the estate of his father-in-law, the late George R. Sheldon. One of the beneficiaries under a trust set up by his will was Whitney's wife, Mrs. Gertrude Sheldon Whitney. Bennett's indictment alleges that Whitney without authorization hypothecated securities owned by the New York Yacht Club, of which he was treasurer.

Dewey is generally adjudged a victor over Bennett in the race for honors in the Whitney case. It is true that the New York Stock Exchange chose to place its evidence before Bennett instead of Dewey, and that the Attorney-General held the earliest public hearings. But Dewey has to his credit Whitney's first indictment, arrest and conviction.

What the Gossips Say.

On the other hand, widespread gossip that Whitney pleaded guilty "so as to take the rap" for persons or firms higher up is based principally on the fact that Dewey's indictment was based on the weakest of all the possible charges that might have been brought. Many lawyers hold that the broker could successfully have resisted this charge. Mrs. Whitney, it is agreed, would eagerly have testified that she gave her consent to his pledging of the Sheldon securities. That would not have been a legal defense, but it would have been a human one, which no jury would disregard. Bennett's Yacht Club case, however, is regarded as air tight.

Rescue Offer Rejected.

From confidential sources, the writer learns that a rescue party in Whitney's behalf was organized at the last moment by Lehman Bros., investment bankers, of which Gov. Lehman of New York is a partner. This house, it is said, offered to lend Whitney $400,000, and to obtain $400,000 more from other bankers. A few days earlier, $800,000 would have enabled Whit-

MAN IN HOUSE FIGHTS POSSE; TWO KILLED

Fugitive and Deputy Shot at Richmond, Mo.— Tried to Beat Housekeeper.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Mo., April 9. — A two-hour gun fight between W. E. Lowrance, 59 years old, a gunsmith, and a posse of 18 armed men ended tonight with the barricaded defender and one deputy sheriff dead. Lowrance stood off 12 peace officers and six civilians armed with shotguns, pistols, and one machine gun after he had fatally wounded Deputy Sheriff Odus Sisk, 44, and stepped back into the cover of his four-room home.

Lowrance outmaneuvered for a time a tear-gas attack but fell fatally wounded from a shot fired through a window by Night Marshal John Denton.

The siege, ended only after help was rushed here by highway patrolmen and officers from Lexington and Excelsior Springs, started, officers said, when Lowrance resisted efforts to serve him with a warrant charging that he attempted to beat his housekeeper.

Blocks Rescue of Deputy.

Police Chief Charles Armour, who went with Sheriff Wilbur J. Perdue and Sisk to serve the warrant, said Lowrance fired a shotgun, hitting the deputy in the abdomen, after a brief argument at the door. Armour said he fired through the door as Lowrance slammed it but he and the Sheriff fled from the porch under the gunsmith's return fire.

Neighbors summoned other officers, who surrounded the house, using automobiles as cover. The local officers and their first outside aid kept up a running fire at all sides of the house, but made no attempt to rush it. With doors and windows covered, Lowrance showed himself only occasionally, but fired with his shotgun and a pistol.

Then tear gas arrived from Excelsior Springs and was fired into the house and the posse awaited Lowrance's exit. He apparently lay, breathing fresh air, on a partially covered back porch.

Finally, two groups of officers massed for attacks from the front and rear, and Lowrance appeared on the porch. He staggered into the house and into line of Marshal Denton's vision. Denton fired. Lowrance fell, and died a few moments after officers entered his house.

Lowrance lived in the house with his housekeeper, Mrs. Gayles Parks, and her 11-year-old daughter. She had told Prosecuting Attorney Arthur W. Rogers that Lowrance came home this afternoon, had been drinking and was argumentative. He beat her, Mrs. Parks said.

FRENCH ARREST FIVE AS GERMAN SPIES

Charged With Selling Secrets of Fortifications on Maginot Line.

By the Associated Press.

STRASBOURG, France, April 9. —French counter-espionage agents today arrested two soldiers, two contractors and an engineer on charges of selling to Germany plans of fortifications under construction for the French Army.

Military authorities declined to give details or identify the fortifications, although they presumably were within the powerful Maginot Line frontier area.

The Maginot Line, rated by military experts as the greatest line of fortifications of all time, extends from the Belgian Ardennes to the Swiss Alps along the French-German frontier.

The two contractors, Jean Nus and his son, Paul Nus, were arrested as they returned from Germany. The names of the others were not disclosed.

The military chief of a sector of the fortifications was notified recently that a Colonel and a Major were being sent to inspect a new fort.

Two men uniformed as a Colonel and a Major arrived and showed their papers. They made a complete inspection and departed an hour before the real officers arrived.

The two soldiers under arrest were accussed of posing as the Colonel and Major.

CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES WILL BE 76 YEARS OLD TOMORROW

Apparently in Excellent Health and Will Spend Part of Day at Court Session.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme Court, will be 76 years old on Monday. He is apparently in excellent health and has not missed a day because of illness since appointed Chief Justice in 1930 by President Hoover.

He said last May 20 that he had "no intention whatever of retiring," and there is no present indication of any plan to leave the court. He said years ago that 75 could more easily be defended as an age for compulsory retirement than 70, but pointed to Oliver Wendell Holmes, who remained on the bench until he was 91.

The Chief Justice expects to spend part of his birthday attending a court session on Monday to deliver any opinions that may be ready and to announce whether a number of appeals will be granted or denied. The remainder of the day probably will be devoted to work on Supreme Court business.

SENATE TAX BILL PASSED WITH LEVY ON U.S. BONDS

Amended to Cover Future Federal Issues by Vote of 34-33—Flat Rate Substituted for Undivided Profits Schedule.

GOES TO CONFERENCE WITH HOUSE NEXT

Broadening of Base to Take in Million More Income Tax Payers and Farm Processing Levies Proposal Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Senate passed late today a tax revision bill designed to produce five billion dollars a year, and the measure will now go to a joint conference committee, which will try to adjust differences between its provisions and those of the far-different bill passed by the House. Passage was by voice vote, without an audible "No."

Shorn from the measure, in an announced effort to encourage business, was the administration's tax on undistributed profits, and the capital gains tax was sharply modified.

A surprise 34-to-33 vote late in the day inserted in the bill a proposal by Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, to make interest on future issues of Government securities subject to Federal income taxes. This interest now is exempt.

The Borah proposal was opposed by Finance Committee Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, and Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration leader. Removal of the tax exemption, Barkley contended, would bring no net revenue to the Government, because higher interest would have to be paid on Federal issues.

An amendment proposed by Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, designed to permit Federal taxation of state and local government securities, was rejected.

Profits and Capital Gains.

As passed by the House, the tax measure imposed rates ranging from 16 to 20 per cent on the income of corporations with more than $25,000 annual income. The Senate committee substituted a flat 18 per cent rate on corporation income. Under both House and Senate measures, special treatment is provided to reduce the tax payments of corporations with income of $25,000 and less.

The Senate also ripped out the House-approved capital gains tax, under which taxpayers would include varying percentages of long term capital gains in their ordinary income to be taxed at applicable normal and surtax rates. The House bill provides that the percentages to be included would depend upon the length of time taxpayers had held assets on which gains were realized. The taxpayer would have the option, however, of paying a flat 40 per cent on long-term gains.

Under the Senate bill, a flat 15 per cent rate would be imposed on long-term capital gains, but a taxpayer would have the option of including 50 per cent of his gains in his ordinary income and paying regular income tax rates.

Both House and Senate measures provide for including all short-term capital gains in ordinary income for taxation purposes. The House bill defines short-term gains as those realized within not more than 13 months, while the Senate bill defines them as gains realized on assets held not more than 18 months.

The House bill would permit a carry-over of one year on capital losses. The Senate plan would permit such a carry-over on short-term losses, and would permit deduction of portions of long-term losses from ordinary income taxes.

La Follette Proposals Beaten.

The Senate rejected the proposals of Senator La Follette (Prog.), Wisconsin, to broaden the income tax base and increase surtax rates on individual incomes. The base broadening proposal, which would have cut exemptions from $2500 to $2000 for married persons and from $1000 to $800 for single individuals, was killed on an oral vote. The tally against higher surtaxes was 44 to 33.

La Follette argued that his proposal to lower exemptions would not "soak the poor" but would preserve the country's credit and protect the poor against "uncontrolled inflation." He estimated a broadened base would bring in 1,400,000 new taxpayers and yield $60,400,-

DALADIER TO SEAT 'STRONG CABINET' TODAY AT NOON

Tells Socialists He'll Ask for Decree Powers to Meet Financial and Economic Problems.

HE OFFERS THEM FIVE PORTFOLIOS

Blum's Adherents Expected to Reject Posts but Back Program, Which Calls for Internal Loan.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 9.—Radical-Socialist Premier-designate Edouard Daladier met threats of disorder and increased strikes today with a blunt warning that a "strong government" would begin to rule tomorrow.

Socialist leaders, after a long talk with him, told deputies he planned to demand full decree powers in the economic and financial field for a period of six months.

Vincent Auriol, Socialist Minister of Co-ordination Services of the Premier's office in the fallen ministry of Socialist Leon Blum, said Daladier planned to meet the financial crisis with an internal loan and would seek more money abroad if necessary.

Daladier offered the Socialists five portfolios in his Cabinet, Auriol said, but observers thought it likely the Socialists would reject participation in the Government although they might support it in Parliament. They planned to discuss their stand tonight.

Daladier, Minister of National Defense and War since June, 1936, let it be known that he was ready to take the new Cabinet to the Elysee Palace at noon tomorrow, with or without Socialist support.

To Seek Decree Powers.

He will ask Parliament later to give him decree powers for six months.

Many Frenchmen voiced confidence that the man who won the confidence of France's armed forces and made a dramatic comeback since February, 1934, when riots wrecked his last Government, would be capable of keeping order.

His immediate problem tomorrow will be to enforce the bar on Leftist demonstrations in Park and get 60,000 strikers back to work before their movement spreads.

Workers of the "Red Ring" of the Capital's Socialist and Communist districts were called by their leaders to march on the boulevards tomorrow.

The demonstration was to be a mass protest against "the old men of the Senate" who won their bitter duel with Socialist Blum and wrecked his Government yesterday.

Paris police barred the scheduled demonstration and troops were held ready to aid the police and Mobile Guards to enforce order if reinforcements became necessary.

Though the Senate's refusal to give Blum decree powers wrecked two Socialist governments, observers said they believed that if Daladier's Cabinet should be as strong as he has indicated it would be, he would have no trouble in getting such powers for himself.

So armed, the Radical-Socialist would be ready to tackle the main problems besetting France.

The most difficult of these are:

1. To find money for a depleted treasury and a giant arms program without wrecking the franc.

2. To rebuild the nation's shattered enonomy and end sporadic strike movements.

3. To strengthen France's alliances in face of a greater Germany, which will ballot tomorrow on the union of Germany and Austria.

Candidates for Cabinet.

The outstanding candidates for Cabinet posts, listed on the basis that Socialist participation was unlikely, included:

Ministers of State, Camille Chautempts, Radical-Socialist, who headed the two Cabinets immediately preceding Blum's second ministry, and Albert Sarraut, a former Premier, who was Minister of State in the last Cabinet.

War, Marshal Henri Petain, who was Minister of War in 1934. Leftists, however, said such an appointment would be "too militaristic" for peace-time France.

Air, Guy La Chambre, who held the same post in Blum's ministry.

Navy, Cesar Campinchi who was Navy Minister in the last Cabinet.

Foreign Affairs, Joseph Paul-Boncour again, or Georges Bennet, former Ambassador to Washington.

Finance, Paul Reynaud, Centrist party leader.

Armaments, Georges Mandel, an Independent Republican.

Daladier was expected to keep the post of Defense Minister for himself.

000 annually. He said his surtax proposal would raise $214,000,000 additional revenue.

The broader base plan was opposed by Borah and Senator Norris (Ind.), Nebraska, the latter arguing that "there is no justice in passing the hat among the poor people and making them contribute one, two, three or four dollars in order to raise about $60,000,000 a year."

Processing Tax Rejected.

Earlier, the Senate killed, 53 to 24, a proposal by Senator Pope (Dem.), Idaho, to raise $212,000,000 annually for additional farm benefits through the imposition of processing taxes on field corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and synthetic fibers. Pope and Senator Connally (Dem.), Texas, argued that this revenue should be added to the $500,000,000 now available for farm benefits, else agricultural purchasing power would fall far below that of industrial workers.

Harrison, opposing the proposal, contended it should be considered as a separate measure. Barkley also opposed action at this time.

After the vote on the processing taxes, Pope made public a telegram in which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said he was "thoroughly in favor" of the "principle" of the tax. Wallace gave warning that farmers would be in "serious difficulties" unless funds were obtained to make parity payments. Pope said the telegram arrived about a half hour after the vote on his amendment.

Sponsors on Final Bill.

Some sponsors of the Senate tax bill said they thought the House action in pigeonholing the Government reorganization measure had strengthened chances for enactment of the Senate tax provisions. Administration leaders in the Senate predicted, however, that the finally-enacted tax measure would carry some form of undistributed profits tax.

Telegraph company officials said today that more than $150,000 was spent in the last two weeks on messages to Congress concerning the Government reorganization bill. Most of the communications opposed the bill. Approximately 333,000 messages were received in Washington, and tolls averaged perhaps 50 cents each. The flood of messages reached its height March 27-28, after Father Charles E. Coughlin assailed the bill in a radio speech.

Chairman O'Connor (Dem.), New York, of the House Rules Committee received many telegrams and letters today praising his leadership of the fight against the reorganization bill and indorsing him for the governorship of New York or for the Senate.

Here is the vote by which the Senate wrote into the bill the proposal to make interest from future Federal security issues subject to Federal income taxes:

FRENCH TROOPS STOP TUNIS RIOTS; 13 KILLED

State of Siege Declared When Nationalists Begin Disorders.

By the Associated Press.

TUNIS, Tunisia, April 10.—(Sunday.)—Riots touched off by demonstrating nationalists were put down early today by French troops operating under a state of seige proclaimed in this capital of French-governed Tunisia.

Twelve demonstrators and one policeman were reported killed in the day-long disorders. Many persons were wounded.

Military authorities took complete charge of the city and set up patrols to prevent a recurrence of the outbreak.

At the height of the rioting the Bey of Tunis, Sidi Ahmed, issued the proclamation placing the city under a state of seige in a drastic move to restore order.

Rioting followed a proclamation by Neodestours leaders that their followers would seize control of civil and military prisons unless a recently-arrested Neodestours chief named Belhouane, was released.

(Reports reaching France through a strict military censorship late tonight said the rioting started in the afternoon and continued into the night.)

Mobs of Nationalists turned over busses in the streets and burned them. Troop reserves were rushed to Tunis from other parts of the French protectorate in Africa. Notices were posted prohibiting the carrying of arms of any kind.

HITLER CALLS ANSCHLUSS 'WILL OF GOD' URGING YES VOTE TODAY

souvenir of his participation in the event.

For a few Austrians, it will be the third time they have voted for anschluss. Members of the National Assembly of the post-war Austrian republic, in the autumn of 1918, adopted a Constitution containing the declaration:

"German Austria is a constituent part of the German Reich."

This was vetoed by the World War victors who demanded inclusion of Article 88 in the Treaty of St. Germain which asserted Austria's independence.

In 1921, the Tyrol and other provinces held a plebiscite resulting in overwhelming majorities for anschluss but allied diplomatic pressure compelled the Austrian Parliament to abandon plans for nationwide plebiscite.

Pressure All for Anschluss.

Tomorrow the pressure all will be in the other direction.

While it will be almost impossible to estimate how many "Yes" votes will be cast as a result of the high-pressure campaign, it is safe to say that millions will vote "Yes" more enthusiastically than in any previous plebiscite.

To the Nazis it is a chance personally to approve Hitler's destruction of two treaties of "enslavement"—the Treaty of Versailles and the Treaty of St. Germain.

It is their opportunity to indorse Hitler's creation of a Germany greater territorially in Europe than was the Germany of 1914—in other words his reversal of the World War defeat.

Those who are military minded —and most Nazis are—see also in the anschluss a tremendous southeastward thrust of Hitler's armed might which now incloses the richest part of Czechoslovakia like the jaws of a steel trap.

Hitler's Speech.

In his speech here today Hitler disclaimed any responsibility for the troubles of pre-Nazi Germany, "because I was not a politician, parliamentarian or newspaper man." He continued:

"I was a nameless unknown soldier when I decided to enter public affairs.

"Then the German people were down and out. It became clear to me that German and Austrian leaders would not be able to recover from the war misery."

He declared Germany's post-war political parties battled one another while proletarian groups looked toward Geneva and Moscow.

"The armistice, the treaties and agreements with Germany were a great extortion," he told his cheering partisans.

"It was my conviction that every nation must help itself.

"I ask my critics to acknowledge what I have accomplished in 19 years."

"You, my former foes and critics,' he said, speaking to invisible opponents, "you muzzled me, you imprisoned me, but I never capitulated while you had the power. Now I have the power and do you think for a minute that I will capitulate to a handful?"

"Kneel Before Almighty."

Detailing why his power was here to stay, Hitler listed five reasons: "First, this country and its people are German. Second, Austria could not remain independent—German sections if separated are powerless but if united they are strong. Third, the Austrian people did not want to remain separated from Germany. Fourth, this is my homeland. Do you wonder that I wanted to incorporate my homeland into the Reich? Fifth, I am staying here because I know and understand more than (former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg.

"I have proved I can do more than the dwarfs who were running this country into the ground. I don't know if anyone 100 years from now will know the names of these dwarfs. My name however will stand out forever as the son of this great country."

Germany tomorrow, he said, "shall approve" Austrian-German union.

"I am happy that I am alive on this day when Germany will show its will. Let every German kneel down tomorrow in thanks before the Almighty."

Germany, he said "has no other dictator than common sense. I am only its first executive."

As a step to encourage Austrian industry, a law was promulgated appropriating 150,000,000 marks ($60,000,000).

Hitler coughed frequently in the course of his address. At its conclusion, he left Vienna by special train, presumably for Berlin.

CHINESE REPORT GAIN AT TSINAN, SHANTUNG CAPITAL

Announce Fighting in Outskirts With Japanese Troops Who Are Holding the City.

By the Associated Press.

HANKOW, China, April 9.—Chinese dispatches from the Shantung front tonight said Chinese troops had closed in on Tsinan, Japanese-held capital of the province, and had reoccupied suburbs on three sides.

They reported street fighting with the Japanese in the western outskirts where a Chinese force was attempting to cut Japanese railway communications with Tsingtao, important seaport, and force the enemy to retreat across the Yellow River, a few miles to the north.

Japanese lost 6000 dead at Taierhchwang on Wednesday, they said, when Chinese won a victory along the Grand Canal.

Besides more than 1000 prisoners and many wounded, they said the Japanese lost 70 field pieces, 40 tanks, 70 armored cars and 100 trucks and automobiles.

An accurate estimate of Chinese losses was not available but it is admitted they were heavy.

Reports from Kaifeng, on the Yellow River in Honan Province, said trains daily were taking about 1000 of the Chinese wounded westward along the Lunghai railroad.

Disguised Chinese Battalion Slips Into Tsinan.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 10.—(Sunday). —Chinese declared today they had made a large scale assault on Tsinan, Japanese-held capital of Shantung province, carrying their new offensive to the very base of Japanese operations on the central front.

With the rout of Japanese forces at Taierchwang, on the Grand Canal northeast of Suchow, Chinese said Japanese supply lines in the Lunghai corridor had been cut.

Two thousand Chinese soldiers who posed as destitute coolies to filter through Japanese lines struck from behind. Inside walled Tsinan, Shantung Province capital, the disguised Battalion attacked Japanese defenders who fought to stem Chinese columns storming its gates from the outside. The disguised battalion filtered into Tsinan a few at a time for several days. Each carried a revolver and several grenades. When the zero hour came, they attacked near the east gate and occupied several strategic buildings.

Labor Board Holds Republic Steel Responsible for 3 Strike Killings

Decision Lays Shootings at Massillon, O., to Girdler Corporation and Cites 8 Wagner Act Violations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — The Labor Relations Board blamed the Republic Steel Corporation today for the death of three strikers last July 11 in a riot near the corporation's mill at Massillon, O.

Backing up the unsuccessful CIO strikers for the second time this week, the board decided that the Republic had violated the Wagner Labor Disputes Act on eight counts before and during the bitterly-fought strike.

On Wednesday, the board ordered the Inland Steel Corporation, another of the four "independent" companies involved in the "Little Steel" strike, to deal with the CIO's Steel Workers' Organizing Committee as representative of its Chicago production employes, and to sign a contract based on any agreement reached.

Orders Reinstatements.

After enumerating Republic's alleged Wagner Act violations, including responsibility for the Massillon killings, the board ordered the corporation:

(1) To reinstate approximately 5000 strikers, with backpay from April 8.

(2) To reinstate with backpay 27 employes the board said had been discharged because of union activity before the strike.

(3) To break up the employe representation plans at its five Ohio plants.

(4) To compensate Canton and Massillon employes for the time lost during a 15-day shutdown just before the strike.

(5) To stop all practices which would lead employes to think that they were not free to join the CIO or any other union.

Republic officials, at their Cleveland headquarters, refused to comment on the decision pending its receipt, but steel men predicted the corporation would test the decision in court.

Called Indictment of Girdler.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, said the decision was a "damning indictment" of Tom Girdler, Republic chairman.

The strike began last May 26 and petered out in mid-July although the CIO maintains it still is in effect. Republic, Inland, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. were involved and the strike zone reached from Johnstown, Pa., to Chicago.

The CIO called the walkout after the four companies said they would sign no contracts with the "irresponsible" John L. Lewis union.

Today's decision affected only Republic's Ohio plants at Cleveland, Youngstown, Warren, Canton and Massillon.

A committee from the Massillon employe representative plan started a "back-to-work movement" the day the strike started, the board said.

On June 9, the board said, Carl Myers, a company official, asked the Massillon Chief of Police and City Solicitor why they didn't use the same tactics the Chicago police had used in the Memorial day riot, and warned them the company might abandon the Massillon plant.

Later, the board said, Maj. Harry Curley, a company agent and a World War machine gunner, took charge of Massillon's special strike police, and led the attack on the strikers that cost three lives.

The company, the board said, furnished all the gas and gas equipment used in the attack.

In the charges the SWOC filed with the board against Republic and Bethlehem, however, the union did not claim to represent a majority of the employes. Therefore, the board, in the Republic case, did not order the company to deal with the union.

Dismissed as to Seven.

The board dismissed the union's plea for reinstatement of seven men who had pleaded guilty of using explosives and of malicious destruction of property during the strike. On the other hand, the board turned down the company's contention that other strikers who pleaded guilty to lesser offenses had disqualified themselves from re-employment.

"The company has committed or been responsible for acts of violence far more serious, notably the shooting at Massillon where, although no police were injured, three strikers were killed and an undetermined number injured by gunfire and gas fumes, where 165 were arrested without warrants, and 164 held in jail without charges against them," the board said in its 62,000-word decision.

"The record shows," said the board's digest of the decision, "that ever since the inauguration of the plan of employe representation in June, 1933, the company had made plain its policy of complete antagonism to the self-organization of its employes and its determination to forestall or destroy such organization by all means at its command.

"On July 2, 1936, shortly after the advent of the SWOC, the company reiterated this basic policy in a public statement, and immediately and ruthlessly put it into effect.

Says Company Caused Strike.

"From the facts produced at the hearings, the Board holds it clear that the underlying cause of the strike was the Company's whole campaign to crush the Union by means of unfair labor practices," said a Board digest of its decision.

"Its spies shadowed union organizers; its police attacked and beat them; its superintendents and foremen threatened, laid off and discharged employes for union activities.

"Its officers fostered and supported a whole series of puppet labor organizations which the company manipulated to oppose the union.

"Its chairman, Tom M. Girdler, publicly vilified the union's leaders, purposes and policies under circumstances intended to throw the weight of his influence against his employes' efforts at self-organization.

"The whole history of the company's unfair labor practice . . . had placed the Union in such a position where it had to fight for its life or be destroyed.

"The company, not the Union, had chosen the way of industrial strife."

Massillon Shooting.

The board recited in detail events leading up to the Massillon shooting of July 11.

"On June 9, at the suggestion of Glen Lanham of the Law and Order League, Police Chief Switter and City Solicitor Hardman drove to Canton to see Carl Myers, in charge of the district for Republic Steel," the board said.

"Myers immediately launched into an attack upon Chief Switter and city officials.

"'He wanted to know what the hell was going on over there; were we going to allow hoodlums to run things and why the hell we didn't take any action such as the Chicago police did and put them where they belong . . . They knew how to handle the situation, if we did not and if we didn't wake up, we wouldn't need a City Solicitor and we wouldn't even have a first-class postoffice; that Massillon would be a junction if that mill shut down."

COUNTERFEITING PRIEST GETS FIVE YEARS IN PRISON

Sophrony Balaban's Sentence Increased When Judge Collet Learns He Was Leader of Ring.

ANOTHER RECEIVES TWO-YEAR TERM

Also Fined $7000—Third, Who Has Been in Jail 5 Months, Given One More Day.

Sophrony Balaban, unfrocked priest of the Serbian Orthodox Church, was sentenced to five years in prison yesterday, completing the Government's successful prosecution of a gang of counterfeiters who manufactured bogus $20 bills here and in Pennsylvania. Five were sentenced here, and six at Pittsburgh.

A sentence of a year and a day in prison was at first imposed on Balaban by United States District Judge John Caskie Collet, but this was set aside and the five-year sentence ordered when the Judge learned, through a chance remark in an informal conversation, that Balaban had been a leader of the counterfeiters for 13 years. Throughout that period he was pastor of Holy Trinity Church, 1910 McNair avenue.

Sentenced with Balaban were John Majatich, a saloon keeper, and Michael J. Murray, a former policeman, both found guilty of conspiracy in the counterfeiting operations. Majatich's sentence was two years in prison and a fine of $7000. Murray, for whom the jury recommended leniency, was sentenced to a day in custody of the United States Marshal.

Balaban Pleaded Guilty.

Balaban, who pleaded guilty, was regarded by Secret Service agents as one of the gang's leaders, but in outlining the evidence to the Court yesterday, Assistant United States District Attorney Henry G. Morris did not mention that fact and Judge Collet gained the impression Balaban had but a minor part in the gang's operations.

He learned the extent of the former priest's participation when Leo Smugai, agent in charge of the Secret Service Bureau here, interrupted Judge Collet as he and the attorney for Majatich were conversing during a court recess. Judge Collet had spoken of Majatich as one of the ringleaders. "No, he wasn't," Smugai said, "but Balaban was."

After further discussion informally, Judge Collet reopened his court and Morris then repeated what had been said in the informal discussion, that Balaban had participated in the counterfeiting activities of leaders of this group since 1925, although he had never before been prosecuted.

Bills Made in Priest's Home.

Morris read from affidavits made by Nick Zrnety and Peter Klicovic, two members of the ring who were sentenced recently at Pittsburgh, that in 1925 the engraver for the gang, Mike Markalj, made counterfeits at Balaban's home, then at Eleventh street and Park avenue.

After Markalj had been deported in 1926, following his conviction in New York for counterfeiting, the affidavits said, Balaban conspired with others to get him back into this country illegally from Yugoslavia, and told the others of the "fine" workmanship of Markalj in engraving counterfeits.

The fact that Balaban carried a billfold with a concealed pocket for countrefeits also was mentioned by Morris for the first time in his recital.

In his original statement Morris had told the Court there was no doubt that Balaban was one of the members of the counterfeiting ring, which planned to dispose of 5000 bogus $20 bills. Balaban and three of the others hoped, after passing the bills, to return to Yugoslavia, it said.

Two letters which Balaban had written to Klicovic were read by Morris. They warned members of the ring in Pennsylvania that Secret Service agents were making an investigation here, and told of the progress being made in engraving the plates for the counterfeits. The messages were in code, but were decoded by Secret Service agents who obtained them from Klicovic.

Leniency Plea for Balaban.

Balaban's attorney, Dewey Godfrey, made a vigorous but unavailing protest against reopening of the case to impose the more severe sentence.

In a plea for leniency, Godfrey had told the court Balaban, 58 years old, suffered from paresis, and had but a few years to live. As when he entered his plea of guilty, Balaban appeared in court in a dark business suit, discarding the clerical attire he had worn at previous hearings. About 235 of his former parishioners were in court when he was sentenced.

The sentence, as revised, was five years in prison and a fine of $300 for possession and passing of counterfeit money, with a concurrent sentence of a year and a day on a conspiracy charge.

Majatich, convicted with Murray of conspiracy, was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $5000 on that charge, after which he pleaded guilty of possession and passing the bogus money. On the second charge he was sentenced to a concurrent two-year term and fined an additional $2000.

One Day More for Murray.

Murray, convicted of conspiracy, was originally sentenced to two years on that charge, and when he pleaded no-contest to the possession and passing charge, to a concurrent two-year sentence for that, but admitted to probation. He had been in jail for five months since his arrest, and Judge Collet took that into consideration in revising Murray's sentence to one day in custody of the Marshal.

The other members of the gang sentenced here were Robert Davis and Nick Bulyat, who pleaded guilty. Davis' sentence was five years, and that of Bulyat, six years.

In Pittsburgh the gang's engraver, Markalj, and Zrnety, one of the two who made affidavits about Balaban's long association with the gang, were sentenced to 15-year terms. Klicovic, the other affidavit-signer, was sentenced to five years, as were Anthony Zietz and Peter Janus.

At the time of the arrests last November the gang had its headquarters near Monaca, Pa. Previously its operations had centered in St. Louis. About 100 of the bogus $20 bills had been passed here and in other parts of the country before a raid on the Pennsylvania headquarters Nov. 3 in which 1500 of the bills were confiscated.

FIRST CLAIM MADE TO FORTUNE LEFT BY H. K. CAMPBELL

Mrs. Mary Kahmann of Kansas City Says, in Deposition, She Is First Cousin, Twice Removed.

Efforts to prove up claims of kinship to the late Hazlett Kyle Campbell, whose estate of more than $2,000,000 will go to those adjudged to be his relatives, began yesterday, when Mrs. Mary Anderson Kahmann of Kansas City gave her deposition in support of her claim.

In her deposition, which will be filed in Circuit Court, Mrs. Kahmann stated that she is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. Bettie Otey Anderson, who was a first cousin of Hazlett Campbell, on his mother's side. This would make Mrs. Kahmann a first cousin, twice removed, of Campbell.

She listed the nearest maternal relatives of the late invalid recluse as being, besides herself, her sister, Mrs. Otey Anderson Gibson of New York; Mrs. Rosalie Anderson McClellan of Memphis, Thomas Cary Anderson of Memphis, and Mrs. Eleanor Strickland of Athens, Ga.

The maternal relatives trace their descent from Mrs. Eleanor Kyle Otey, sister of Mrs. Virginia Kyle Campbell, the latter the wife of Robert Campbell, trapper, Indian fighter and builder of the Campbell fortune, and the mother of Hazlett and Hugh Campbell.

Trustee's Suit Names Relatives.

Mrs. Kahmann and the four whom she named as maternal relatives were all named in the suit filed in Circuit Court March 28, the day after Hazlett Campbell's death, by the St. Louis Union Trust Co., as trustee for the estate. The suit requested the court to set a time limit for presentation of claims, and named, as nominal defendants, the persons believed to have valid claims of kinship. The majority of these were on the paternal side, 33 such claimants being named. An order of court in this matter is being awaited.

Mrs. Kahmann's deposition will constitute her formal reply as a defendant in the trust company's suit. She also applied in Probate Court for letters of administration for the Hazlett Campbell estate, now in charge of Public Administrator Thomas R. Madden. Similar applications have been filed by Mrs. Margaret Campbell Johnson of Kansas City, who claims the status of a first cousin, once removed, on the paternal side; and by Mrs. Charlotte Calvin, living at the De Soto Hotel St. Louis, a claimant to kinship.

In the deposition, Mrs. Kahmann set forth that Hugh Campbell, elder brother of Hazlett Campbell, recognized Mrs. Eleanor Kyle Otey as his aunt, and Mrs. Bettie Otey Anderson, Mrs. Kahmann's grandmother, as his cousin, in his will, made in 1918, and in a will made by him in Paris in 1891. The deposition cited evidence of Mrs. Kahmann's descent from these recognized relatives.

Newspaper Clipping Is Evidence.

A newspaper clipping, from a St. Louis paper of October, 1896, telling of the death of Mrs. Eleanor Otey, and of her burial in the Campbell family lot in Bellefontaine Cemetery, was produced by Mrs. Kahmann. Mrs. Bettie Otey Anderson, Mrs. Kahmann's grandmother, also is buried in the Campbell lot, the witness said.

The deposition was taken in the law office of Nagel & Kirby, with Allen C. Orrick and Harry Kroeger of the law firm representing the St. Louis Union Trust Co. Otey McClellan, New York lawyer, son of Mrs. Rosalie Anderson McClellan, one of the maternal kinship claimants, appeared as attorney for Mrs. Kahmann. Lawyers representing the claimants on the paternal side also were present.

Hazlett Campbell, 80 years old and mentally incapacitated for a half-century, died March 27 in the old family home, 1508 Locust street, where servants had cared for him since the death of Hugh Campbell in 1931. Hugh Campbell left the bulk of his $1,200,000 estate to Yale University. His will is now being contested in the State Supreme Court, and if it should be broken, his estate would be added to that of Hazlett Campbell for division among the relatives.

The Hazlett Campbell estate consists of more than $1,850,000 of Government bonds, and several pieces of city and county realty.

FRESH MOUNDS FOUND IN HUNT FOR MISSING PETER LEVINE, 12

Boy Scouts' Leader Says They Are Too Small to Conceal a Body.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 9.—Discovery by a patrol of Boy Scouts of a fresh mound of earth in an abandoned picnic grove at nearby Rye caused a flurry of excitement today in the search for 12-year-old Peter Levine, missing since Feb. 24. Scout Commissioner Hollister said, however, it was doubtful if it would provide a clew to the missing boy's whereabouts, as it and another mound found a short distance away were too small to conceal a human body.

A "stolen" automobile found in the same vicinity was learned to belong to a Rye village official.

Police and Federal agents interested because the picnic grove was not far from a road designated by the writers of a $30,000 ransom note received by the missing boy's parents, planned to make a thorough search of the neighborhood.

Another Boy Scout patrol found a paper bag containing a toy typewriter similar to the one on which the ransom note was written, and a water pistol on the village dump at Bronxville. Police expressed doubt that the typewriter was the one used to write the ransom note.

FIVE SAVED FROM SHIP TORN APART BY EXPLOSION

Two Vessels Stand by the Mount Kyllene Off Azores; to Attempt Further Rescues.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9. — Mackay Radio tonight reported the rescue of five members of the crew of the Greek steamer Mount Kyllene, torn apart in an explosion in the Atlantic several hundred miles north of the Azores.

The steamship Inverlee radioed it took off five of the "six or sixteen" men aboard one section of the Mount Kyllene, before darkness forced suspension of the rescue work.

At the same time the steamship Athelfoan put out a boat to take off two others of the crew in the second part of the Mount Kyllene still afloat.

It was these men, Mackay Radio was advised, who sent out an S. O. S. with emergency radio equipment after the unexplained explosion.

The Inverlee radioed it would attempt to save the remainder of the crew at daybreak.

WOMAN BURNED USING OIL AND GASOLINE TO START FIRE

Miss Myrtle Thompson Seriously Injured; Employer Hurt Extinguishing Blaze.

Miss Myrtle Thompson was seriously burned last night when she poured a mixture of gasoline and oil into a coal stove at 610 Rutger street, where she is housekeeper. Her clothing caught fire.

Her employer, William Van Dyke, a contractor, said she poured the contents of a bucket into a heating stove to kindle a fire when they returned home from church. She was not aware, he said, that the gasoline had been added to the oil.

Van Dyke smothered the flaming clothing with a quilt. Miss Thompson, 33 years old, was taken to City Hospital for treatment of burns on the face, chest and back. Van Dyke was burned on the hands.

REST OF CLEVELAND WOMAN'S BODY SOUGHT

Police Drag River After Leg of 11th Victim of Mad Killer Is Found.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 9.—Cleveland's mysterious killer remained at liberty tonight as detectives grappled in the muddy Cuyahoga River for the latest of the heads, legs and torsos which for four years he has been depositing in desolate and usually watery graves.

The lower section of the eleventh victim's leg, cut off at knee and ankle, came to light yesterday. A W P A worker found it at the edge of the river in the shadow of the High Level bridge, only two blocks from Public Square.

Dragging the river in a sharp wind, the detectives hoped to find the head of the latest victim, which a dredger had reported seeing, and other parts of the body.

Coroner S. R. Gerber classified yesterday's find without hesitation as the calf of the eleventh victim's leg. Today he said he believed it was part of the body of a small woman between 25 and 30 years old.

Detective Peter Merylo, who has spent two years trying to find the maniac whose lust for killing first found expression in September, 1934, tried to connect the new victim with a bundle of woman's clothing found in the area frequented by the killer in January.

The clothing—a black chinchilla overcoat, a black hat, white stepins and white handkerchief—never has been claimed. Merylo said he was skeptical of the connection because of the three-month elapse between discovery of the clothing and of the latest victim.

Dr. Gerber said the last victim, the fifth woman to die under the killer's knife, died not earlier than Tuesday. The first victim also was a woman. Her torso was found on the shore of Lake Erie miles from the river.

Just two of the victims have been identified. Edward Andressey, once a hospital orderly, left his home one day in September, 1935. Police found his headless body a day later, in a weed-grown spot on the edge of Kingsbury Run, with the torso of a still unidentified man. The heads were buried a few feet away. The fourth victim also was a woman. She was Mrs. Florence Polilla, who once was arrested in a vice raid.

Detective Merylo and his partner, Martin Zalewski, believe they will find the lunatic killer's laboratory somewhere in the neighborhood of Kingsbury Run, which meanders among the railroad tracks on the city's edge in an area popular with transients.

N L R B FORD HEARING ENDS AFTER 90 DAYS

Examiner Refuses Continuance—Allows Two Weeks to File Briefs.

Denying a second request by the Ford Motor Co. for a two-week continuance of a National Labor Relations Board hearing, Trial Examiner Tilford E. Dudley formally closed the prolonged case. The hearing, which began Dec. 16, had been in session on 90 days.

Allowing all principals in the hearing two weeks in which to file briefs, Dudley said his intermediate report probably would be completed within three weeks. The company and the intervening Liberty Legion of America were allowed until Tuesday to make oral arguments, the examiner remarking that he expected to return to Washington Wednesday.

In a summary of testimony by Government witnesses, Gerhard Van Arkel, board's attorney, declared that it had been established that the Liberty Legion was fostered by the company. He urged disestablishment of the organization and recognition by the company of the C I O United Automobile Workers, and asserted that the company should be required to restore the jobs of 210 C I O union men named in the complaint.

After other attorneys participating in the hearing had made expressions of satisfaction, Daniel Bartlett, Ford attorney, said he would be guilty of "grossest hypocrisy" if he said the Ford Co. had had a fair trial.

LIQUOR LICENSE DENIED, TOO MANY BARS ALREADY IN AREA

Commissioner Acts on Statement There Are Nine Taverns in 5900 and 6000 Block on Delmar.

Excise Commissioner Lawrence McDaniel yesterday refused to issue a liquor license to Philip Hurster, who intended to open a place at 5910 Delmar boulevard, because he thought there already were too many taverns in the district.

Three tavern owners who opposed the application for a license pointed out that there were six others besides their own in the 5900 and 6000 blocks of Delmar.

"Ten couldn't make a living without cheating," McDaniel said in denying the application.

STARK ACTS TO MEET SALES TAX DECLINE

Requests State Department Heads to Hold Expenses to Minimum.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—State executive department heads were notified by Gov. Stark today that declining sales tax collections made it necessary that expenditures for the next three months be held to an "absolute minimum."

At the same time, State Auditor Forrest Smith attributed the falling off in revenue in part to the Governor's withholding of $115,000 for administering the law.

The Governor, in a letter drafted before he left for Arizona Thursday night, said sales tax receipts may drop $9,850,000 under the budget estimate for the 1937-38 biennium, owing to the business recession.

"The ordinary and necessary expenses of operating the respective departments under existing programs must continue, of course," he said, "but I request that any expenditures of an unusual nature be deferred until after July 1, at which time we may have more definite information as to the probable loss in revenue for the balance of the year."

Smith declared one reason for the decline in collections was the "indequate" field staff in the sales tax department under his jurisdiction. He said he should have 75 men instead of 46 checking up on delinquencies, and asserted also his office staff of about 80 persons was insufficient.

The Governor stated that sales tax budget estimates for the two years was $45,800,000, and only slightly in excess of $17,500,000 was collected in 1937, leaving $28,300,000 to be collected in 1938.

Early this year, he said, general business conditions made it necessary to reduce anticipated sales tax collections to $22,500,000 for 1938, but since collections for the first three months were more than $1,000,000 under expectations, only about $18,450,000 might be collected for the year.

Last month sales tax receipts totaled $1,432,834, the lowest since the 2 per cent levy went into effect last June. A year ago March receipts totaled $945,197 under the 1 per cent rate, but the rate base is now slightly smaller, and merchants under the new law are allowed a 3 per cent fee for making the collections.

Victim of U. of Tennessee Faculty Purge Under Dr. H. A. Morgan Hopes To Tell His Story at T V A Inquiry

Educator, If Called, Expected to Try to Show Superior Was 'Highhanded'—Dismissals 'Not in Spirit of Fair Play.'

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A willing witness who expects confidently to be summoned before the Congressional Joint Committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority is Dr. Jesse William Sprowls, professor of psychology at the University of Maryland. He was the initial victim of a faculty purge which took place at the University of Tennessee under the presidency of Harcourt A. Morgan, appointed chairman of the T V A after President Roosevelt had ousted Dr. Arthur E. Morgan from that position for alleged contumacy.

If called upon to testify, Prof. Sprouls will seek to show that in this incident Harcourt Morgan took a "highhanded" and "autocratic" course, including the dismissal of a professor because of his views on evolution and that, as chairman of the T V A, he may be expected to pursue methods not wholly dissimilar.

An entomologist by training and a Canadian by birth—he became an American citizen in 1919, when he was 52 years old—Dr. John Harcourt Alexander Morgan served as president of the University of Tennessee from 1919 to 1933, when he was appointed a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"Disturbance of 1923."

During his regime there occurred an event known at the university as "the disturbance of 1923," which was publicized throughout the country and led to an investigation by the American Association of College Professors. The verdict of their committee, as published in the organization's bulletin of April, 1924, was that certain proceedings alleged against the university's administrators were "not in accordance with the spirit of justice and fair play."

These proceedings revolved about the dismissal of seven members of the faculty—Dr. Sprowls, who was professor of secondary education; Mrs. A. M. Withers, assistant professor of art; John R. Neal, professor of law, who had served in the Tennessee House and Senate and once came within two votes of being elected United States Senator; Asa Arthur Schaeffer, professor of zoology, who is considered the foremost American expert on the biology of the amoeba; Robert S. Radford, professor of Latin and Roman archeology, an authority on Ovid an odne of the leading classical philogists of the United States; R. S. Ellis, professor of psychology and philosophy, later a faculty member at Princeton, and Maurice Mulvania, dean of the premedical course and associate professor of biology. The last had been in the service of the University of Tennessee for 17 years; Radford and Neal, 14 years each, the former being also a member of the administrative council; Schaeffer, 13 years; Ellis, three years, and Sprowls and Mrs. Withers, two years.

Early in April, 1923, Dean J. D. Hoskins of the university notified Sprowls and Mrs. Withers that they would not be recommended for reappointment. The formal charge against Dr. Sprowls was "inefficiency" in his field work; in addition to teaching, he was a sort of "emissary to keep the flow of high school graduates to the university undiminished." There was no reflection on his scholarship or success as a classroom instructor. Sprowls declared to the investigating committee that the charge of incapacity was only a pretext, and that he attributed his dismissal chiefly to his views on evolution. The committee's report narrates the following incident:

"At the beginning of the academic year 1923-24, the head of the department, having learned that Prof. Sprowls intended to use James Harvey Robinson's book, 'Mind in the Making,' as a text in a course of adolescent psychology, informed him that the book must not be used because of the radical doctrines which the author advocated therein, and particularly because of his views on evolution. Prof. Sprowls remonstrated with the head of the department, and states that he then and there offered his resignation.

Using the "Soft Pedal."

"The next day he went to see President Morgan about the matter, but the president told him, he says, that the book must not be used for the reason that Tennessee was threatened with legislation such as recently had been proposed in Kentucky, and that it was necessary to 'soft pedal' the teaching of evolution in the university in order to prevent the enactment of such a law by the Tennessee Legislature.

"Prof. Sprowls states that he expressed his indignation and thereupon offered his resignation. The president, however, laughed at the idea, told him he was one of the best professors in the university and suggested that he give some other course in place of the one dealing with evolution. The suggestion was adopted, a different course was given and the copies of Robinson's book which had been ordered by the local book store were returrned to the publisher."

Tennessee newspapers, according to a footnote in the report, declared that Prof. Sprowls had been dismissed for teaching evolution, and some local organizations went on record as indorsing President Morgan's action in "getting rid of this evolutionist." The note adds that "President Morgan is said to be an evolutionist himself, although, as Prof. Sprowls' friends have taken care to point out, he never did anything to correct the popular impressio nthat Prof. Sprowls was removed because of his views on evolution."

"Thoroughly Autocratic."

The announcement that Prof. Sprowls and Mrs. Withers would not be reappointed led to immediate counter-strokes. Prof. Radford called a meeting of nine professors in his classroom to "talk over and discuss the Sprowls case." As president of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, Dr. Schaeffer on April 5 wrote letters to officials of that organization denouncing "the thoroughly autocratic policy" of the administration, and requesting advice as to whether the local body should demand an investigation. A second letter from Prof. Schaeffer, of the same import, was signed by two of his colleagues, including Prof. Ellis.

The national publicity that resulted hardened the university's officers and trustees in their resolution to dismiss Sprowls and Mrs. Withers, and provoked them to mark for slaughter five others whom they ranked as ring-leaders in the disturbance. This action was decided upon at a meeting of the university deans on June 29, which Dean Mulvania was not invited to attend. A hearing was set before the Board of Trustees on July 17.

Complaint to Committee.

The accused scholars complained to the committee that they were not supplied with advance statements of the charges against them; that each was limited strictly to 20 minutes in which to defend himself; and that the trustees insisted on treating the cases en bloc and voting on all of them together, despite wide differences of alleged culpability. The verdict against the ffenders lacked two ballots of being unanimous but these were cast by Austin Peay, Governor of Tennessee, and Bolton Smith, a Memphis banker, who became later a trustee of the Brookings Institute.

Smith went so far as to address a letter to President Morgan stating that he and several other members of the board were convinced Prof. Radford was not guilty of disloyalty and expressing a hope that he might be continued as a member of the faculty. "The letter," states the report, "does not appear to have made any impression on President Morgan; at least the suggestion was not adopted."

Middle of Summer.

"The most regrettable feature of the proceedings," continues the report, "was dropping the professors in the middle of the summer vacation, when some of them, like Prof. Schaeffer, had left the country and could not be heard in their own defense. Prof. Sprowls and Mrs. Withers were the only ones to receive notice before the close of the year that they would not be retained. As to the others, it was almost an act of 'cruelty,' as one of the graduates characterized it, to dismiss them more than a month after the close of the school year, when they had every reason to suppose they would be back at their posts at the beginning of the next academic year. At this season of the year it was difficult and even impossible for some of them to find new positions for the next year."

Prof. Schaeffer was accused of habitually overdrawing his departmental accounts and neglecting to mark absences of students from his classes—both of which he denied.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES IN MOVERS' STRIKE

Union and Furniture Van Operators Vote to Maintain Their Positions.

The strike of union furniture movers, called April 1 in resistance to a wage cut, remained unchanged following special meetings yesterday at which each side decided to maintain its position.

Less than half the 400 strikers, members of the A. F. of L. Furniture, Piano Movers & Helpers' Local 751, met at Unity Hall and voted 177 to 8 to continue the strike, which has interrupted the spring moving program.

John Lampe, business agent of the union, said another meeting of the membership would be held at Unity Hall this afternoon, but no change was expected in the union stand unless employers withdraw their demand for a wage cut of 12½ cents an hour, to 75 cents for drivers and packers and 70 cents for helpers. The 12½ cents represents a compromise increase obtained by the union after a strike a year ago.

Members of the St. Louis Van Owners' Association, employers of a majority of the union men, voted at their meeting to stand fast in their demand for the cut, which they contend is necessary to prevent an increase in prices. Their decision will be reported to the union men this afternoon. Van owners have stated they were unable to make any money under the old wage contract. A price adjustment, which in some instances will represent a decrease, is being worked out, it was announced.

Both local and long-distance moving has been tied up by the strike. A few independent movers operated last week under police escort and several clashes between union and non-union men occurred. One result of the strike has been to increase the membership of the Van Owners' Association from 80 to 110 firms.

OUSTED EDUCATOR WILLING WITNESS FOR T V A INQUIRY

He said that he remonstrated with President Morgan against Sprowls' dismissal, but found the president "immovable." At this conference, says the report, Schaeffer denied he was out of harmony with the administration except with regard to the treatment of Prof. Sprowls, which, he added, had created an unfavorable impression throughout the country. Morgan was quoted as replying that "he did not care what people outside the State thought of the administration, and that, if any member of the faculty was not satisfied with the handling of the Sprowls case, he had the privilege of leaving."

Criticised as Erratic.

Radford, it was proved, after calling the meeting of nine colleagues referred to above, sought an explanation from Dean Hoskins as to Prof. Sprowls' dismissal, and thereupon dropped the matter entirely. He attended no other meetings, signed no petition for an investigation and gave no statements to newspapers. But he was accused and convicted of "erratic and injudicious" behavior. President Morgan, according to the report, "criticised as 'imprudent' a statement made by him (Radford) to someone at his boarding house that Eugene V. Debs ought to be pardoned." Th committee continued that President Morgan once reprimanded Radford because, at a political meeting, when a motion was made to indorse President Wilson's administration, Radford proposed an amendment excepting the treaty of Versailles.

Dean Mulvania did not attend Radford's meeting or sign Schaeffer's petition, but wrote a letter to President Morgan suggesting that a code be adopted to redress long-standing grievances of faculty and students. "It is quite evident," concludes the report, "that Prof. Mulvania was dismissed mainly, if not solely, for his initiative in endeavoring to bring about certain reforms in the organization of the university."

"The authorities of the University of Tennessee," summarized the committee, "do not appear to have considered whether some disciplinary measure short of summary dismissal would not have been a sufficient punishment in the cases of certain of the accused professors, or whether it would not have been possible to continue for another year, either as active professors or as professors on leave, those whom they were determined to get rid of. Apparently there was little feeling on he part of the trustees and administrative officers that any injustice was being done by dropping them in the middle of the summer. We do not deny that in several of the cases there may have been justifiable reasons for discontinuing the accused professors as members of the faculty; but we think the manner in which they were dismissed was not in accordance with the spirit of justice and fair play."

DR. FREDERICK W. BRODERICK.

ENGLISH DOCTOR GIVES THEORY OF DISEASE

Thinks All Ailments Due to Changes in Blood Colloids.

The revolutionary theory of the essential nature of disease and application of electronic physics in its treatment which Dr. Frederick W. Broderick, English dental surgeon and physician will describe in a series of 16 lectures at the Washington University School of Dentistry beginning tomorrow, was outlined by the scientist to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

The nub of the theory is that all diseases are fundamentally due to changes in the blood colloids, and that all effective treatment must be brought about by regulating or controlling these disturbances; that drugs and other methods of treatment act through the passage of positively or negatively charged atoms which break down or build up altered colloidal particles and thus return them to normal.

Seeking Origins of Disease.

"We contend," Dr. Broderick said, "that medicine has made a mistake in attempting to differentiate hundreds of different diseases. What are usually called diseases are really consequences of some few fundamental changes in the chemistry of the body. Thus, the fundamental changes are the real diseases. The others are the symptoms. This is an attempt to get back to the origins of disease. It is found these are few in number although the consequences may be many and diverse."

Because lesions in the mouth do not spontaneously heal, and they are visible to the medical man, chemical and physical deviation from the normal can be readily observed in the mouth and diagnosed, in many cases, before symptoms have appeared elsewhere in the body, and preventive measures taken, he explained. In other words, dental decay and pyorrhea might be the end-points or symptoms of a basic organic disease which might not have shown itself, he asserted. That is where Dr. Broderick's research as a dental surgeon led him into study of the pathology of all diseases, and convinced him that inspection of the mouth was the most important element in a medical examination.

What Colloids Are.

Blood colloids are infinitesimal solids suspendedin the blood stream. The constituents of all living cells, whether in vegetation or in mammals, appear in the colloidal state. The cell membranes, the protoplasm (the essential substance of the cell) and the nuclei of the cells are all colloidal, as are the fluids of plant life and animals. In his textbook, "Dental Medicine," Dr. Broderick classifies the colloidal state as the very basis of life.

Colloids, Dr. Broderick explained yesterday, are larger than molecules, but are so small they will remain indefinitely suspended, and because of their minuteness have certain chemical-physical properties which permit life. Their size has been fixed quite arbitrarily as between one-ten-thousandth and one-millionth of a millimeter. Smaller than that limit, they become "in solution" as molecules, as a lump of sugar becomes molecular when it dissolves completely in water. Larger than that limit, the cells "precipitate;" that is, they are heavy enough to fall, as sand is heavy enough to fall to the bottom of a bucket of water. In either case, they die, and the cells they constitute are destroyed. In its proper size, the colloid is so small that it will not drop in 500 years or more, therefore for all practical purposes is suspended.

Getting a Look at Colloids.

These colloids are invisible under the highest-powered microscope. But they are visible under the ultra-microscope, and this will be demonstrated in the lecture with moving pictures. The ultra-microscope makes them visible by shooting a beam of light into a dark background. They are seen in the same way that dust is apparently seen floating about in a beam of sunlight shot into a dark room. The dust is too minute to be really visible, but what is seen is the reflection of the images of the dust particles, enormously magnified.

Simply stated, Dr. Broderick's theory is that real disease constitutes changes in the size of the colloidal particles. And in the same bare manner of explanation, drugs in which positively charged atoms predominate build up these colloidal particles, and negatively charged atoms break down enlarged colloids and disperse them in a normal state. What Dr. Broderick called a "beautiful" illustration of opposites in condition of colloids is in the difference between dental decay and pyorrhea. In decay, the colloids are smaller than normal, in pyorrhea, larger than normal.

One of the points stressed by Dr. Broderick is the tendency of medicine to regard bad teeth as causes of bodily ailments, such as rheumatism, asthma, or arthritis, when, according to his theories both are merely symptoms of the same disease. Especially in arthritis have teeth been needlessly sacrificed, he asserts; medical men, seeking to remove the cause, merely removed a symptom.

In the notes for his concluding lecture, Dr. Broderick asserts that from his conclusions a "whole new system of pathology can be drawn up which explains many of the mysteries of medicine," and "the work on the structure of the atom should become an integral part of medicine as it has of the other sciences." In the interview, he said the theory pointed the way in the search for new drugs, and illuminated the phenomena of many established drugs.

C I O ASKS GOVERNOR'S AID FOLLOWING 'PURGE'

Driven Out of Nevada City, Cal., Where Council Calls Them Reds.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 9.—C I O leaders, charging 300 of their allies in the gold mining region had been driven from their homes by "violence and lawlessness" by citizens, today demanded State and Federal protection.

A committee representing striking C I O gold miners from the Nevada City area called on Gov. Merriam in Sacramento and demanded a State Highway patrol escort back to Nevada City for 300 or 400 strike supporters; criminal prosecution of the Sheriff, Under-sheriff and District Attorney of Nevada County; State hospitalization of those injured in a recent fight at the Murchie mine and protection against further threatened violence.

Gov. Merriam told the delegation that Attorney-General U. S. Webb had authority to deal with its complaint against the county officers and that he himself could furnish an escort back to the gold town but could not protect the men's homes there.

C I O forces soon afterward picketed the home of the Attorney-General in San Francisco, asserting he had refused to discuss the Nevada City situation until Monday.

The Nevada City Council and Mayor Benjamin Hall issued a statement charging conditions there were "grossly misrepresented" by "the insidious propaganda of the Communist C I O organizers who have been expelled by the working miners and the business men of this district."

"Twenty men out of 200 at the Murchie mine have sought to force C I O membership upon 2400 of our miners, who have had their own union for a generation and are receiving the best pay in a camp in California," the council statement said.

The statement said two C I O organizers, after having complained to the Governor, returned to Nevada City and were found with "an imported delegation of Reds" who were armed, and that this discovery caused Thursday night's "purge" by the citizens.

Truce in Inter-Union Conflict at Crockett, Cal.

By the Associated Press.

CROCKETT, Cal., April 9. — Threats of warfare between A. F. of L. and C I O forces gave way suddenly to peace efforts in Crockett today after police had blockaded the town to isolate the opposing groups.

Picket lines, which numerous times had changed complexion during a week of tension marked by two riots, vanished during the afternoon, and Sheriff John Miller announced both sides had agreed not to reform them pending peace negotiations. The opposing groups had been struggling for control of the entrance to the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refinery, one of the largest such plants in the world, which had been tied up for 29 days.

In announcing the truce, Sheriff Miller said the rival forces were "only one point apart" on a settlement. He said a peace conference, if successful, would settle not only the jurisdictional dispute between the two unions groups but also the controversy which caused the C I O to start the picketing.

CUSTOMER BLAMES COAL FIRM FOR FIRE IN REPAIR SHOP

Seeks $3930 in Suit Charging Spontaneous Combustion of Fuel, Smaller Than Grade Ordered.

Charging that a fire in his garage and repair shop at Crystal City, Mo., was started from spontaneous combustion in coal screenings, Eugene T. Decker yesterday filed suit in Circuit Court against the Corkery Coal Co., 4640 Chippewa street, claiming $3930 damages.

The suit sets forth that the coal firm furnished a smaller grade of coal than was ordered and the combustion occurred last Nov. 24 after the screenings had been placed in an inside bin. Ten automobiles valued at $3500 and tools valued at $430 were destroyed, the petition sets forth. John F. and Gregory J. Corkery, officers of the coal firm, were not available when a reporter called.

STUDENTS HAIL ST. LOUIS YOUTH

Fred Pralle Chosen as "Most Fascinating He" at Kansas U.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 9.—Kansas University students chose Miss Betty Butcher of Milwaukee, Wis., and Fred Pralle of St. Louis as the "most alluring she and most fascinating he" in a contest sponsored by the school humor publication.

Miss Butcher, daughter of Clifford Butcher, Sunday editor of the Milwaukee Journal, is a freshman and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Pralle, a senior, was one of Kansas University's basketball stars this year and later joined the national champion Kansas City Healey A. A. U. team. He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity. Runners-up were Miss Maxine Miller of Kansas City and Tom King of Topeka.

CONVICT KILLS SELF IN PLUNGE

Falls 3 Tiers From Gallery at Illinois Penitentiary.

By the Associated Press.

JOLIET, Ill., April 9.—Harrison Hunt, 54 years old, a prisoner committed from Chicago, plunged to his death today from the gallery of the third tier at Stateville penitentiary. Warden Joseph Ragen said guards told him Hunt had been acting strangely. Hunt was committed in November, 1936, to serve from one to 10 years for larceny.

Excerpts From Editorials Commenting on House Defeat Of Reorganization Bill

President's Grip on Congress Has Slipped, Says Washington Star—New York Post Criticises Motives of Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

FOLLOWING are some of the leading newspaper editorial comments on the defeat in the House Friday of President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the executive branch of the Government:

New York Times: It is abundantly clear that the vote which sent it (the bill) back to committee was in reality a vote against the administration itself rather than a vote against the bill. Two conclusions are inescapable. The House of Representatives is in revolt against a further concentration of personal authority in the President. At the same time it is eager to promote the recovery of business—so eager that it has seized upon this roundabout method of rebuking the administration for its failure to propose measures which would remove obstacles that now block a recovery movement.

New York Herald Tribune: The vote of the House of Representatives yesterday evening, killing the reorganization bill for all time, is a heartening and inspiring light in the East. For courage and importance it matches the vote of the Senate last summer which finally defeated the court-packing plan. After yesterday's ballot there can be little doubt of the future. Once again the country possesses its historic government composed of three co-equal powers.

New York Sun: By defeating the reorganization bill the House of Representatives declared its independence of Franklin D. Roosevelt and gave heartening notice to the country that it would not allow itself to be utilized as a rubber stamp for the executive. Not since the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt's attack on the Supreme Court has the American people had such cause for satisfaction as it has today.

New York World Telegram: Last night's defeat of the Government reorganization bill was the best thing that could have happened for the country. It ended a bitter fight that had gone on far too long. More than that, it cleared the way for what can be and what should be a resumption of progress toward recovery, with each branch of government—legislative, executive and judicial—playing the equal and co-ordinate part it has always been intended to play.

New York Post: The vote of the House late yesterday on the reorganization bill shows the Democratic majority in Congress is leaderless. It is paying very little attention to the masses of people or its own leaders. Instead, it is listening intently to the demagogic tub-thumping of the 'I Hate Roosevelt' Club. The reorganization bill was not important or even significant. But the methods used to defeat it and the motives behind the methods present a very ugly picture. The country has not gone to hell, but 108 Democratic Representatives are headed in that direction.

Albany (N. Y.) Knickerbocker News: This was not merely a House in revolt against an executive attempting to assume legislative powers. It was a reflection of the will of an aroused people seeking to rebuke a President attempting to concentrate more power in himself.

New Haven (Conn.) Journal-Courier: The challenge to constitutional government offered by the President in 14 months of cumulative personalism has its final and somber rebuke in the House of Representatives. Measuring Mr. Roosevelt's judgment of the people's temper against their own direct experience, the Representatives, if by a narrow margin, have found him wrong.

Boston Transcript: It is a defeat which any President should suffer who is so unmindful of the American legend that he seeks power which does not belong to him.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The House vote was a personal Waterloo for the President. The issue was confidence in President Roosevelt. The outcome was a vote of lack of confidence.

Washington Star: In the reorganization bill fight—now happily ended—President Roosevelt's leaders in the House called upon the Democrats not to let the President down. They made the issue the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt. It became a matter personal to the President. Since the President and his leaders made this the issue, they must accept the verdict. The President's grip on the national Legislature—overwhelmingly Democratic — has slipped.

Newark (N. J.) Evening News: From coast to coast it seems to be widely agreed that the sensational defeat of the reorganization bill is a good thing—good for the country and good for Franklin Roosevelt. As cumulative evidence of the fear of the Executive which has grown so amazingly since the 1936 landslide, it is imposing; it is a striking demonstration of the democratic process.

Cincinnati Times-Star: The great thing about the defeat of the reorganization bill is that it shows democracy in the United States to be much stronger and much safer than it had seemed to be. The way public opinion has roared out against the reorganization bill is the most surprising and heartening development of our time in America.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The President's prestige is sharply diminished. The House action puts President Roosevelt in a position where he must move quickly if he is to recover his position as leader both of the Government and of the nation as well.

Toledo (O.) Blade: The reorganization bill is dead. The country has a right to rejoice. It means that Congress has again shown its independence as the Senate did on the court packing bill—and it means, or should mean, the end of all harmful measures such as have been prepared by that clique of Leftists surrounding the President which were either suggested or approved by the President.

Louisville (Ky.) Times: The defeat of the reorganization bill in the House of Representatives presents the spectacle, which unfortunately has not been novel in its history, of Congress yielding' to pressure politics. Are the 108 Democrats who accepted the leadership of Frank E. Gannett, Father Coughlin et al, perfectly convinced that such leadership is preferable to that of the President on whose coattails most of them rode into office?

Richmond (Va.) News Leader: A first class sensation in Congress has ended a dark and vexing week. When the last name was tallied, startled leaders realized that the long-feared, long-heralded rebellion against the increase of executive power had come. A defeat of the President as definite as that on the bill for the Supreme Court was a matter of record.

Nashville (Tenn.) Banner: The meaning of the defeat of the President's reorganization bill is even more important, in a sense, than the defeat itself. It is a demonstration that public opinion is still supreme in the affairs of the nation; and so long as that is true, the institutions of the republic are safe.

Little Rock (Ark.) Democrat: The patriots in the lower branch of our national Legislature have—at least until the next session—saved us from a dictatorship, so they feel. The sardonic note is in the fact that there never was any chance of a dictatorship under the President's bill. What Congress resented was that it was reminded of a task which it has faced many times before and each time has sidestepped.

New Orleans Item: While it is idle to regard it (the reorganization bill's defeat) as anything but a clear expression by the House of lack of confidence in the President, the comparative harmlessness of the measure itself emphasizes the fact that the vote was cast against the President who wanted it passed, rather than against any genuine fears that most of the members honestly felt for the bill.

Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer: The News and Observer believes that the people are still in overwhelming numbers devoted to Franklin Roosevelt. The election will give them opportunity to show their devotion. His leadership depends upon their following not only loyally, but intelligently. The only good sense for his supporters is to give him captains in Congress devoted and united.

Des Moines Tribune: The fate of the President's pet legislative measures shows that, unless the "recession" is conquered speedily—and perhaps in that case—the period of "reform" is temporarily over. It is "recovery" the people want, mainly, now. All things taken together, the President, while still undoubtedly the strongest political personage in the country, by far, is no longer so strong that it is not safe to frustrate him.

Kansas City Star: It (defeat of the bill) is a terrific blow for Mr. Roosevelt. Because of its cumulative effect, it is even more damaging to his prestige than was defeat of the court proposal. It marks the virtual end of executive domination of the legislative branch of the Government.

San Francisco Chronicle: The death of the President's reorganization bill is the most significant event in the history of the United States since the defeat of the court packing plan. The two events are partners. The latest one completes and makes positive the rout of Mr. Roosevelt's plans to seize the power of the whole Government for himself.

WOMEN ARRANGE MEETINGS IN GARDENS ON CANCER

Field Army to Hold Sessions at Various Places in County Late This Month.

A series of meetings in behalf of the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer will be held in gardens of St. Louis County late this month, Mrs. Hugh McKittrick Jones, vice-commander of the army's current campaign, has announced.

POLICE SEEK MAN WHO FLED AFTER ACCIDENT

Motorist Says Driver of Auto Which Killed Victim Sent Him for Ambulance.

East St. Louis police are seeking the motorist who asked another motorist to call an ambulance and then fled after his automobile had struck and fatally injured George Sickinger as he was crossing the street Friday night in front of his home at 1220 North Fifteenth street.

Sickinger, who was 52 years old and unmarried, died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital.

Charles Beal, 4339 Connecticut street, St. Louis, told police that Sickinger stepped from in front of his automobile into the path of the other machine. Snow was falling at the time. The driver of the other automobile, Beal said, asked him to call an ambulance and as he returned he saw the machine leaving the scene.

SHOEWORKER SAYS HE FEARED PLANT WOULD BE CLOSED

Brotherhood Officer Tells of One Factory Being Shut Down After Union Was Organized.

N L R B EXAMINER ACTS TO SPEED TRIAL

Tells Company Lawyers They Would Fall Out of Chairs If Anyone Answered "Yes" to Their Questions.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HANNIBAL, Mo., April 9.—A witness for the Western Brotherhood of Shoe and Rubber Workers, which describes itself as an independent union at the Hannibal plants of the International Shoe Co., frankly testified at the National Labor Relations Board hearing against the company today that he joined the brotherhood because he felt the company preferred the brotherhood to an American Federation of Labor union.

He was Ernest W. Orton, president of one of the brotherhood locals. He said he formed his opinion on the company's preference "because of the experience of unions at other plants."

On cross-examination he said his reference was to the Brown Shoe Co. plant at nearby Moberly, which closed down after the Boot and Shoe Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, had gained a foothold there. He told Alan F. Perl, N L R B attorney, that he felt the same thing might happen in Hannibal.

Talk of Plant's Closing.

Orton testified that last summer when the brotherhood was organizing there was "general talk that if the Boot & Shoe came in here the factory would close down." He said it was "common knowledge" that the company preferred a local union.

Orton was the ninth witness for the brotherhood, which has been putting on its defense for seven days. The hearing has already lasted 23 days.

Indications that it would be speeded up were given yesterday when Trial Examiner David F. Smith warned attorneys for the brotherhood that they must accelerate their questioning and abstain from irrelevancies. He referred especially to a long list of prepared questions which the lawyers have asked each of their witnesses. The questions all ask whether or not the company had any hand in a multifarious number of details connected with the brotherhood and the answer to all of them has been "no."

Says "Noes" Mean Nothing.

"Those questions don't mean a thing," Smith remarked. "If answered 'yes' to anyone of them you'd probably fall out of your chairs." He indicated that the attorneys should ask the witnesses about any incidents they knew of and then close with a broad general question as to the company's domination.

Evidence of a sizable drop in Brotherhood membership was garnered from Roy Farmer, treasurer of the largest of the three locals. He testified that at the present time his division had a paid-up membership of 210. His is the largest of the locals and his figures indicated that the total paid-up membership of the Brotherhood, which once claimed 2100 members, is now about 500. Previous witnesses have testified that the Brotherhood carried as members on its rolls any employe who had ever signed an application card.

Farmer was another one of the Brotherhood members whose election to office was a whirlwind affair and his own counsel asked him, somewhat facetiously, if he "had joined the Brotherhood before being elected to office." He said he was elected treasurer the night he joined, which was about a month after the Brotherhood was founded.

MAN SUES FOR RETURN OF PROPERTY HE TRADED

Lawrence P. Thompson Also Seeks Receiver in Action Against Realty Firm and Its Head.

Lawrence P. Thompson, 1903 Virginia avenue, filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday against the St. Louis Realty Development Corporation, with offices in the Wainwright Building, and its president, Charles S. Gross, for the return of property traded for real estate through Gross.

Thompson alleged he traded property he held in the city and county and $3000 bonds for two flats, which were actually the property of an insurance firm at the time of the transaction. After the deal was closed, Gross purchased the flats from the insurance firm and conveyed them to Thompson, it was charged.

The suit also requested the appointment of a receiver to protect Thompson's interests, and Judge Eugene J. Sartorius set a hearing on the application for April 22. Efforts to reach Gross for his version of the deal were unsuccessful.

MAN SENTENCED FOR KILLING

Negro Who Shot Another in Dice Game Gets One to 14 Years.

Rayfield Jackson, who shot and killed another Negro in an East St. Louis dice game in 1936, was sentenced yesterday to one to 14 years in the penitentiary by City Judge Ralph Cook on his plea of guilty of manslaughter.

He was tried on a murder charge in February last year, but a mistrial resulted when a juror told the Court he had held out for 16 hours for acquittal and only signed a verdict of guilty to get out. The guilty plea on the lesser charge was made last Monday. Jackson, 34 years old, resided at 2138 Gaty avenue. He killed Joseph Moore, telling police he believed Moore was about to draw a revolver.

SUIT TO END JUDGE SEVIER'S CONTROL OF INSURANCE FUND

State Superintendent Asks Supreme Court to Prevent His Interference With Distribution.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—George A. S. Robertson, State Superintendent of Insurance, asked the State Supreme Court today to end completely Circuit Judge Nike G. Sevier's jurisdiction over funds impounded in the 16 2-3 per cent fire insurance rate case.

Judge Sevier turned over $1,651,981 in impounded funds to Robertson Monday. The money is to be distributed to policy holders who paid excess premiums, in accordance with a Supreme Court decision of last December.

Robertson asserted in his petition for a writ of prohibition today, however, that Judge Sevier was claiming authority to superintend distribution of the money and to hear and deny or allow further claims against the funds. The petition asked the court to prohibit him from doing these things and to rule explicitly that he could not take "any further cognizance" of the case.

Dr. Arthur C. Hanson said Mrs. Wolf had telephoned him, saying she was ill. The police found a pistol and a note written in German.

IT'S CALLED THE "Roadking"

...AND Here's Why!

This great Plymouth car has a new ride that is causing a sensation in the lowest-price field.

The new Plymouth is by far the biggest and roomiest of the three leading lowest-priced cars.

Plymouth is nearly 7 inches longer than one; more than 10 inches longer than the other.

All Plymouth models have an 82-h.p., "L-head" engine—giving full-powered performance with economy.

Plymouth owners report 18 to 24 miles on gas...big savings on oil, tires, every item of upkeep.

Plymouth has the highest resale value of "All Three" lowest-priced cars because it "stands up best."

THERE'S JUST ONE WAY to find out about today's lowest-priced car values. See and drive the big Plymouth "Roadking"!

Never before could low price buy such an amazing ride. The new Plymouth has big, airplane-type shock-absorbers..."live" rubber body mountings..."radio studio" sound-proofing...the famous Floating Power engine mountings.

And Plymouth has many important features that most manufacturers use only on their higher-priced lines...like four-ring aluminum alloy pistons, valve seat inserts, full-pressure lubrication, Hypoid rear axle.

Try the amazing new Plymouth ride today. Phone your nearby Plymouth dealer for a demonstration. PLYMOUTH DIVISION OF CHRYSLER CORPORATION, Detroit, Mich.

DEWEY SUGGESTS WHITNEY RECEIVE "PUNITIVE" TERM

ney to redeem the securities he had unlawfully pledged, and to postpone, temporarily at least, the bankruptcy of Richard Whitney & Co. But Whitney rejected this aid, on the ground that it came too late. It is also reported that one of the partners of J. P. Morgan & Co., when asked why his firm did not intervene to save its field marshal on the floor of the stock exchange, replied: "There are some things that not even money can cure."

One-Man Firm.

With Dewey's statement to Judge Bohan was submitted also a report by the District Attorney's chief accountant, A. J. Gutreich, which for the first time revealed in detail Whitney's financial misdeeds. It emphasizes the fact that the Richard Whitney & Co. was a "one-man company"; and that of the other five partners, only Edwin D. Morgan Jr., now suspended for three years from the Stock Exchange, enjoyed the status as well as the name of a partner. The others were actually salaried clerks.

This arrangement enabled Whitney to juggle the funds of the company, in which he owned 52½ per cent of the stock, among numerous accounts on the books, without question from his employes. One of these nominal partners, testifying before Dewey, said again and again, "Why we thought Richard Whitney was a god!"

Accounts Handled.

There was the "Richard Whitney control account," to which were transferred securities belonging to Roland L. Redmond, Mr. and Mrs. Delancey Kountze, Alan L. Corey and Deering Howe, which Whitney was authorized to pledge. There were also securities owned by Mrs. Mary S. Baird, Campbell Locke, Ralph C. Mason and the New York Yacht Club, and to the estate of George R. Sheldon and Ella Haggin McKee, which he was not empowered to use.

Contrary to general belief, there was only $30,800 of the Sheldon securities in the control account; most of the trust fund, or $252,000 was transferred to a "Richard Whitney special loan account." In the aptly named "Richard Whitney Liberty Loan account," were securities belonging to his stepson, Samuel Stevens Sands, a grandson of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Sr. The value was $388,260. Whitney in a public statement before Judge Bohan two weeks ago, volunteered the information that he had unlawfully converted his stepson's assets.

By setting up these various accounts, Whitney, according to the auditor's report, was able to represent as assets what were actually liabilities of his firm and himself; and used this false statement of his affairs to deceive not only his brother, George Whitney, a Morgan partner, but also two banks from which he obtained credit in 1937.

Accountant's Conclusions.

Gutreich drew the following conclusions:

When the co-partnership of Richard Whitney & Co. took its latest form on June 30, 1931, Richard Whitney was credited on the books with a cash capital investment of $250,000. His actual contributions were debits amounting to $1,637,932.

Between June 30, 1931, and March, 1938, Whitney borrowed an aggregate of $15,462,000, of which $12,540,000 was repaid. The interest on these loans, either paid or still debited against him, amounted to $948,126.

To elude income tax payments, Whitney transferred various accounts to his secretary, Grace A. Moynan, amounting to more than $250,000.

A book loss of $1,229,177 on stock of the Distilled Liquors Corporation, Whitney's adventure in applejack, was one of the material causes of his firm's collapse.

Other Investments.

In addition, he sunk $415,239 in the Florida Humus Co., $148,676 in the Florida Insecticide Co., and $150,000 in the Hurricane Sales Co., engaged in marketing a patented dish-washing machine.

Whitney paid no interest on $200,000 in cash belonging to the gratuity fund of the Stock Exchange, which was in his hands for 10 months during 1937. He realized a commission of $2437 from the sale of certain of the fund's securities.

Between 1931 and 1938, Whitney withdrew from his firm a total of $1,621,135, though his proportion of the profits, under the partnership agreement, would have been only $555,718.

On the date of bankruptcy, March 7, 1938, Richard Whitney and his company had liabilities of $6,338,500, of which $4,241,000 was in the form of unsecured loans.

Insolvent in 1931, Dewey Says.

Dewey's accompanying report stated that Richard Whitney & Co., regarded as one of the strongest and most conservative of Wall street houses, had a business in bonds alone which averaged more than 10 per cent of the entire volume of transactions on the New York Stock Exchange. Among its customers were some of the greatest banking houses in the United States.

Richard Whitney & Co., Dewey said, had been hopelessly insolvent since June 29, 1931, the day on which the latest partnership agreement was signed. On that date, it had a deficiency of working capital amounting to $950,000.

The report concludes that Whitney's ruin was due to his entry into enterprises outside his brokerage business, which required a continuous addition of large amounts of capital. "The defendant," said Dewey, "had no means with which to finance such ventures and therefore resorted to misappropriation of property belonging to his customers and friends."

A Stock Exchange questionnaire of last February was the immediate cause of Whitney's downfall. For the first time one of these queries was sent to member firms not engaged in margin trading, including Richard Whitney & Co. E. H. H. Simmons, former president of the Stock Exchange, and other witnesses, said Dewey, denied that this important change of policy was caused by doubts as to Whitney's solvency, and in particular by his embezzlement of securities belonging to the Exchange's gratuity fund. None of the witnesses, the district attorney reported, "gave any satisfactory reason for this change of policy."

Whitney's reply to the questionnaire led the exchange's accountants staff to believe that Whitney & Co. had a working capital of only $229,000, whereas, to meet the requirements of the exchange, it should have been at least $604,000. This was said to be the first matter to arouse suspicion and the officers determined to order an investigation of the broker's books. They promptly discovered the "control account," his criminal conversion of securities owned by clients, and an unsecured loan of $100,000 from the Marine Midland Trust Co., which Whitney had failed to report.

By way of light on the standards of the New York Stock Exchange, examiners for the Securities and Exchange Commission, at its Washington hearings next week, will ask Simmons whether he learned last November that Whitney had embezzled more than $1,000,000 in securities and cash belonging to the exchange's gratuity fund, an insurance project for the widows and orphans of deceased members and employes.

George Whitney has been summoned as a witness at next week's examination in Washington. One of the queries to be put to him is where he got the money with which he bailed his brother out of the gratuity fund predicament. If he replies that it was furnished by J. P. Morgan & Co. he will be asked further what explanation he gave his partners for requiring a million dollars with such urgency and haste.

TWO E. ST. LOUIS BOY ROBBERS GET 1 TO 20 YEARS IN PRISON

Youths Plead Guilty to Four Charges; One Said to Be Leader of Gang.

Leo Dycus, 17 years old, said by East St. Louis police to be the leader of a young holdup gang, and Ralph Goodwin, 19, one of his companions, were sentenced to one to 20 years in the penitentiary yesterday by City Judge Ralph Cook.

The youths pleaded guilty previously to four charges of robbery. Sentence was for the holdup of Louis Spina, 1719 Frederick street, East St. Louis, who was robbed of $15 and his watch.

John Bankston, 17, who entered a guilty plea to the same charges, was ordered to jail for a week, while Judge Cook considers his request for probation.

Dycus, living at 1115 Lynch avenue, was beaten and captured Feb. 15 by a taxicab driver after he had committed 10 street holdups.

300 SCOUT LEADERS GET CERTIFICATES

Largest Class Enrolled Completes Its Introductory Course.

More than 300 volunteer scout leaders, representing the largest enrollment in a training course offered by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, last week received certificates for completion of work in an introductory course in boy leadership.

Advanced courses in elements of scout and cub leadership, under the direction of Dr. L. H. Renfro and Robert Meinholtz, will open tomorrow night at the Elias Michael and Stix Schools and continue until May 16. Classes in games and game leadership, camping and nature study will also begin this week.

The primary purpose of the spring training program, which has been approved by the national Boy Scout organization, is to provide trained leaders for the 80 new scout units which will be established this year in the metropolitan area.

Troop 332, sponsored by the Richmond Heights Parent-Teacher Association, is the first scout unit in the St. Louis area to adopt the troop budget plan sponsored by the national Boy Scout Council. Seventy-five field commissioners this month will visit each scout unit registered with the local council to explain the plan, which is intended to encourage thrift and financial responsibility.

An effort will be made this month by the council to provide individual reviewers to test each Boy Scout desiring advancement in rank. A. W. Lants, Arthur Hoech and L. S. Wisebart have been training adult scout leaders to serve as reviewers, and instructioon classes will be held in each district beginning this week.

An American Indian Village will be erected in Tilles Park by St. Louis Cub Scouts as part of the annual Camporee there May 20-22.

More than 150 Boy Scouts, selected from 40 St. Louis troops, will serve as ushers at the Easter sunrise services next Sunday at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park.

Elks Install Officers.

Thomas F. Muldoon has been installed as Exalted Ruler of the St. Louis Lodge of Elks for the 1938-1939 year. Other new officers are: Nicholas J. Schmelig, Esteemed Leading Knight; Milton F. Barth, Esteemed Loyal Knight; George P. Elswirth, Esteemed Lecturing Knight; Foster L. Bennett, secretary; Robert L. Probst, treasurer; Dr. M. P. Morrell, tiler, and Oliver F. Ash Jr., trustee.

EASTER SEAL SALE TO AID CRIPPLED CHILDREN OPENS

Fifth Annual Effort; Solicitation to Be Conducted Largely by Mail.

The St. Louis Society for Crippled Children, 3534 Washington avenue, opened today its fifth annual sale of Easter seals to obtain funds for its work among handicapped children. The sale will be continued through next Sunday.

This week has been designated as "National Crippled Children's Week." The St. Louis organization and the Missouri Society for Crippled Children will join other similar organizations throughout the county in observance of the week.

Solicitation in the sale of Easter seals will be conducted largely through the mails. Groups having child welfare programs will canvass their memberships and American Legion posts have planned a street sale of the seals in several county districts.

Miss Alberta Chase, executive secretary of the Missouri society, said the last census of crippled children showed that 71 per cent of them needed treatment of some kind. About 28 per cent of those observed never had received treatment and at that time only 19 per cent were receiving aid, she said.

The St. Louis and Missouri societies are supported entirely by private contributions and proceeds of the sale of Easter seals. Neither receives aid from the United Charities, and gets no State or Federal funds.

TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS TO BE STARTED IN 1938

Naval Officials Say They Will Be Only Slightly Larger Than 35,000 Tons.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—After a conference with President Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, said yesterday at the White House the Navy planned to to start work before Dec. 31 on the two capital ships for which funds are provided in the pending $550,000,000 naval appropriation bill.

Chairman Vinson (Dem.), Georgia of the House Naval Affairs Committee has said President Roosevelt plans, after approval of the $1,120,000,000 fleet expansion bill, to ask Congress to appropriate funds to start two others.

Work already is progressing on the 35,000-ton battleships North Carolina and Washington.

The Navy's announced intention to initiate construction of the second two before Dec. 31 indicated plans for speed. The appropriation bill authorizes use of the funds at any time up to the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1939.

Edison and Admiral Leahy said the second two would be only slightly larger than the 35,000 tons permitted by abandoned limits of the 1936 London Treaty. Neither indicated the size of the projected fifth and sixth capital craft.

The Navy already has asked Congress to amend the pending fleet expansion bill to permit ships up to 45,000 tons.

OREGON QUITS NEW YORK FAIR

Ousted From Choice Site, Refuses to Make Exhibit.

NEW YORK, April 9. — Oregon withdrew today from the 1939 New York World's Fair, after being ousted from a choice site on the Fair Grounds.

Thomas F. Gunn, vice-chairman of the Oregon Commission, notified Grover Whalen, president of the fair, of the State's withdrawal following telegraphic instructions from Gov. Charles H. Martin of Oregon. Fair officials said they had offered Oregon a "fair adjustment" which had been rejected.

EAST SIDE SCHOOL BOARD ELECTIONS

4 of 15 Administration Candidates Win in E. St. Louis —Other Results.

School board elections were held yesterday in East Side communities.

In East St. Louis, four of 15 candidates backed by the present school administration won places on the school board on returns from 90 out of 91 precincts. The count in the one precinct could not change the final outcome of the election, officials said.

The $300,000 bond issue for erecting and equipping a new police headquarters and central fire station near the East St. Louis City Hall was carried by a vote of 8789 to 5811. A majority of the votes cast in the 87 East St. Louis precincts on the proposition was necessary to carry it.

The vote for the four winning school board members was: W. W. Stines, 9402; Eugene V. Menges, 11,234; J. Elmer Wick, 8320; and J. C. Nichols, 8188. The opposition was led by Thomas F. Coonan, clerk of the election board, who received 5521 votes.

A heavy vote was cast as a result of the bond issue and the school board contest, Coonan said, the total being 16,128, the largest recorded in any school election in the city.

Belleville Election.

Henry C. G. Schrader was reelected for his eighth term as president of the Belleville Grade School District for one year. Members of the board, elected for three-year terms, are Arno Grossart, John F. Dintelman and Thomas T. Wright. Gaston Duval was defeated for board member.

For president of the Belleville Township High School District, Roland W. Jung was re-elected for a one-year term. For board members, to serve three-year terms, Dr. E. L. Rauth was re-elected, and Elmer Roberts was elected as new member for a full term. Alvin C. Stenzel was elected to fill a vacancy.

In the Dewey School District near Belleville, A. J. Schnipper was re-elected president, and Jack Poole and Peter Corrington as members.

For trustee, Harold G. Baker was re-elected in the Signal Hill District, and Leroy Griffith in the Harmony School District.

In the Alton Community Consolidated School District, H. F. Horstman was re-elected member with 867 votes. R. H. Richards received 833 votes for new member, defeating Richard Beuttel, who got 367 votes.

Madison County Results.

Presidents of three school boards in Madison County were re-elected; They are Frank Hatscher, Madison School District 127; Clarence R. Scott, Venice District 128, and George W. Stearns, Nameoki District 154.

Members elected to the boards were: Madison, John W. Peppers and Steve Maeras; Venice, Raymond Barr and Golden Zike; Nameoki, Ross Nightwine, Earl Young and Frank Zenik, and Community High School District 149 of Granite City and Nameoki, C. W. Munson.

At Edwardsville there was a contest for two places on the board. R. C. Cunningham with 991 votes, and Clyde Fruit with 971, defeated three other candidates, who did not file petitions but whose names were written in on the ballots. They were Thomas Williamson, George Fischer and Robert H. Rosenthal, who received between 200 and 300 votes each. James L. Reed was re-elected president of the board.

For places on the Granite City Grade School Board, Roy Lynn was elected as a new member, and R. E. Chapman and B. O. Bodnam were re-elected. Defeated candidates were William Israel and Howard Walker. John H. Kleinschmidt was re-elected president.

TOO EARLY TO DETERMINE FROST'S DAMAGE TO FRUIT

Accurate Appraisal Is Possible Only After Several Warm, Sunny Days.

Several days of warm, sunny weather must pass before damage to St. Louis County fruit crops in the freezing weather Friday night can be determined accurately, a Post-Dispatch reporter was told yesterday by Kirk L. Keller of Creve Coeur, president of the Missouri Horticultural Society. The same statement was made by John Mild, Oakville fruit grower, and Russell H. Lander, county farm agent.

Keller declared there was considerable damage apparent and he was inclined to the view that the cherry crop and about half the apple crop were ruined, but that the portion of the apple crop not yet in bloom was safe. Peach trees, he said, have reached the small fruit stage and the crop probably was not damaged where the temperature did not fall below 30 degrees. Mild said he had not yet observed any damage to cherry trees.

Whatever damage occurred, in Lander's opinion, would be confined to cherries and early-blooming apples, although early apples likely were safe if they have not begun to bud. He said peaches and plums, which have finished blooming, probably were safe, but that a limited quantity of early strawberries, which have bloomed, may have been damaged.

HOLY WEEK IN ROME; POPE RECEIVES PALMS

Canonization of 3 Saints to Make Easter Rites More Elaborate Than Usual.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 9.—Holy week ceremonies, which always bring thousands of pilgrims to Rome, will open tomorrow with the traditional blessings of the palms.

Pope Pius received today offerings of palms from two groups enjoying the time-honored privilege of supplying the Pontiff with branches for his own Palm Sunday observance. They are the Brescia family of San Remo, designated as palm purveyors by Pope Sixtus V in the sixteenth century, and the Camaldolese Nuns of Santa Prisca, who were accorded a similar honor by Leo XII early in the nineteenth century.

The Holy week observances will culminate in gorgeous Easter ceremonies, more elaborate than usual this year because they will include the public canonization of three new saints.

At St. Peter's and Rome's vast number of other churches, the entrance of Jesus into Jerusalem will be commemorated tomorrow with the processions of the palms.

Pope Pius will participate in the solemn and austere ceremonies of Holy Thursday and Good Friday in the Sistine Chapel, and on Easter Saturday will see the Pascal candle lighted as the bells ring out the joy of the resurrection.

The Pontiff will be borne into St. Peter's to occupy the great throne there for the Easter mass and canonization ceremonies, and afterwards will be carried to the balcony to give his Easter blessing to the multitude.

As was the case last year, special draperies will be hung about the throne to protect the Pope from drafts. He will be 81 years old May 31.

The three to be added to the calendar of saints at the public consistory which will be part of the Easter services at St. Peter's are: Father Andrea Bobola, Polish Jesuit martyred in Russia in 1658; Salvador da Horta, lay Franciscan and professor, who died in Sardinia in the eighteenth century, and Giovanni Leonardi, Italian priest who founded the clerics of the Mother of God.

'LIFE' BARRED IN BELLEVILLE FOR BIRTH-OF-BABY PICTURES

Mayor Issues Order; Dealers Had Sold First Shipment and Had Ordered More Copies.

Sale of the current issue of Life, a picture magazine, was barred in Belleville yesterday by Mayor George Remnsnider, who said he had received numerous complaints about a series of photographs from the motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," contained in it.

Belleville news dealers said that all copies received there were sold Friday afternoon, shortly after release of the magazine, but that the mayor's order would halt the sale of several thousand additional copies which had been ordered. St. Louis police seized 2857 copies of the publication Friday afternoon and night by order of Prosecuting Attorney James P. Finnegan.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 9.—Gov. Earle forbid today sale in Pennsylvania of the current issue of the magazine "Life," unless scenes from the motion picture, "The Birth of a Baby," are removed.

The Governor's office said State Police had been instructed to turn any copies offered for sale over to local district attorneys for action.

Edward W. Prendergast, Gov. Earle's secretary, said "numerous protests" had been received.

MISBRANDING CHARGE DROPPED

Judge Dismisses Case Against Missouri Products Co. and Owner.

Dismissal of a charge by the Government that the Missouri Products Co. and its owner, Eugene J. Fishgoll, had violated the Pure Food and Drug Act by misbranding medicinal preparations through variance in the weight of contents with weights printed on labels was entered yesterday by United States District Judge George H. Moore.

In a motion for dismissal, counsel for the company, Victor Packman, contended the charge was contrary to a provision of the act, which said weight of ingredients, excepting opiates and alcohols, might vary reasonably. Packman pointed out that atmospheric conditions sometimes affected weights.

BROWNS LOSE TO CUBS, 5 TO 2; FIRST DEFEAT IN 16 GAMES

SUN EGRET, DERBY CANDIDATE, WINS AT BOWIE TRACK

SCORES EASY VICTORY OVER MUDDY TRACK

Son of Sun Briar Is Clocked in 1:48 2-5 for Mile and 70 Yards of Bad Footing.

Sun Egret's Derby Price Cut to 15-1

PRINCIPAL change in Charley Burke's future book on the Kentucky Derby yesterday was the slash in the price against Sun Egret, winner of the Bowie Spring Handicap. Sun Egret was quoted at 30 to 1 in the original book, issued March 9. Today he is down to 15 and if mud is indicated for the Derby, May 7, he is likely to be much shorter.

Maxwell Howard's Stagehand remains the 4-1 favorite with Fighting Fox 7, Menow 8, Lawrin 10, Tiger 10 and others quoted on up to 1000 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

BOWIE, Md., April 9. — Sun Egret, small wiry chestnut colt rom A. C. Compton's stable, thrilled 11,000 chilled fans with a ands-down victory today in the 500 Bowie Spring Handicap over soupy track to establish himself n outstanding candidate for the Kentucky Derby.

With never a falter in stride hrough the ankle-deep mud, Compon's 3-year-old colt broke first the mile and 70-yard feature nd held the lead easily to splash ome two and a half lengths ahead f Cleveland Putnam's Moon Side. W. L. Brann's Challephen was hird, a length and a half back as Moon Side in the seven-horse eld.

No Need for Whip.

Jockey Alfred Shelhamer, Sun gret's regular pilot, did not use e whip at all, and rode through e back stretch looking back ocasionally through brown spray cked from puddles on the track. e time was one minute, 48 and 5 seconds, good for the slow ack.

Sun Egret, odds-on favorite, paid 80, $2.60 and $2.50 for $2 tick. His victory brought $3250 Compton, raised his year's earngs to $28,775 and his all-time winngs to $31,130.

Today's mud-spattered triumph ccomplished under 112 pounds, as his sixth of this year in eight arts. It was his second race at ore than a mile, the other being e $50,000 Santa Anita Derby in hich he ran third to Stagehand nd Dauber, both candidates for he mile and a quarter Derby.

Sun Egret won easily here last aturday, taking the six-furlong eature on a poor track. He is ue to run Wednesday in the $5000 outhern Maryland Handicap, closng-day feature at a mile and a sixeenth. Weights announced today ave him 119 pounds, topped only y 129 for Aneroid, 124 for Burng Star and 121 for War Minstrel.

One Derby Horse Falls.

His triumph today brought Train r Guy Bedwell's winning string or Bowie to seven in eight days, ncreased his season's total to 26, nd kept him ahead as the year's ading trainer.

Mrs. Weston W. Adams' Warine, only other Derby nominee to un here today, was third behind ish Moon and Brilliant Play in sixth race. It was Warlaine's hird defeat in as many starts here his meeting.

In a Cold, Driving Rain.

Through a cold, driving rain a eld of eight juveniles opened the rogram with a thrilling finish hich found High Blame, in the olors of William Ziegler Jr., the inner by a head margin. Hower, the judges did not trust their es and called for a photo. Royal t, half of the Millsdale entry, was cond with Dust to Dust, repreinting John Hay Whitney, third.

High Blame, in charge of Jockey ck Wall, was rated along while k Apple and then Dust to Dust the pace. In the stretch, Wall t High Blame to a drive and the n of Jack High responded with a sh for the wire. In the meanhile, Royal Bit, slow as .sual to into stride, came with a rush, too late for first money. Dust Dust lasted long enough to get piece of the pay-off.

High Blame was an $11.70 mutuel ot and was clocked in :49 3-5 er a track that resembled a al.

Grim Reaper Wins California Derby, Lavengro Is Second

By the Associated Press.

SAN MATEO, Cal., April 9.—Leading all the way, Grim Reaper, owned by W. E. Boeing of Seattle, won the $6000-added California Derby at Bay Meadows track today by six lengths over the favorite, Lavengro, and Wing and Wing.

Grim Reaper, ridden by Johnny Adams, ran the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:43 4-5 and paid his backers $9.80, $3.20 and $2.20. Lavengro, the Macarco Stable's coal black speedster, paid $3.00 and $2.20 and Wing and Wing $2.40. Lavengro and Rommy, an also ran in the field of six, are candidates for the Kentucky Derby.

The Boeing entry took the lead at the start and was never seriously pressed. Lavengro, the odds-on favorite, came from third to second place. Wing and Wing came up from fifth to third, nosing out Kumreigh.

It was the day's fourth victory for Jockey Adams, who won six in a row last Thursday.

Lavengro, a winner at Bowie and Hialeah, had to shoulder 122 pounds as compared with 106 on Grim Reaper.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Which Will Be Favorite?

WHEN a world heavyweight champion defends his title in the ring he usually is made an overwhelming favorite. That began with John L. Sullivan who, when he defended his honors against James J. Corbett as a 1 to 4 shot, despite his age and a whiskey watermelon waistline.

Jack Dempsey, who had not fought for three years, was a 1 to to 4 shot against Gene Tunney at Philadelphia in 1926. And Max Baer was a 1 to 10 shot when he lost his title to the aged and supposedly passe Jimmy Braddock.

Only rarely has the title-holder been the under-dog in the betting as was the case when Braddock defended his crown against Joe Louis.

But next June 22 there is a possibility that another instance of the champion entering the ring second choice to the challenger may develop. That will be when Champion Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber of Detroit, faces Max Schmeling, challenger in a city yet to be selected.

SEVERAL REASONS exist why the champion should be considered the logical short price candidate. Louis is superior in weight, height, reach, and speed; he is perhaps a harder hitter than Max and is deadly with both hands, where Max has only his right; and due to eight years age advantage, he will have Father Time battling on his side.

But he enjoyed the same advantages two years ago, when he met Schmeling, and yet was knocked out by the German. And because of the workmanlike job Max did that night, observers, former fighters and writers who saw that bout for the most part believe that Max will do it again.

PRICE-MAKERS will have to consider this: Has Louis improved or has Max gone back enough in two years to reverse the result of their last meeting?

That will have to be more or less guesswork. We know that Louis has improved. He is more cagey than formerly and would never again make the mistake of piling into Schmeling's right-hand round after round, despite the punishment it dealt him. Braddock put him down; but Louis knew what to do about it. He got up to win—which shows the Negro has learned one lesson.

Louis and Schmeling both fought Harry Thomas and both stopped the Eagle Bend heavyweight. But Louis did a cleaner job of it.

Schmeling's years will probably weigh more against him than anything else, when it comes to naming the odds. But years don't bother some athletes, as the case of Bob Fitzsimmons shows. Bob won the title at 36, when he was called an "old man."

THERE ARE ENOUGH arguments in Schmeling's favor to make it possible that he will be one of those rare challengers in history to be favored over the title-holder. And that will be the more strange in this case because at Louis was rated a superman and placed in a class with the all-time greats.

The Background.

Max will get a shot at the winner of the June 22 fight and that will present other complications for the odds-makers.

Should Schmeling win, it will afford another instance of a champion taking on a challenger who had once knocked him out. Baer flattened Schmeling several years ago and gave him a 10-round beating—one of the worst in Schmeling's career.

If Louis defeats Schmeling the situation will be reversed. The champion will be opposed to a fighter whom he once quickly flattened.

A queer triangle in which three beaten men survive in a struggle for a title which each at one time has held. And as to the outcome—guessing the answer to the celebrated problem of the three snakes, each trying to swallow the other, is not much harder.

Reversing the Idea.

Sportsman's Park In Fine Shape for Game Saturday

SPORTSMAN'S PARK is in unusually fine condition for the opening of the baseball season next Saturday, when the Brown sand Cardinals will meet in the first game of the annual brief spring series. Bill Stocksick, the big agrostologist, who also serves as groundkeeper, reports the grass far ahead of any year in the past.

Very little soccer was played at the park this year, and the warm weather that preceded the recent rain and cold snap was just what the doctor ordered.

Inclement weather put the score board construction work about a week behind schedule, but it is hoped that the elaborate new board will be ready for the spring series.

Missouri Rifle Team Wins National Intercollegiate Title

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 9.—The University of Missouri rifle team became National Intercollegiate Champions today with notification that the 964 score had won first place in the senior division of the Hearst trophy matches. The score was 14 points above the previous Missouri record.

Team Captain Bob Roberts of Denver, Colo., paced his team to victory with a 198 score, tops in the Seventh Corps area.

Other marksmen included Wilbur Lake of La Grange, George Taylor of Sumner, Paul Grant of Cabool and Howard Hilker of St. Louis. Missouri since 1930 took second four times and third once in the Hearst match, losing the championship on two occasions by one point.

THREE CARDS HIT HOME RUNS AT NEW IBERIA

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW IBERIA, La., April 9.—Frankie Frisch's St. Louis Cardinals brought their heavy artillery into action here this afternoon and hit three home runs to help score a 12-to-3 victory over their New Iberia farm of the Class D Evangeline League.

Rookie Outfielder Enos Slaughter, Johnny Mize and Pitcher Howard Krist found the range for four-baggers, and Max Macon and Krist, sharing the mound assignment for the Gas House Gang, set the local club down with five safeties, while the National Leaguers themselves banged out an even dozen. Seven New Iberia errors helped in the St. Louis run production.

Macon Serves Home Run Ball.

Macon, though a trifle wild, yielded only three hits in six innings, one a home run by Delon in the third, while the Class D farm of the Redbirds counted one more in the sixth off his delivery by bunching two singles with as many walks.

Krist was touched for only two hits in the last three rounds, but one was a double and drove in the only other New Iberia tally in the eighth.

McKenna, supposed to be the "ace" of the New Iberia mound staff, yielded seven hits and nine runs in a little more than four innings and Burkhart finished the game. The two walked eight men besides being touched for 12 hits.

Macon walked four and Krist one. Macon, incidently, got three of the Redbirds' hits.

Today's game marked the first time a major club has played in New Iberia, and it was the only game the Cardinals will play on their present barnstorming tour in this state.

Tomorrow the Redbirds play their Houston farm of the Texas League.

Hornsby With Baltimore; Coach And Pinch-Hitter

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 9.—Rogers Hornsby, former big league baseball manager, has signed a contract as coach and pinch hitter with the Baltimore Orioles, General Manager John Ogden announced today.

The former manager of the Cardinals, Browns, Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves (now Bees), will assist Manager Bucky Crouse as third base coach. His salary under the contract was not revealed.

MUNCRIEF AND TROTTER SENT TO SAN ANTONIO CLUB BY THE BROWNS

Bill DeWitt, business manager of the Browns, announced yesterday that Bill Trotter and Bob Muncrief, right-hand pitchers, had been released to the club's San Antonio farm and would be left in the Texas city when the team starts on its Northern trip tomorrow.

Trotter last season served with the Browns, finishing with a record of two victories against nine defeats. For a greater part of the campaign he was used chiefly as a relief twirler. Muncrief was with San Antonio in 1937, winning 18 and losing 13 games.

OUTFIELDER DAVIS TO REJOIN THE REDS

By the Associated Press.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 9.—George Davis, laughing off his recent announcement he was through forever with baseball as "just one big mistake," said tonight he would rejoin the Cincinnati Reds tomorrow at Winston-Salem, N. C.

"Maybe I'm goofy," he said. "A few days ago I thought I had enough of baseball. I felt I could not do justice to myself or my club as a utility player, and I believed the honest thing to do was to quit.

"Why I changed my mind I just can't say. Anyhow, I wired the club for permission to rejoin it and to win a regular place for myself. That permission has been granted me and I am heading South once more."

14 HITS OFF TAMULIS AND TIETJE; KRESS POLES HOMER

Street's Team Fails to Take Advantage of Ten Walks and 14 Runners Are Stranded on Bases.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 9.—The Browns' fifteenth-game winning streak was abruptly broken today when the Chicago Cubs, their first major league opponent of the 1938 spring training season, defeated them, 5-2, in the opening contest of their six-game "traveling" series.

Vito Tamulis, sent to the mound when Buck Newsom was unable to pitch due to an attack of bursitis in his right knee, yielded 10 of the Cub's 14 hits and three of their runs. Les Tietje was charged with the other two runs, though they were donated by Outfielder Beau Bell, who lost Billy Herman's fly in the sun in the seventh inning, permitting two Cubs, who had been on base, to score.

The Browns succeeded in driving Clay Bryant, Cub right-hander, from the mound in the seventh when Tommy Heath walked and Red Kress followed with a homer. Jack Russell, who finished up for Chicago, was in charge of the situation thereafter.

Nine Hits, Ten Walks.

Altogether, the Browns made nine hits and were the recipients of 10 bases on balls, eight of them off Bryant, but their failure to hit in the pinches led to defeat, as 14 St. Louis batters were left on the bases.

The Cubs lost no time landing on Tamulis, nicking him for three hits and a run in the first inning. Hack and Herman each singled, and, after Cavarretta tapped into a double play, Demaree's base hit scored Hack.

The Browns also got away hitting but couldn't score. Buster Mills opened with a single and took third as Sullivan shot a line single to right. Sullivan tried to stretch his blow into a double and was retired, but not without an argument from the catcher and Manager Street, who pursued Umpire Rommel, who had made the decision, down the base line, but without effect. Kress was retired on a pop fly and Bell flied out, ending that threat.

In the fifth the Cubs added two runs. Herman smashed a hit off Tamulis' glove. Demaree singled and Marty doubled down the left field line, driving in both runners. The Browns passed up an opportunity to score in this frame when they filled the bases with two out on two passes and a single, only to have Bell fly out.

"Breaks" All Go One Way.

In the sixth, the Cubs scored their last two runs when Outfielder Beau Bell lost Herman's fly in the sun, permitting Jurges, who had doubled, and Hack, who had walked, to streak home.

Again in this frame, the Browns filled the bases but failed to score, due to a bad piece of base-running by Clift. The latter drew a pass to open the inning. Allen flied to Centerfielder Marty who quickly tossed the ball to Rightfielder Demaree. The latter dropped the ball and Clift, thinking Demaree had muffed the fly, raced to second without going back to tag first. Demaree threw to Jurges who tagged out the runner, completing a double play.

Heffner then walked, McQuinn singled and Tietje walked, filling the bases, but Buster Mills popped to the shortstop and another St. Louis threat went up in smoke.

The Browns finally knocked Bryant off the mound in the seventh when Heath walked and scored as Kress was hitting a homer over the left field wall. Bell narrowly missed a homer with a drive off the same fence, the hit going for a double. That brought in Jack Russell, making his first appearance in a Cub uniform, and he quickly put the Browns in their places thereafter.

The attendance this afternoon was estimated at 3500.

INDIANAPOLIS TEAM ROLLS 1335; LEADS A. B. C. DOUBLES

ONE BOWLER GETS 668; HIS PARTNER, 667

Art Ladd, O'Fallon Ill., Bowls Into Tenth Place In Singles With Total of 698.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 9. — Fred Mounts and Harry Wheeler of Indianapolis scored a 1335 series and took first place in the two-man standings in the American Bowling Congress tonight.

They supplanted Richard Kriese and Sam Vanini of Buffalo, who had held the top since March 25 with a score of 1322.

Unlike previous doubles leaders in this year's A. B. C., Mounts and Wheeler divided their task evenly. Mounts tumbled 668 of the maples and his partner 667.

The new first-place figure, while 80 pins back of the A. B. C. record set in 1933 by Gil Zunker and Frank Benkovic of Milwaukee, rates well with winning totals in past years.

Mounts and Wheeler are members of the Marott five. In team competition they scored 565 and 530, respectively.

In the two-man event, Mounts scored 212 in his first game and Wheeler was but five sticks behind. Wheeler nudged 216 pins off the drives in his second attempt, topping his partner by four. Each produced his best string in the final game, and for each it was a 244 total.

Paired for First Time.

Mounts and Wheeler are A. B. C. veterans, but this was the first time they have been paired in doubles competition.

Anthony Pinto of New York with 666, led the singles contestants.

Other scoring, dominated by Kansas City bowlers, was not high enough to get into the top standings.

James Pendergast, Democratic chief of Western Missouri and nephew of Kansas City's Tom Pendergast, accounted for 600 maples and the 672 of his partner, Con Maloney, gave them a total of 1272.

Pendergast toppled 553 in the singles. June Riley of Kansas City, needing only 618 in the singles to pass Don Beatty of Jackson, Mich., for all-events leadership, folded up and got only 537.

The veteran Jimmy Smith, all-events champion in 1911 and 1920, scored 532 in doubles and 544 in singles. Joe Falcaro of New York, claimant to the match game championship, turned in efforts of 657 in doubles and 600 in singles.

Ohioan Takes Fourth.

Art Ladd, O'Fallon, Ill., topped the bowlers from the St. Louis district by soaring into tenth place in the single standings with a mighty 698 total. Ladd posted games of 247-225-226, rolling on the same squad with Cliff Robling and Paul Holstein, Columbus, who totaled 721 and 704, respectively, to take fourth and eighth places. Robling also nabbed fifth spot in the all-events with 1937.

A stubborn No. 10 pin which refused to fall on a seemingly perfect wallop on top of four strikes in the tenth frame of the last game, prevented Ladd from moving up five more positions.

Joe Weiss topped the St. Louis bowlers in the singles class with a 637 total, while other top totals included C. Cartello, 628; F. Graf, 604; E. Wenneker, 625, and W. Lewis, 608.

Breaking Into the Big League

The active young man at the right is eight-year-old Dick Macy, son of Ike Macy, professional tennis player, shown at left, who with his father defeated the all-adult team of O. C. Latimer and Richard Haskell, in the third round of the St. Louis district badminton tournament yesterday at First Regiment Armory. Macy and Macy won by 15-8 and 15-4, the little fellow frequently drawing applause for soft drop shots over the net.

weight champion, just about reverses the heavyweight situation. Instead of three men seeking one title, Perpetual Motion Henry is one man seeking three titles.

If he beats Ross in their welterweight championship match, his next title contest will be for the lightweight crown now held by Lou Ambers. And if he wins that he will not only hold three ring crowns, but will hold them simultaneously. And that's never been done before, so they say.

Commentators point to Bob Fitzsimmons as the only fighter to hold three championships in different divisions. He held the middle, light-heavyweight and heavyweight titles but at different periods of his pugilistic career and not simultaneously.

The nearest approach to Armstrong's case—always providing Henry does win three championships—was that of Terrible Terry McGovern, who, it was claimed, held the bantam, feather and lightweight crowns at the same time. Terry, it was stated, had not relinquished the bantam crown when he won the feather title. And he was still featherweight king when he knocked out Joe Gans, lightweight champion, at Tattersall's, Chicago.

Kayoed Three Champions.

GANS, HOWEVER, afterwards confessed he faked that fight with McGovern.

McGovern's history shows there's another angle. He gained the world bantam title in 1899 by beating Pedlar Palmer of England. The same year he knocked out George Dixon, the famous Little Chocolate, to gain the featherweight championship. Shortly after that, in 1900, McGovern fought a battle which entitled him to claim three titles.

Before meeting Gans he fought Frankie Erne, then lightweight king. McGovern came in the ring weighing only 125 pounds, which was eight pounds under the then existing ringside lightweight limit of 133 pounds.

He knocked out the champion in the third round. But the title didn't pass. It was stipulated in advance that Erne's title would not be at stake!

From September, 1899, to December, 1900, McGovern actually knocked out the titleholders in three classes! And that's the mark at which Armstrong must shoot.

GOLF SEASON TO BE OPENED TOMORROW

Amateur and professional golfers will open the season in this district formally tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in a pro-amateur event which is to be held at Normandie Golf Club. Entries close tonight at 5:30 o'clock.

Rugby Teams in Two Games Today

Encouraged by their strong showing against the Chicago champions a week ago, the Missouri Rugby Football Union will open the second half of its schedule this afternoon on the Drill Grounds in Forest Park. In the first game, the Ramblers play the County Y. M. C. A., at 2 o'clock; while at 3:15 o'clock, the Washington University Medics oppose the Central A. C.

The Medics won the first-half title, being undefeated in three games, but they lost a hard-fought struggle to the more experienced Chicago Rugby Club Northerns last Sunday, 3-0.

The second half season will consist of one round robin and close April 24, with a championship playoff game on the following Sunday; provided, of course, that the Medics do not win the second half title.

The starting lineups follow:

BROWNS LOSE TO CUBS, 5 TO 2; FIRST DEFEAT IN 16 GAMES

hurl the first game for the Browns while Jack Knott has asked to go the entire route which will be seven innings, in the second.

Manager Grimm of the Cubs, still trying to get a pitcher to go the route, plans to start Larry French and Curt Davis in tomorrow's games.

The Cubs cut off a rookie after today's game, sending Third Baseman Steve Mesner to Indianapolis on option.

Manager Street and the two American League umpires, Grieve and Rommel, were continually engaged in arguments. In the first inning, Rommel's decision at second base, by which he called Catcher Sullivan out on a close play, aroused the Brownie boss' ire. In the fourth, Grieve refused to permit Harlond Clift to take first when he called a ball after the score board had showed three balls and two strikes. Grieve declared the score board had been incorrect.

Brownie players, who watched the Cubs at bat while using the new "dead" National League ball before today's game, expressed belief the ball is not so lively as the American League sphere used this afternoon.

Tomorrow's twin bill finishes the Browns' five weeks' stay in San Antonio. Both teams move on tomorrow night to Fort Worth, where the series will be resumed on Monday.

A and B at It Again.

EVERY time A meets B, they get into an argument. They probably have made more bets, too, than any other two persons in the history of anything. You would think that just once, some time, they would agree on something, but if they have ever been in accord, the fact has never been reported.

A and B are that way about Dizzy Dean and you have to admit that there's ground for argument. At any rate, we were interested and perhaps you will be:

A: "Dizzy's through, I tell you. If the Cardinals win a pennant it w on'tbe o naccount of Dizz, but in spite of him."

B: "You always were a fish and you ain't changed a bit. You're crazy. Dizz had a sore arm last year and he's all right now and watch him. He'll win 25 games sure."

A: "Maybe in the Appalachian League. Not in the Natioanl. He's through, I tell you. Too much dough. Annuity, owns his own home. In the big money. They even rob the Deans of jewels."

B: "Now you're proving what I said, that you're a sill. What's a jewel robbery to do with pitching?"

Argument Grows Warm.

A: "You ask me. I tell you. When a guy's got jewels, that's bad enough, for a pitcher, I mean. But when he's got so much dough that he's robbed of jewels, he's gone. That's Dizzy."

B: "I still don't get you. Jewels, pitching, robbery, what's it all got to do with Dizzy and 1938?"

A: "Plenty, Public Stupid No. 1, plenty. It's like this: When Dizz was hungry and ambitious and had only one suit with maybe two pairs of pants, he was really a pitcher. He wanted to get some better groceries. He wanted a suit with three pair of pants maybe, or two suits with one pair, like they wear in Florida. So he was always bearing down. Working, trying, pitching. Sure, he was harum scarum, but he always was ready to go, for money, marbles or chalk. Look at him now. Jewel robbery at Dean mansion and then sinus infection. Say, when Old Dizz was really fogging 'em in there, he didn't have no sinus. It's dough that get's you that way, I tell you. Bursitis, sinus infection, jewel robbery, appendicitus! Criminmy, before long it'll be osteomyolitis of the lesser trochanter."

2. "Now, neither one of us knows what you're talking about. I still say Dizzy is a great pitcher. He had a sore toe last year and it went into his arm. It can do that, you know. He's all right this year. You notice he ain't doing any popping off."

A. "Yes, and that's another thing that convinces me. Dizzy is not popping off isn't Dizzy. There must be a reason. When he was popping off he had something. He made good on everything he said. He ain't popping off because he knows he ain't got much any more."

Turn-Around Headliner.

B. "He's smart, Dizzy. He figured popping off didn't get him in the news any more, so he quits popping off and, sure enough, everybody writes about Dizzy not popping off. Now there's a man who, by popping off or not popping off, makes page 1 in the sports section."

A. "I think you have something there. I mean Dizzy had better get him clippings ready. Maybe the clippings will scare the other teams. If they don't, look out. Dizz hasn't got much left. Too wealthy. He won't work any more. What he needs is to be good and hungry again."

B. "You notice he stops the Yankees each time he pitches against them. You notice he stops the Tigers in all but one inning. Dizzy's smart. He's goihg to make this his big season. Watch and see. He wants to lead both leagues and I'll be surprised if he doesn't win 30 games easy."

A. "I'll tell you what I'll do. "I'll bet you"——

But we had to leave just them, and anyhow, that's an old story, when A bets B.

Vines, Here, Says Riggs and Mako Will Aid Budge in Retaining Davis Cup

By Robert Morrison.

The life of a tennis professional on tour is one big rush, it seemed, as Ellsworth Vines drove into St. Louis late last evening, but he found time at the dinner table to relax a moment and confirm the deep-seated suspicion of everyone that the United States is going to retain the Davis Cup this year.

Radio appearances, friends who dropped in at the hotel, calls at the desk, this and that and everything filled the few short hours before he went to the Washington University Field House to play Fred Perry, the former British Davis Cup star, in the feature match which Perry won, two sets to one.

But Vines, after several years of this sort of life, didn't seem at all disturbed. The snow and bad weather as they left Chicago had disturbed him a little, but he could laugh at it now.

And back to tennis.

"There's no doubt about it. Our team will keep the Davis Cup. There's no one that can beat us.

"Germany will probably be the Americans' opponent in the final—if Von Cramm plays."

Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, mainstay of Germany's cup team, recently was placed in jail in Berlin on rather vague charges, variously reported to be social or political.

"Riggs Next to Budge."

Don Budge, of course, will be America's No. 1 Davis Cup player. Vines said he expected Bobby Riggs to aid Budge in the singles. Last year, it was Frankie Parker in the No. 2 position.

"I believe," said Vines, "Riggs is the second best player in the world today—amateur, that is."

"Better than Parker, then?" Vines was queried.

"Yes, Riggs has as much condition as Parker and he has a better forehand stroke. The forehand, I believe, is the only thing that separates them." Vines thought a moment, dipped into his soup again. "I think perhaps Riggs is a brainier, smarter player than Parker is, too."

"Then Gene Mako will likely be Budge's partner in the doubles for Davis Cup competition. He definitely will be," Vines said.

"Budge refereed our pro matches in Chicago this week-end and he told me that he would insist that Mako be his doubles partner."

"Had there been any doubt that Mako would be?"

"Well, some persons had said that Mako was a weak sister, that one of the younger players should be put in the doubles with Budge. But Budge said he would choose Mako."

This is the lineup, then, that will keep the Davis Cup. Vines skipped through the possibilities of other challengers and found them sadly lacking.

"Germany? Henner Henkel's young; he may improve. France doesn't have a thing; Borotra's gone. England? Bunny Austin's retired and Hughes is out of the game. Australia probably has the best chance besides Germany with McGrath, Quist and Bromwich. Czechoslovakia has nothing at all now that Menzel is gone."

"How do you account for this decline and fall of tennis in foreign countries?" was the next question.

"It is just the same as it was in the United States a few years ago. They get two or three good men at the top, men that can win the cup and stick with them, come hell or high water. They pay no attention to the younger players. Then when the stars pass out of the picture they have no players to carry on with."

There recently has been some agitation to make Davis Cup play a biennial affair. Vines' opinion of this was sought.

"In some cases it might be a very good thing. I mean some of the smaller countries unable to finance yearly Davis Cup challenges would benefit. And I don't see where it would be a great disadvantage to larger nations."

Vines agreed that the United States Lawn Tennis Association would be opposed to it because it would like to reap some of the profits missing during the 10-year absence of the cup from this country.

The Pro's Favorite Topic.

As for open tennis tournaments, Vines the professional, spoke forth fearlessly:

"They will come eventually. As soon as the old men in control of amateur tennis with their Harvard tradition, their Seabright and their Southampton—as soon as they are out, the open tennis tournament will come. It must be realized that tennis today is not the private club tennis of Bill Tilden's day; it's a game of public parks. Riggs, Budge, myself, Perry—players like these are coming up now. And open tennis tournaments will not injure the game. They'll create even more interest than there is now."

Vines and Perry will be on tour until the first of June and will have played about 81 matches, Vines said. After that, he's going home and play two rounds of golf a day, he remarked with a grin that implied that he was having enough tennis.

The troupe will leave this morning for Peoria, Ill., the next stop on the tour.

PERRY DEFEATS VINES HERE IN THREE SETS

By Davison Obear

Fred Perry defeated Ellsworth Vines, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, in the feature of last night's professional tennis matches at the Washington University Field House, thereby reducing Vines' lead on the present tour to five victories. Vines has won 29 matches, Perry 24.

A crowd announced as 2170 saw Perry take the third set after the players had divided the first two.

They battled evenly for the first six games in the opening set. Vines then outsteadied Perry to lead, 5 to 3. Perry won the next game, but Vines' fast service gave him a love game and the set, 6-4.

The British star was a little more accurate at the start of the second set and captured the first two games. Vines broke Perry's service and took his own to make the score 2-all. Each player won service in the next three games, with Perry leading, 4 to 3. The eighth game was a very brilliant battle, with Perry finally taking it for 5 to 3. The British player allowed Vines only one point in the next game, winning the second set, 6-3.

Perry quickly ran up a 3 to 1 lead in the third set. Vines seemed a little tired at this stage of the contest. At the start of the next game, however, he put on more speed and, [illegible] play, won two straight games. Perry outsteadied the Californian to lead, 4 to 2. Vines then won his service in the seventh game. Perry's steadier play in the game gave him a 5 to 3 lead.

The match was the finest professional exhibition ever played here.

Walter Senior, San Francisco, Cal., and Berkeley Bell, former Texas star, divided two sets in the first match on the evening's program. Senior took the first, 6-1, and Bell came back to win the second set, 6-3.

In the doubles match which closed the program Perry teamed with Bell to take two sets from Vines and Senior, 6-4, 6-4.

BUCKEYES ARE FIRST COLLEGE SQUAD TO WIN

Patnik Scores Grand Slam In Diving Events — Princeton's Medley Team Sets Record.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., April 9.—Princeton's great medley relay team set the lone new record of the 1938 National A. A. U. senior swim meet here tonight, but Ohio State University "stole the show" as the Bucks became the first college squad to take the team championship and Al Patnik, sensational sophomore, rounded out the first diving "grand slam" in history.

The Bucks piled up 41 points to capture the honors, while Patnik's performances constituted a real "honor roll." The blond diver, in sweeping the low and high board events for the second straight year, added those conquests to his Big Ten and national intercollegiate "sweeps" and the National A. A. U. outdoor high board crown.

Michigan finished second in the team race with 19½ points, giving Ohio four victories in five starts against the Wolves this year. The lone Michigan conquest over Ohio was a single-pointer in the national intercollegiate.

Princeton, with a sensational triumph in the 300-yard medley relay, the closing event, ran its points to 17 for third place. Harvard had 10½; the Miami Biltmore Club 10, New York Athletic Club 5, Iowa and the Providence Boys' Club 3 each, and the Detroit Athletic Club 2.

Princeton's medley relay trio of Vande Weghe, Hough and Parke clicked through the 300 yards in 2:54.3, knocking six-tenths of a second off the American mark of 2:54.9 set in 1936 by the Lake Shore A. C. of Chicago.

Patnik and Ralph Flanagan of the Miami Biltmore Club of Coral Gables, Fla., were the only "doubles" winner of the meet, the Southern star taking the 220-yard and 500-yard free style events while Ohio swept the diving competitors.

Peter Fick of the New York Athletic Club successfully defended his 100-yard free style championship, turning in a 51.8 performance.

Ed Kirar of the University of Michigan, national intercollegiate champion, and Henry A. Curwen of Harvard finished in a dead heat for second place, a yard behind the winner.

Fick's time was eight-tenths over the world record set in 1927 by Johnny Weissmuller and tied by Fick two years ago.

Vande Weghe added the A. A. U. 150-yard back stroke crown to the intercollegiate laurels he won a few weeks ago as he beat out a classy field in 1:34.5, two and eight-tenths above the 1:32.7 world record of Adolph Kiefer of Austin, Tex., who did not defend his championship.

Jack Nelson of St. Louis finished twelfth in the qualifying tests for the three-meter diving finals. The unattached Missouri youth piled up 109.64 points, but failed to get in.

PIRATES TO ATTEND BASEBALL DINNER

Members of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who open the National League season against the Cardinals at Sportsman's Park, April 19, have been invited to attend the annual baseball dinner at Hotel Chase, April 18.

The Cardinals and the Browns are also to attend together with club officials, President Ford Frick of the National League, President Will Harridge of the American League and Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

The Browns will depart immediately after the dinner for Cleveland where they open the American League season the following day.

The dinner, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, is expected to be attended by 600 persons.

SPORT SALAD
by L. Davis

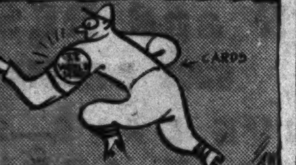
Marching Through Georgia.

SOUND the good old bugle, boys, the bugle of retreat,
The farm hands down in Albany knocked Dizzy off his feet;
It must be something that he ate, or maybe 'twas the heat,
While they were marching through Georgia

Although the Gashouse Gang won out, it was a sloppy game;
Their playing did not indicate they'd set the league aflame;
It must have been the climate or perhaps they pulled up lame,
While they were marching through Georgia

Fair Enough.

The Yankees, Giants and Dodgers will wear the insignia of the 1939 New York World's Fair on the sleeves of their uniforms. Just for that, we suggest that the Browns and Cards wear the emblem of the 1938 world series on their uniforms.



San Francisco and New York are going to keep the commuters busy hopping between the World's Fairs in 1939. Looks like a big year for the airplane business.

Jimmy Wilson picks the Phillies to finish fifth this year. What's the matter, Jimmy, are all the first division berths taken?

Looks as though the ump cast his vote for the National League in the big inter-league controversy now raging, when he forfeited a game to the Giants in ruling that a ball caught in the crowd by a Cleveland outfielder was a two-base hit on a question of ground rules.

In First-Basemen Buck McCormick and Buck Jordan, Cincinnati seems to have two bucks that look like a million dollars.

But don't forget that with their two Mills, Buster and Howard, the Browns are also in the money.

Cheese It.

The Commerce Department estimates that the per capita cheese consumption has doubled in the United States in the last 20 years, and now is about five pounds per capita per year.—Business Notes.

CHEESE, cheese, jolly old cheese,
Floating so gaily and sweet on the breeze;
It has all the other comestibles skinned
And indicates spinach has gone with the wind.

Maybe the radio has something to do with it. Cheese has been on the air for some time.

Southern League clubs can carry 12 A men and seven B men for the first 30 days, then must cut to 11 and 6.—Exchange.

A couple of G-men might help in a pinch.

Larry MacPhail's Cincinnati complex is manifesting itself in Brooklyn. Tickets for the Dodgers' opening game are going like hot cakes in a lumber camp.

A cartoonist in an Eastern paper depicts the American League as Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs with the Yankees in the role of Snow White.

Opinion is divided as to whether the American League Seven Dwarfs could make any headway against the National's Giants.

Be it as it may, Horace Stoneham picks the Giants to win the pennant again and get even with Snow White for the beating she gave them last year.

Jim Londos will take on Jesse James at the Hippodrome Monday night. The original Jesse James had a horse and we take it his namesake will go after Jimmy with a flying mare.

U. S. F. A. ASKS OZARK TO JOIN; 2 GAMES TODAY

By Dent McSkimming.

Having failed in repeated efforts to coax the Municipal Soccer League back into the United States Football Association as an affiliated body, the national organization has now turned to the Ozark A. A. U. with an invitation to join the parent soccer group. Walter Giesler, chairman of the soccer committee of the Ozark A. A. U., said last night that in response to a communication from the U. S. F. A., he has informed National Secretary James Armstrong that the Ozark teams might ask for affiliation if conditions were satisfactory. It is understood the registration cost is 10 cents per player. The Ozark A. A. U., conducting its first soccer tournament, the semifinals of which will be played at Walsh Stadium this afternoon, attracted 24 teams into competition and next year has hopes of getting 35 or more clubs, including from six to 10 local high school teams.

Municipal Soccer League team managers voted to rejoin the U. S. F. A. last fall, but the Muny Central Council refused to permit such affiliation on the grounds that the U. S. F. A. gave St. Louis very unfair treatment during its long period of membership.

As a new organization, the Ozark soccer committee has no background of unpleasant relations with the U. S. F. A. and is therefore expected to look with favor on affiliation which would lead to intercity competition. A game between the champions of the present tournament here and the winner of the U. S. F. A. Amateur Cup Competition will be sought by Chairman Giesler.

Zeltmans and Beltmars are favored to win today's Ozark semifinals. The championship game will be played Tuesday night at Walsh Stadium. Today's program starts at 2 p. m.

Sara Guth May Try Her Florida Golf Tips in National

By W. J. McGoogan.

Miss Sara Louise Guth, three times champion of the St. Louis Women's District Golf Association, is eyeing the hazards at Algonquin again, reflecting on her two months' tour of Florida, where she played in seven tournaments. Miss Guth is now setting her sights to recapture the championship of the District. Also she plans to play in the State tournament which is to be held in St. Joseph, Mo., and she is considering entering the women's national in Chicago.

Miss Guth was something of an unknown in 1934, the first year she played in the District tournament. In fact, there was considerable eyebrow lifting when she was assigned a handicap of two strokes, given to only the topnotch players in the District.

But the one who figured the handicaps knew what she was about, because Miss Guth won the tournament that year, defeating Mrs. I. S. Hynes in the final at Westwood.

Just to prove her victory was no fluke, she went on to win in 1935 and again in 1936.

Then came the cry "Who is going to stop Sara Guth?" It looked as though she would have the championship wrapped up as long as she cared to but she slipped a cog and Mrs. Robert I. Caughey scored an upset triumph over her last summer.

Now, Miss Guth knew she wasn't the perfect golfer. She realized that there were plenty of weak spots in her game and she set about to improve them. She entered some of the sectional and national tournaments with a view to getting a close-up of the play of the big shots.

She went to Florida this spring and played in the seven tournaments. She qualified in all of them, too, her best qualifying score being a 77. She went to the final in the Bellaire tournament and lost to Patty Berg, the Minneapolis youngster, whom Miss Guth regards as the best player she saw in the South.

"I saw a number of things which were wrong with my game," she said, "and I am going to work to correct them."

She found the Florida courses easier to play than those in this district, but not so interesting. That's because most of the Florida links are laid out on flat ground.

As to the wear and tear on a young woman making the winter tour, she said that she found the golf enjoyable as well as instructive, and thought it a good clinic to try one's game.

Sodality League Enters Municipal Baseball Play

The South Side Sodality League is the first group to re-enter the Municipal Baseball Association for the coming season, it was announced yesterday at the City Recreation Department offices.

The league entry, filed by Representative Anton Sestric, thus corrects an impression given two weeks ago, when it was announced the circuit would not compete this year because it was not represented at a preliminary meeting.

Four teams comprise the league, St. Agatha, St. Joseph Croatian, Holy Trinity Slovaks and Assumption. William Gabel is St. Agatha manager, N. Jardic will lead St. Joseph and W. Gabris will direct Holy Trinity. Assumption's pilot has not been named.

Officers of the league are: J. Cijulka, president; Joseph Sestric, treasurer, and W. Gabris, secretary.

The entry of "old" leagues—those who were in the Muny last year—will close at 11:30 a. m. next Saturday morning at room 330 Municipal Courts Building. The final date was extended a week by committee vote last Friday. "New" teams can file entries on April 18 and 19.

At least 16 senior leagues have indicated they will enter this season, the twenty-sixth year of competition in the organization. Roy Newsom expects about the same number of junior and intermediate leagues as were in action last year, six.

A meeting of all league representatives will be held about April 21 to make final plans for the season.

Y. M. C. A. INDUSTRIAL GOLF TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD MAY 14

The qualifying round of the twelfth annual Y. M. C. A. Industrial golf tournament will be played at the Country Club, 11050 Riverview drive, May 14, it was announced following the meeting of the committee.

This tournament is under the jurisdiction of the Industrial Athletic Association, and any industry that is a member of this organization may enter as many individuals as desired. They must, however, have been employed by and on the payroll of the company they represent on or before March 14, 1938. Entry blanks and other information may be secured from J. S. Whitmore, 1528 Locust.

ATKINS REQUESTS APRIL 29 AS DATE FOR BOXING SHOW

Professional boxing which has been dormant here for about two months, due, in a measure to amateur tournaments, is to have a revival within the next three weeks. Larry Atkins, associated with Tom Packs, has asked Commissioner Russell Murphy for a date, preferably April 29 when he plans a program at the Municipal Auditorium.

TATTERDEMALION WINS $10,000 TROPICAL PARK HANDICAP

MUCHO GUSTO IS FAR BACK IN FIELD OF 11

Total Mutuel Play of $34-252,022 for Florida Season — State Received $1,200,466.81.

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., April 9. — Thomas J. Healey's Tatterdemalion missed the track record by a full second when he won the $10,000 added Tropical Special today—but it was the only record that failed to fall as Florida ended its 96-day thoroughbred racing season.

Miami's two horse tracks, Hialeah Park and Tropical Park, enjoyed a record pari-mutuel play of $34,252,022, a record attendance of 822,458, and contributed a record State tax of $1,200,446.81.

An average crowd of 8588 wagered $356,793 a day.

The total pari-mutuel increase was $4,426,858 over last season, when all previous records were established. Attendance showed a gain of 65,523, with the State receiving $113,865.44 more than it did last season.

The State collected 3 per cent of the pari-mutuel play, with additional attendance and occupational taxes.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 saw Tatterdemalion, a five-year-old purchased last fall from C. V. Whitney, finish 2½ lengths ahead of T. D. Buhl's Gyral in the mile and one-sixteenth closing feature at Tropical Park.

With Jockey Eddie Arcaro up, Tatterdemalion stepped the route in 1:44, a second slower than the track record, paid $10.80 for a $2 win ticket, and brought his owner $8000.

Gyral, a 22-to-1 shot ridden by Kenneth McCombs, finished four lengths ahead of the Millsdale stable's entry and paid $18.50 to place. Infantry, with J. Lynch in the saddle, beat out the Darby Dan Farm's Francesco by a nose for the show award, paying $5.

Mucho Gusto, Coppage & Ramsey's 2-to-1 favorite—unbeaten in four previous starts here, weakened after threatening halfway around, and finished a badly beaten eighth.

Iowa Baseball Team Wins From Concordia, 17-3

Iowa University's baseball team demonstrated its superiority over a local collegiate team for the second time in two years by decisively trouncing Concordia Seminary's nine, 17 to 3, before several hundred shivering fans at the Seminarians' field. Last year, St. Louis U.'s Billikens lost to Iowa 16 to 1.

For a time, it appeared that the local team would score an upset as it scored its three runs in the first inning as the result of a walk, a single and Elmer Muehly's home run to centerfield. Freddy Wolff, the Concordia starting hurler, had turned down the Iowa batters in order in their half of the first and in the second inning the first Hawkeye player reached first after being hit with a ball by Wolff, who had four strikeouts in the two frames.

The visitors hit their stride in the following inning, following Catcher Dave West's triple with five singles to gain a three-run lead over Concordia.

Soldan and Blewett will start the delayed City High School League baseball season tomorrow afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium. The opening tripleheader scheduled yesterday was postponed because of wet grounds.

Beaumont, the defending champion, will face real competition in Central, its first opponent, Tuesday, because the Red and Black has six veterans back from last season. They are Walter Serb, former infielder, now pitcher; Jim McDermott, Douglas Dobbins, Charles Huber and Bill Sanders, outfielders, and Bob Kinker, catcher. Vernon Bradburn is the Central coach.

The third of yesterday's postponed games, that between Roosevelt and Cleveland, will be played Wednesday. The afternoon games are scheduled to start at 4:15 o'clock.

McKinley, the seventh member of the league, will begin its campaign next Saturday against Blewett.

In addition to the McKinley-Blewett game next Saturday, two other league contests are scheduled. In the morning game at 10 o'clock, Beaumont will oppose Roosevelt and in the first afternoon encounter at 1 o'clock, Cleveland will play Central.

Prep League Opens Wednesday.

The Preparatory League campaign will start Wednesday when McBride plays at St. Louis University High School and Western Military Academy invades Christian Brothers' College High School.

AUTOMATIC Gear Shifting at Its Best

HUDSON'S SELECTIVE AUTOMATIC SHIFT TRANSMISSION MEANS 4 LESS THINGS TO DO EVERY TIME YOU SHIFT A GEAR!

Drive three miles . . . in ordinary city traffic. Count the number of times you shift a gear. You'll find the total is around 29 . . . probably more.

Now—multiply this by 4 . . . and you get a good idea of how many less things you have to do with Hudson's Selective Automatic Shift Transmission.

But that's not all. This greatest of all driving features clears the front floor of gears and levers . . . gives you real 3-passenger comfort, in Hudson's 55-inch front seat.

To stop, you simply push the brake pedal . . . no need ever to touch the clutch . . . or to move the gear control until you are ready to start up again. All this is possible because Selective Automatic Shift Transmission is far more than merely a hand gear lever moved to a different location. It is AUTOMATIC shifting at its best . . . and an EXCLUSIVE Hudson advantage.

100-ACRE TRACT ON BAXTER ROAD IS PURCHASED

Kramer J. Weissenborn Buys Old Hemp Farm South of Clayton Road —North and South Road Deal.

A 100-acre tract on Baxter road, about an eighth of a mile south of Clayton road, has been purchased by Kramer J. Weissenborn, department manager of the Weissenborn Coal Co., through W. B. Shelp & Co., realtors. It was owned by the Joseph L. Hemp estate.

Ninety acres of the tract lie on the east side of Baxter road and 10 acres on the west side. There is a Baxter road frontage of approximately 1400 feet, with a depth extending eastwardly 2400 feet. A land mark is a log cabin reputed to be 125 years old.

The purchase was made as a speculative investment with plans for dividing the tract into five and 10-acre plots for high class residences. Weissenborn will erect a handsome residence there for his own occupancy, it was stated. He now lives at 750 Kent road.

The tract is approximately 12 miles west of the city limits. It was known as the Hemp farm. The sale price was not disclosed.

Adjoining on the north is a 100-acre tract at the southeast corner of Baxter and Clayton roads, which is pointed out as an eligible site for a high class residential development.

While a number of offers have been forthcoming, the Baxter road purchase is the largest involving acreage in this area recently concluded, according to real estate men.

Another purchase of noteworthy significance was that by Jacob Rubin & Sons of seven and three-quarters acres on the east side of Brentwood boulevard, at its intersection with Red Bud avenue in Richmond Heights. The tract is about a half mile south of Clayton road.

Plans of the purchasers contemplate improving the site with bungalows ranging from $5000 to $6500. Alternating in five and six rooms with one and two baths, the buildings will occupy lots 50 by 133 feet each. There will be ground available for approximately 49 or 50 bungalows, it was stated.

Situated just north of the Morris School in Richmond Heights, the tract is regarded as highly desirable for buildings of this type.

The land was owned by the Frank B. Kuhn estate, represented by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. The valuation given it in the ne-

The 13-week total for 1938 amounted to $658,785,000, a gain of 17 per cent over the $519,062,000 for the 1937 12-week first quarter.

HALF CITY BLOCK IS PURCHASED BY PRESENT TENANT

Salvage Co. Buys Entire Frontage on North Side of La Beaume Street Between Broadway and Ninth

A half city block on the north side of La Beaume street, between Broadway and Ninth street, has been acquired by the General Iron and Auto Salvage Co. The site, which is vacant, has been occupied by the purchaser under a lease for the past six years.

The Mullin-Walters Realty Co. was instrumental in effecting the sale. The price paid was not disclosed. The property was owned by the Fannie Todd Clark estate.

The site has a frontage on La Beaume of 301 feet and of 130 feet on both Broadway and Ninth, or a total frontage on the three streets of 561 feet. It was one of the largest sites available in this district, which is composed largely of major industrial concerns.

The General Iron & Auto Salvage Co., of which Sam Wool is president, will improve the site with buildings to meet requirements of its business. The Pickel Marble Co. formerly occupied this entire half block for more than 50 years.

The plant of the Hall & Brown Wood Working Machinery Co. occupies the adjoining site at the southwest corner of Broadway and Tyler, comprising approximately a half block in area. The Federal Cold Storage plant, at 1800 North Broadway, is directly opposite the ground acquired.

The West Side Refrigeration Service has purchased the two-story building at 7100-02 Page boulevard, owned by the Medart estate, through the Mullin-Walters Realty Co., Inc.

The purchaser will remodel and alter the building to conform with its requirements. It has occupied half of the first floor of the structure for more than five years. Increased business made necessary larger quarters.

O'Fallon Street Sale.

The half city block fronting on the north side of O'Fallon street, between Seventh and Eighth streets, has been purchased by I. M. Scheibe, president of Consolidated Forwarding, Inc., which operates a fleet of trucks.

Now vacant, the site will be improved with a truck freight terminal for which the location is regarded as especially suitable.

gotiations was not revealed. The Harry M. Fine Real Estate Co. handled the deal.

Rubin & Sons have been in the vanguard of building operations in the Clayton area, notably in Moorlands Addition, where they have erected a number of high class apartment buildings, financed by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co.

The Manhasset apartment project launched on the north side of Eager road, west of Brentwood boulevard (North and South road), has awakened interest in the section south of Clayton road on the part of professional builders, who apparently had overlooked this area. Comprising seven groups of buildings, with a total of 354 three and four room apartments, the Manhasset project will involve more than $2,000,000, according to Preston J. Bradshaw, the architect.

The Frank B. Kuhn estate purchased from Rubin & Sons, the southwest corner of Clara and Ashland avenues, through the Harry M. Fine Real Estate Co. The site is improved with two two-story buildings, one consisting of two stores and four apartments, while the other is a six-family apartment structure. The former stands on the corner part of the site and the latter on adjoining ground on Clara avenue. The site has a frontage on Clara of 108 feet and on Ashland of 135 feet.

These buildings, obviously, were given by Rubin & Sons in part payment for the above mentioned Brentwood boulevard.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS

The sensible man pauses

HE REVIEWS his circumstances. His life insurance, his securities, his real estate, his job—all come before him, and he is content with the knowledge that everything is in order for his family when he no longer is the guide and counselor.

But there is something more to think about. The tragedy relentlessly approaches. A heart-rending experience awaits his wife, and if her loss were not the utmost she could bear, there are the nerve-racking details of arranging for her husband's funeral. This should be provided against.

THE ROBERT J. AMBRUSTER
PRE-ARRANGED FUNERAL PLAN

The sensible man, mindful of all this, turns to a means to spare his wife from any intrusion of business matters concerned with his funeral.

It is no more morbid to consider provision for a funeral than it is to take out life insurance or to make a will. A conference to clarify this overture is invited. Appointments may be made over Cabany 2522.

Many Parties Arranged for Spring Brides

Young Women Whose Weddings Are Set for Post-Lenten Season Are Center of Social Interest.

SOCIAL affairs for the next few weeks will center largely around after-Easter weddings. Beginning late next week almost a dozen parties will be given in honor of Miss Augusta Langdon Connett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Carroll Connett III, and Charles Wesley Disbrow Jr., who are to be married April 30.

The first hostess is to be Miss Josephine Fusz, daughter of Eugene A. Fusz, who will give a large cocktail party Saturday, April 23. The following afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schlafly, the bride's uncle and aunt, will give a similar party at their home in St. Clair County, Ill. Monday afternoon, April 24, Miss Helen Cain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Cain, will entertain a group of Miss Connett's friends for luncheon and a cosmetics shower, at the Cain home, 4353 Westminster place.

Four debutantes of the past season are planning parties. After Miss Cain's luncheon, Miss Catherine Cushman and Miss Betty Berkley will give a cocktail party at the home of Miss Cushman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Cushman. Miss Eleanor Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Scott Carter, has invited a group for cocktails, the following night, and Wednesday afternoon, April 27, Miss Virginia Block, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Karl Morgan Block, will give a tea at which Miss Connett will share honors with Miss Marian Bankson of Knoxville, Tenn., a former classmate of Miss Block at Hollins College, who will arrive that week to visit her. That night Miss Eleanor Schlafly, Miss Connett's cousin, who is to be a bridesmaid, will give a dinner at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Schlafly.

The spinsters' dinner will be given Thursday night, April 28, by the Stevens twins, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Donne, at their home. A dinner after rehearsal the following night will be given by Mr. Disbrow's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Dennig, of Brentmoor Park. Mrs. Dennig is to be matron of honor. Mr. Disbrow will arrive in St. Louis from his home in Boston in time for the pre-wedding festivities.

Another bride of April 30, Miss Ruth Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. L. Schmidt of Webster Groves, and her fiance, Franklin Jackes Cornwell, are to be honored at pre-wedding parties. Saturday, Mrs. Marquard Heil Braun, until recently Miss Virginia Koken, will entertain at luncheon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. F. Koken, also of Webster Groves.

Friday, April 22, a similar affair will be given by Mrs. Henry Edgar Kelley Jr., a bridesmaid, of 7527 Buckingham drive. Dance Program By Juniors at Woman's Club

Annual Entertainment for Senior Members to Take Place at Club House Afternoon of April 21.

CHARACTERISTIC dances of five continents will constitute the major part of a show to be staged by junior members of the St. Louis Woman's Club Thursday afternoon, April 21, in the ballroom of the clubhouse, 4600 Lindell boulevard. The rest of the entertainment will be made up of songs and music to accompany the dancers, and style parades, arranged so that a group of mannequins will follow each dance act and designed to show the influence of foreign countries on American attire of this season.

For Africa, the committee in charge has chosen the familiar Egyptian dances in which costumes feature elaborate headdresses ornamented with snake heads, and long carefully fitted shirred gowns. For South America there will be the jarabe Argentina. For Asia, Bayaderes (Nautch-girls) will execute the swaying, arm posture Indian and East Indian dances used at lavish entertainments. The minuet, which originated in the early French courts, and old-fashioned Viennese waltzes, in which participants wear full authentic costumes, will represent the dancers of Europe.

The Virginia reel, with the big apple for variety and the march of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs thrown in for additional comedy relief, have been selected for the United States.

The show has been planned in honor of the senior members, in accordance with a practice established by the juniors several years ago. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock in the club dining room, and already there are more than 100 reservations.

Mrs. T. Middleton Levis heads the entire junior committee and Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr. is general chairman of the entertainment, called Junior Day.

Miss Elizabeth Cordell and Miss Donne Tyler Stevens, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin McDonald Stevens, will sing duets during two of the dance acts. Dancers themselves, who have been in rehearsal almost daily, include Mrs. E. H. Booth Jr., Mrs. Louis S. Dennig, Mrs. Arthur H. Feuerbacher Jr., Miss Josephine Fusz, Miss Judith Griffin, Miss Jane Porter Winter, Miss Bliss Morfit, Miss Susan Meston, Miss Harriet and Miss Betty Hulburd, Miss Dorothy Grote, Mrs. E. G. WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, April 9.

WITH Easter late this year the tourist tide will be high for a longer time than usual especially as 5000 attending the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution will augment the stream of visitors Easter week.

A group of honorary presidents-general of the society will be in attendance including Mrs. Grace Lincoln Hall Brosseau of New York, Mrs. George Maynard Minor of Connecticut, Mrs. Russell William Magna of Massachusetts, Mrs. George Thatcher Guernsey of Kansas.

Mrs. Roosevelt takes an interest in the tourist groups that inspect the White House and has personally conducted several parties around the mansion herself.

How news gets out in Washington would make a fascinating book. President Coolidge never understood how the news about his electric horse reached the public. The answer is simple. The "horse" was ailing and an electrician was called in to repair it. Somehow the secret got out that way.

One day the late Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson called up a bride-to-be to tell her he could not be an attendant at her approaching wedding because the illness of the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson had taken a serious turn. The bride-elect told a newspaper friend who published the story.

One stormy night Secretary of State Bryan begged a lift at a church where he had been giving a lecture. Inadvertently he disclosed that he had been visiting M. Dumba, the Austrian Minister that afternoon, a fact that was news with a large N.

Miss Jessie Wilson drove to Baltimore to place an order for part of her trousseau with firms in that city before her engagement to Francis Bowes Sayre, now Under-secretary of State was announced. Next morning several newspapers told of the engagement as a rumor and even gave the approximate date of the wedding.

A newspaper man in the days of the first Roosevelt to be President talking to an official detained at his office late learned that the overtime work was due to the fact that President Theodore Roosevelt had decided to send the United States Navy on a peace visit to Japan.

PART SIX ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 10, 1938. PAGES 1—8H

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, April 9.

NO CITY in the world is as brutal as New York in ridding traffic of obsolete vehicles which might still be a relief from the uniform and fatuously streamlined motor cars of the most up-to-the-minute vintage. Private horse carriages, with the exception of one or two in the possession of determined little old ladies who now and then venture to the Bank of Fifth Avenue in them, have long since vanished.

There are fewer than a score of public horse rigs, hansoms, victorias and occasional sleighs on the rank in the Plaza and, so far as this department knows, there is only a single unique electric brougham left, although to our personal knowledge there are several around Boston, not to mention an ancient Winton so venerable that it has no windscreen and drives from an upright wheel.

There was a time, not many years since, when various makes of automobiles had individuality and some distinction. Now, with two or three exceptions, including the Rolls, whose manufacturers are possessed of some taste and know that no automobile should be driven at a speed where streamlining is of any slightest mechanical benefit, they all look alike and, to these old eyes at least, far from distinguished. A few old sea-going Pierces, with their noble lines of 20 years ago, and a Stutz Bearcat roadster or so, would brighten up the city no end.

—o—o—

Only last week we noted with distinct satisfaction and a warm glow of triumph an aged and vastly disreputable junk wagon, illustrated with clanging bells and drawn by a spavined veteran at a snail's pace down the precise, diametric center of Madison avenue. A leash of shiny and identical motor cars three blocks long fretted, honked and became hysterical in its wake, with no more chance of passing than a sane bill in Congress. From the pleasure manifested by any number of pedestrians, who paused, beamed and nearly broke into applause at this rout of pompous modernity, it seemed as though someone might run for office on a platform of a Stanley Steamer, for every crosstown street and a big, slow brewer's dray every quarter mile of avenue.

—o—o—

HAVING FOR THE LAST three or four years upset the esthetic equilibrium of the world of ceramics, not to mention the social midsts of Manhattan and Cleveland, Russell Aitken, a sort of Noel Coward of the realm of pottery, has set the town by the ears again with his current exhibit at the Walker Galleries. A protege of such notables as Mrs. Henry R. Luce, Mrs. Charles Suydam Cutting, O'Donnell Iselin, Douglas Fairbanks and Mrs. Juliana Force (in an artistic way only, since he has substantial personal means), Aitken moves in a midst of fashionable and solvent surrealism and the swooning adulation of the exquisites to whom modernistic art, the ballet and the literature of Gertrude Stein are the faintly perfumed breath of life. His current triumph is called "Ambassador of El Morocco" and represents a zebra-mounted figure in a gunmetal tailcoat that can scarcely be anybody but Jerome Zerbe, and which is, appropriately enough, displayed sou cloche, for all the world like nothing so much as a stuffed Victorian canary. Jerome, dazzled, delighted and bewildered by it all, stoutly maintains there isn't a suggestion of satire in the confection and has stood, looking at himself, several afternoons a week in various enraptured poses.

—o—o—

Aitken's most notable figure before the Zerbe number was of a woman with clocks on the bosom, lamb chops sprouting from her shoulders, with a fried egg in one hand, a bright blue fish in the other and surrounded by miniature football players on roller skates, carrying guitars. Perhaps this wasn't sarcastic, either, but there was a school of thought—— Anyway, while it hasn't caused the stir which a few years since burbled happily around the performance of "Four Saints in Three Acts" by Negro actors dressed in cellophane, Aitken's show is what might be called the succes fou of the week.

—o—o—

REPUTEDLY THE HIGHEST PAID CHEF in private service in the United States and one of the last to flourish as the kitchen overlord of a vast establishment, where entertaining is done on the old lavish scale of Victorian times, is Joseph Donon, chef de cuisine for Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombley, who is by way of being one of the most authentic of what Maury Paul calls the town's "great ladies." M. Donon, who once worked with Escoffier, and before his present employment was chef to Henry Clay Frick, has a salary which tops that of many celebrated executives and lives the ordered existence of a man of substantial means. At Mrs. Twombley's Newport estate he has a separate villa of his own, his own staff of personal servants and his own sailing boat, in which his family enjoys fishing during the summer season in the reaches of Buzzard's Bay. When Mrs. Twombley entertains, and she does it frequently, there is no nonsense about economy, and the tradesman's vans are days in advance, delivering hodsful of foie gras and whole greenhouses of orchids. There are seldom fewer than 20 for dinner and M. Donon records that the regular daily delivery of lobsters never runs under 50 pounds.

—o—o—

His own specialty is terrapin, perhaps the most authentic of all widely touted luxury foods, and the turtles of Maryland tidewater are busy supplying M. Donon with working material for terrapin Maryland, terrapin Baltimore, terrapin Washington and half a dozen secret dishes unknown even to De Gouy's "Fish and Game Cook Book." M. Donon is a fanatic in the matter of correct French nomenclature, and it is illuminating to note that on a recent menu for a dinner of Les Amis d'Escoffier, of which he is a moving spirit and chairman of the permanent committee, the hors d'oeuvres appeared under the caption "Avant l'Oeuvre" and the lobster course was "Le Homard a l'Americaine."

—o—o—

M. DONON FINDS TIME for plenty of outside activities, is general secretary of the American Culinary Foundation and managing editor of "The Culinary Review," as well as chairman of the Annual Salon of Culinary Art and member of half a dozen organizations such as the Vatel Club and Society Culinaire Philanthropique. Although his salary may not top those of the chefs in great hotels and restaurants, M. Donon ranks with the tip-toppers in the most caste-conscious of professions because he is in private service and the absolute master of his own kitchens, unharassed by stewards, accountants and purchasing agents.

HONEYCHILE of HOLLYWOOD

There Is Only One, and She's Patricia Wilder of Georgia; Native Wit and Ability Are Advancing Her to the Front.

By H. H. NIEMEYER

A STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE POST-DISPATCH

HONEYCHILE WILDER

HOLLYWOOD, April 9.

THERE'S only one "Honeychile" in Hollywood. She's the original and only. Her right name's Patricia Wilder, and in a town where every young woman is a stereotyped copy of every one of her sisters from waved hair to makeup—and not excepting mind—"Honeychile's" in a class by herself. She says and does what she thinks, which is something even more than refreshing to find down Glamor street at its intersection with Phoney boulevard.

To be sure, to begin with, Honeychile's good to look at. In fact she's what the folks down in Macon, Ga.—whence she hails—call "right purty." She can match any screen hopeful in Hollywood in the way of profile or charm. But that isn't what really makes Honeychile the phenomenon she is. It's something else, something different, candid and straight-forward that hits from the shoulder. It's something in her speech for one thing.

It's like this: the other day on the "Little Miss Broadway" set at Twentieth Century-Fox where Honeychile has a supporting role with George Murphy, Edna May Oliver, Jimmy Durante, Phyllis Brooks, El Brendel, Donald Meek and a host of other celebrities, in the new Shirley Temple musical, Honeychile suddenly achieved an almost violent dislike for a wise-cracking extra.

"Man," she said with a sharp sideglance, "you'd better mind your tongue, 'cause I'm cookin' up a storm!"

The extra went away in a great hurry, for what he saw brewing in Honeychile's sparkling gray-blue eyes was more huricane than anything else.

And then there's the tale of Honeychile and the traffic cop, which by now has become a treasured Hollywood legend. It was along about twilight, and Honeychile, in her blithe way, was booming along Sunset boulevard in her roadster at a rate obviously in excess of the legal speed limit.

Came the sound of a siren, and Honeychlie, still off day dreaming, pulled over to the curb, while a wrathful policeman drew up beside her. Tilting back his cap with all the portentousness that only a righteous policeman can commandeer, the policeman shot Honeychile a glassy stare, and proceeded to fill out a ticket.

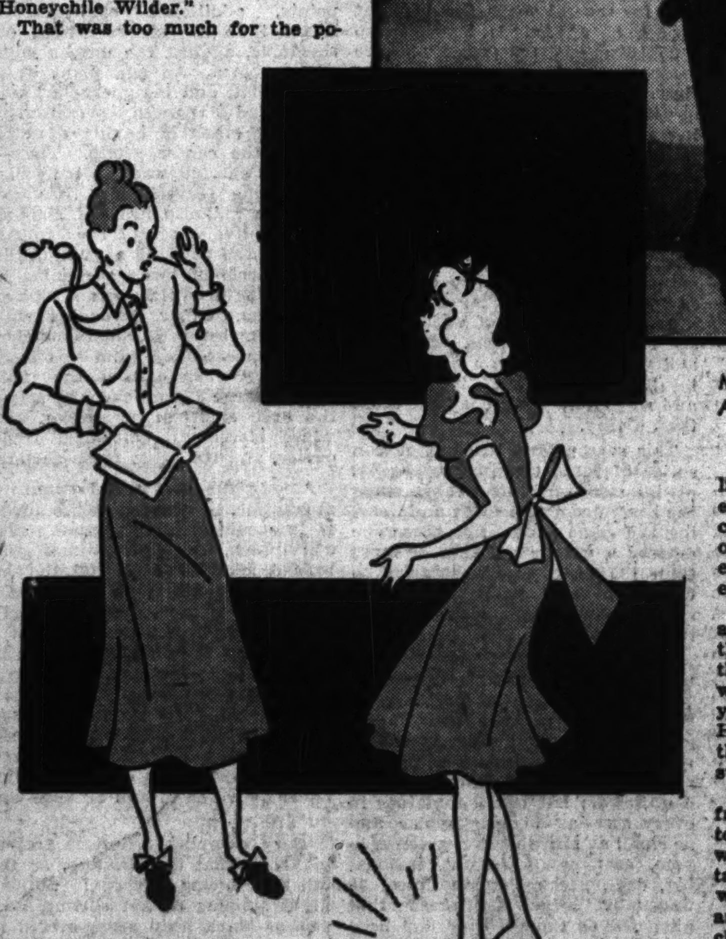
"Say," said Honeychile, finally aware of what was happening, and thereby descending out of the clouds with a crash, "you can't do this to me."

"Why not?" snapped back the cop.

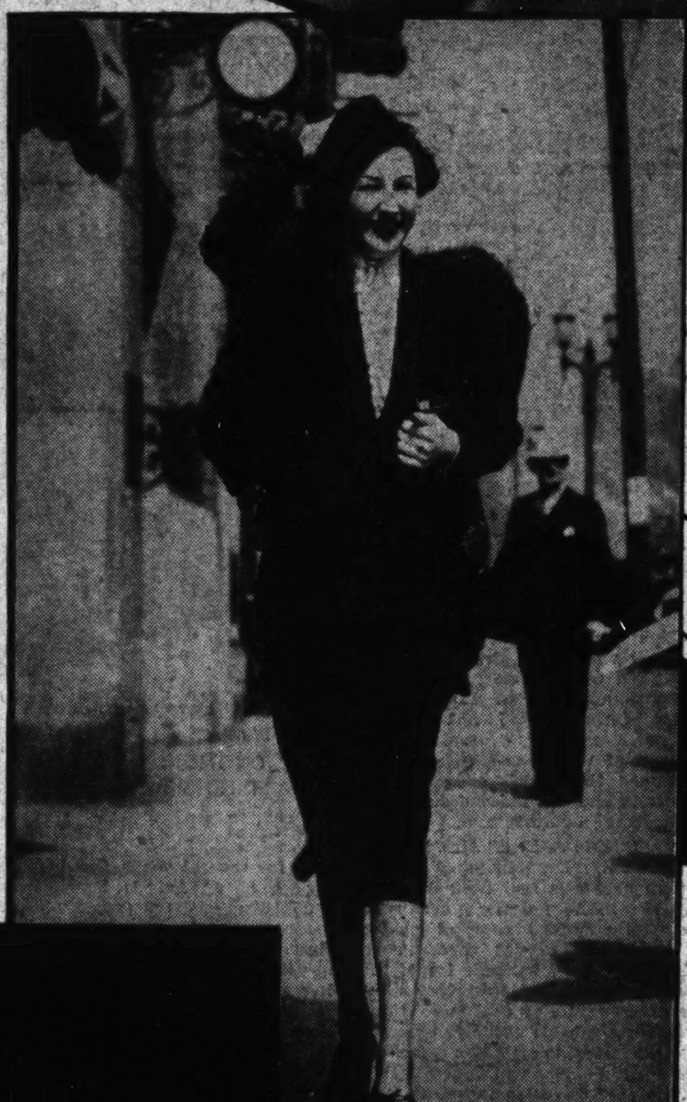
Slowly Honeychile sat up straight in the car, then leaned over toward the policeman, and wagged a threatening forefinger under his nose.

"You just can't," she said, as if she were uttering a decision from the Supreme Bench, "'cause I'm Honeychile Wilder."

That was too much for the policeman. He could think of nothing else but to let her go. And Honeychile went, taking it as a matter of course that Honeychile is Honeychile and what she says goes—even with men in uniform.



SHE WENT TO CLASS WITHOUT SHOES.



MISS WILDER MARCHING DOWN A HOLLYWOOD STREET ON A GUSTY SPRING DAY.

In a town where gags are stacked and dealt as neatly as aces from the bottom of a deck, a story like this was bound to get around. And when others, just as fabulous and yet as true, began to circulate, Honeychile's reputation as something new and wonderful and strange zoomed.

Four or five other little girls from down South thereupon began to give out the tale that they too were known down on the old plantation as Honeychile. But it didn't work. Their gags weren't funny, and their ruses didn't click. Honeychile remains unchallenged, unique in her own domain of whimsical living.

But you mustn't get the idea that Honeychile's frivolous, for she isn't. "I'm a darn good cook," she insists to her friends. And what she has done for them in the way of fried chicken, and beaten biscuits, and steak and mushrooms—whenever they questioned her kitchen prowess—has proved that assertion to the hilt.

Honeychile was born in Macon on a Sept. 9, the daughter of Oscar and Laura Wilder. After attending Macon's public grade schools, and the Miller High School, she completed her education at Miss Turnbull's School in Virginia. It was at this exclusive finishing school for well-bred Southern misses that Honeychile cut one of her widest swaths.

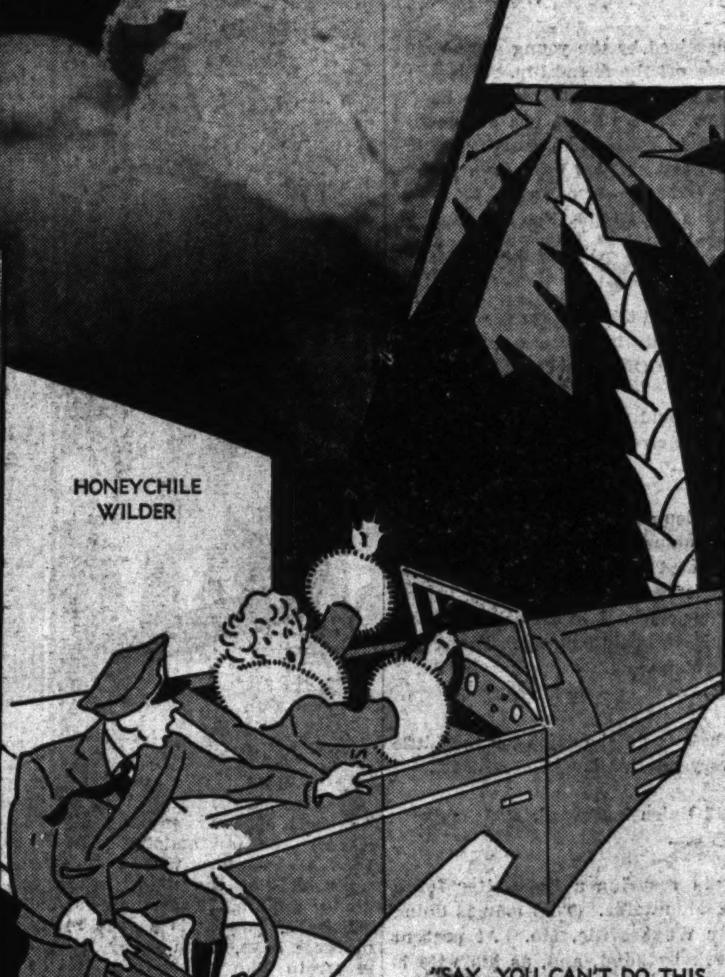
—o-o—

THERE was that day, for example, when Honeychile's feet "just bothered her." So she appeared at class that morning barefoot.

"Miss Wilder," the teacher addressed her in iciest tones, "will you please explain your reason for coming to this class without shoes?"

All around her the girls destined to become the next year's crop of Southern Belles, did their best to repress their giggles, as Honeychile simulated a vacuous state. But when Honeychile delivered herself of the following, in an elaborated drawl that would have made a Hollywood hillbilly sound like a rank Northerner, the girls broke into hysterics and the class had to be dismissed.

"Wha ah cum fum," observed Honeychile, "they got to cotch us Wilders afo they kin put shoes on 'em!"



"SAY, YOU CAN'T DO THIS TO ME!"

All the same discipline finally prevailed, and on the next day Honeychile came to class properly shod.

It was at Miss Turnbull's that Honeychile met the girl who subsequently developed into her dearest friend—Patricia Randolph. Patricia and Honeychile have an apartment together in Beverly Hills now.

"I guess," explains Patricia, "that Honeychile sort of needs someone to take care of her. Somebody to make sure that she gets to work on time, and puts her money in the bank."

The friendship of these two youngsters is really a charming thing to behold, and their devotion to each other is one of the unsung Castor-and-Pollux sagas of Hollywood.

"I'll never forget"—Patricia has a rich Southern drawl, too—"when I first saw Honeychile. I was sitting in the school garden, and then wham! She came skidding around the gravelled driveway in a crazy big blue car. I said to myself, 'I want to know that girl'; and ever since we've been the closet friends."

While Honeychile is working in a scene of "Little Miss Broadway," in which she depicts the role of a wisecracking hotel PBX operator, Patricia remains in the dressing room knitting. Both girls are accomplished needlewomen — well, anyway, pretty accomplished—and spend all of their available spare time on the set in knitting or doing needlepoint.

THE WHOLE OF LIFE

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT has taken a long time to find the courage to tell you what I'm going to say—

And even yet, it's a bitter, hard thing to do . . . feeling the old agony swell again . . . and knowing, also, that many will think that I could not have loved him much, or I would not be able to put it into words.

But there is a strange thing about a job like this . . . a job which ministers to so much human misery. At first you give just small and measured portions of yourself. But after a while you see that you've no right to hold anything back—if the giving can help . . . that all experience, no matter how intimate, becomes a sort of communion . . . "the bread and wine" of life which decent folk should share.

And so I'm telling this—for the sake of those who may be passing through such hours too . . .

—o-o—

THE TIME had come. They'd waited as long as they dared . . . doing everything human power could do . . . hoping . . . hoping . . . But now it was no use. They'd have to tell me that my boy would die. But how could they say this to me, who loved him with such fierce intensity that I'd not even thought it possible for us to part? How force such knowledge to my blind, drugged heart?

And yet it must be done. And so the gentle Doctor asked if I'd come with him and rest. And, stupefied with misery, I went—and sat there, hardly hearing, as his voice began.

"Life was a great thing," he said. "A great privilege. It was wonderful to see a life that had been lived—full."

"A life that had stood open to whatever came—not merely sunshine, but black storms as well. Lives that knew all there was to know—such lives were like deep reservoirs of strength to weaker ones. These people who had never known grief . . . whose years had brought them only easy job . . . these people were not happy, after all. Only the broken-hearted ones know how to live . . . only those who have had it all, know how to give—"

"Only the broken-hearted?" Why did the light go gray? What was he meaning . . . trying so hard to say? I rose . . . and swayed . . . then dimly heard him call . . .

"Elsie, stand up! Be brave enough . . . to take it all!

—o-o—

"BE BRAVE ENOUGH to take it all!" Often and often I've thought of those words since, thanking God for the blessed wisdom in that gentle doctor's heart . . . a wisdom that had realized that only a challenge would give me courage to face what had to come . . . or leave life worth the struggle I must make.

"Only the broken-hearted ones know how to give . . . only those who've had it all, know how to live."

So often we've railed against grief . . . crying that it has cheated us . . . crippled us . . . taking the meaning from life . . .

But that was not so. Life was never really grown-up till grief had come. People had never lived till most of them had died. . . . The grave was as vitally a part of life as the cradle. Out of them both—birth came.

Don't fly from sorrow, or rave and sob at grief. Stand up . . . Grow up . . . Be brave enough to take the whole of life!

Hip-Length Coat

The bolero jacket that has been so much in the limelight for evening wear and has proved the most popular means of transforming a formal frock into one for informal wear, has some competition from the hip length fitted coat. Lace is being used extensively now for these longer jackets. A typical frock of beige colored organza has a lace flounce of the same shade and a short sleeved coat of the same filmy fabric. Velvet flowers in tones of rose and brown adorn the bodice.

New Costume

If you are looking for a costume which is decidedly new, consider the suit which has a waist-length, bloused jacket. Many style authorities say that it is destined to replace the too-popular bolero and that it looks as well on as many different types of figures. Sleeves that have fullness gathered into tight wrist bands, pockets placed rather high and a collarless neckline are features of a distinctive version.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

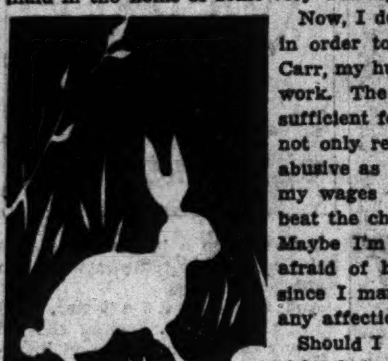
MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM 25 years old and am the mother of four children. I married when I was 16. My husband is four years my senior. He has been out of work for more than a year and I have been working as a maid in the home of some very wealthy people.



Now, I don't mind the work I have to do in order to support my children but, Mrs. Carr, my husband absolutely refuses to hunt work. The money I receive is by no means sufficient for the support of six people. He not only refuses to support me but is very abusive as well. When I refuse to turn all my wages over to him he tells me he will beat the children to death and kill me, too. Maybe I'm a coward, but I'm desperately afraid of him. He has changed so much since I married him that I no longer feel any affection for him.

Should I take the children and leave and risk whatever threats he may make or carry out, or should I stay with him and try to work things out for the best? Please publish this so that someone else who has had a similar experience may advise me. Also, of course, I will be looking forward to advice from you. DESPERATE.

Twenty-five years old, the mother of four children, and married at 16! A tragic story!

If your husband refuses to hunt work, and if he has made threats against the children, I would spend part of my next day off in visiting the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building, where you will find men who have had plenty of experience in handling men who answer your husband's description. They will give you the advice you need so badly, and tell you how you can legally protect yourself and the children from an individual who, from your description, has all the earmarks of a human worm.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE BEEN GOING with a girl for several years. She is about seven years older than I am. She is not popular and has a bad reputation, which I have just lately found out. I don't think I can continue with her because my reputation (which I may say is a good one) is at stake. What should I do? WORRIED.

If you believe you have been deceived by the young woman, I think you are justified in breaking off the friendship. Unless you have committed yourself to an engagement, this should be merely a matter of your own choice. Even though you are engaged, it would be more honorable to attempt to correct the mistake before marriage than afterward. If you have been deceived, you could not be held guilty of breach of promise. However, remember, it is much easier for a girl's reputation to suffer damage than a man's in such a case.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WHAT IS THE CUSTOMARY FEE paid the minister for performing a wedding ceremony? I would appreciate it if you would answer this as soon as possible. A CONSTANT READER.

There is no "customary fee." I would say that $5 is about average for a young couple in modest circumstances.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A 14-YEAR-OLD GIRL. Not long ago I was crippled in an automobile accident. I don't have any amusements that I had before I was injured. My doctor has told me that I must have something to occupy my mind and keep my thoughts from drifting to my injury. He has advised collecting either stamps or coins. I would be very grateful and appreciative if some of your readers would help me. Thank you in advance, and please do not print my name. DOT.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

Would you kindly advise me just how to go about joining the Little Theater? I am 16 years of age and very interested. BETTY.

Write to the Little Theater, 812 Union boulevard.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM ASKING YOUR HELP in securing a typewriter for a very deserving minister in the Ozark Mountains. This man is doing a great work among the people near Waynesville, Mo. At present he and his wife prepare all their work by hand, and, as his wife is an experienced typist, a typewriter would be a great help to them. This couple is rearing a family of five children on a food budget of only $2.50 a week, so any help that is given them will be greatly appreciated. I am enclosing references. Thank you very much.

MRS. W. S. COOK,

214 South Meramec Avenue, Clayton. Telephone PArkview 1558J.

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

HERE IS MY PROBLEM: A number of years ago I went out with a boy (I will call him Ed) all the time. It was a case of mutual attraction, but we quit going together, the greatest difference between us being religion; I didn't see how I could honestly accept the theories which he still expounds vehemently but does not practice.

Several years later Eddie married another girl, although up to the very day of his wedding, Bill, who had become my fiance in the meantime, maintained Eddie was still in love with me.

My own marriage is congenial, but I crave a love deeper than the one I have for my husband. Naturally this leads back to the memories of what might have been.

Now this all comes down to this; we still see this other couple at times, and sometimes I actually find myself wanting to see Eddie. From what I have written, can you analyze this for me: Am I still in love with the other man? Am I dishonest to my husband? Shall I leave him and go back to living my life alone, and avoid seeing this crowd altogether? PUZZLED.

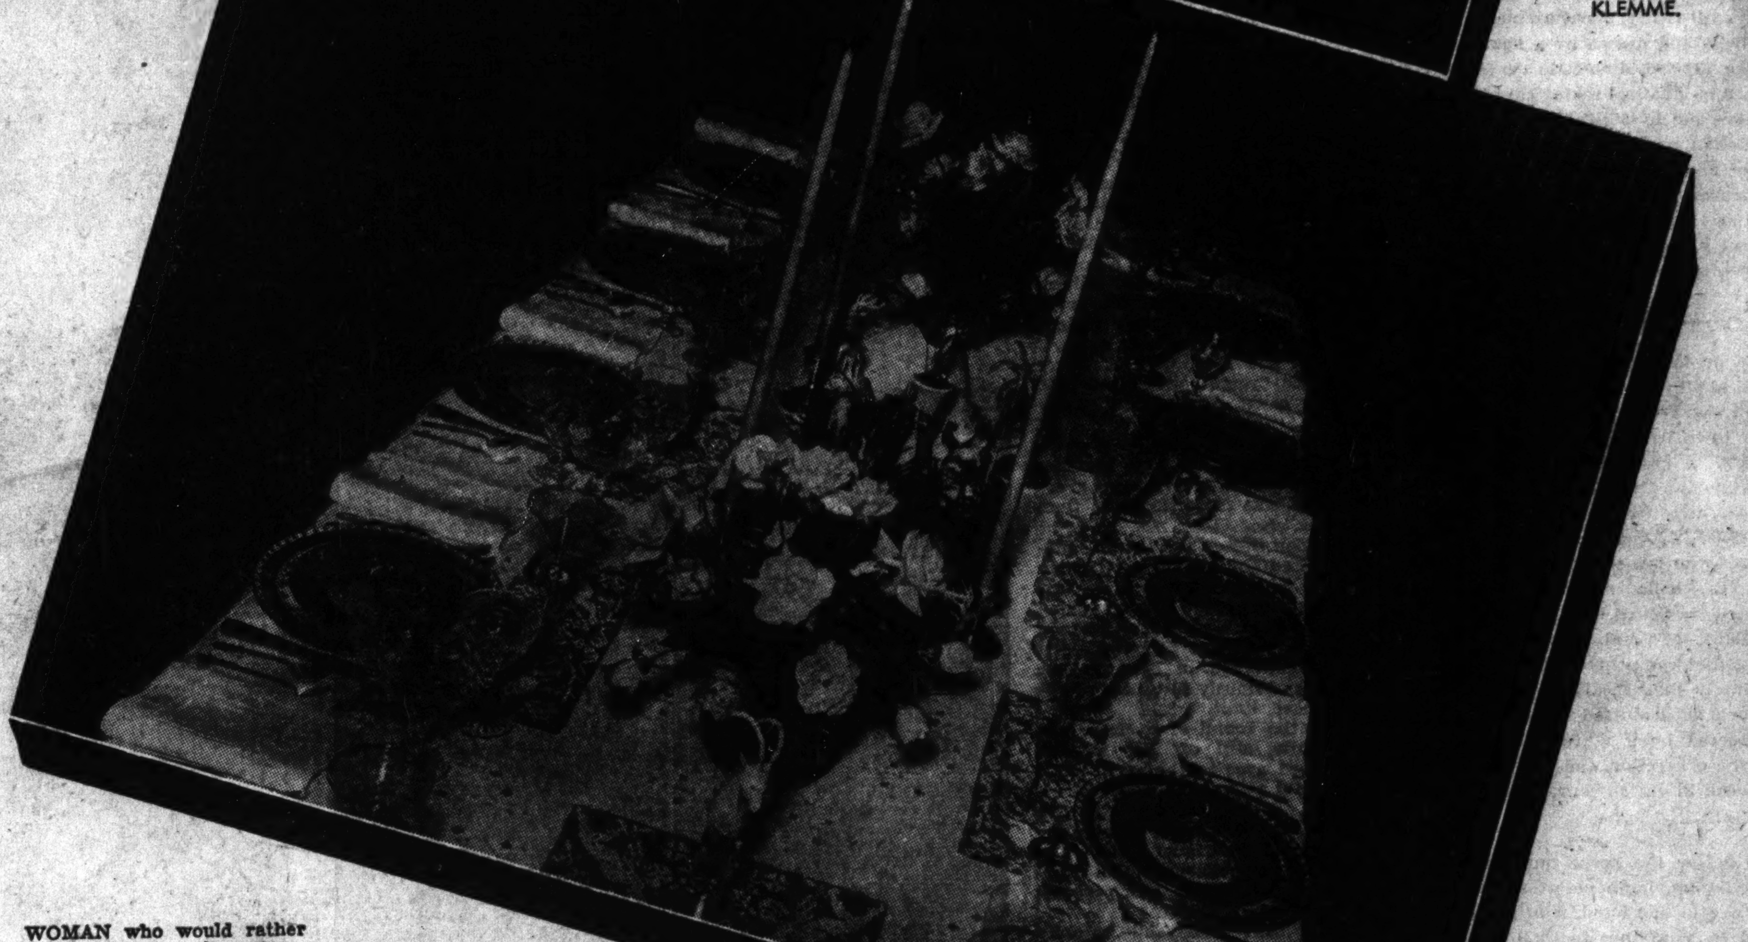
My answer to your questions would be: No, you are not still in love with the other man—you, in your early middle years, are merely enjoying a pleasant (but dangerous) day-dream of "what might have been." I wouldn't say you are downright dishonest with your husband as long as you haven't talked this over with outsiders; rather, let's say that your thoughts are just a bit on the shoddy side. Leave your husband? Assuredly not. As I recall it, the line "Hold fast to that which is good" was not directed at wives (or husbands), but it will do.

Get busier than you apparently are at this time in some constructive activity, and meanwhile learn to cultivate a deeper appreciation of your husband's good qualities. In doing these things, you may be able to shake off thoughts which have possibilities of doing great harm and lasting damage to several lives, including your own.

MAKES ENTERTAINING AN ARTISTIC ENDEAVOR

By DOROTHY COLEMAN.

MRS. ROLAND KLEMME.



ELABORATE CENTERPIECE ON THE KLEMME DINING TABLE.

A WOMAN who would rather give parties than attend them; who considers entertaining not a chore but an artistic endeavor (and is therefore willing to stay up until 3:30 the night before a dinner molding little squirrels and rabbits of butter) is a true rarity in these days, when many women prefer to take guests to a club or hotel or to delegate to a caterer the details of entertaining in their homes.

Such a rarity is the dark-haired, slender, deceivingly youthful—she has a son at Yale—Mrs. Roland M. Klemme of 320 North Union boulevard, whose reputation as a hostess is widespread. To Mrs. Klemme's amazement, people, even as far away as California, have acknowledged introductions to her with, "Oh, you are the one who has that lovely animal table and the butter squirrels!"

"They are cunning little things, sitting on their haunches, holding in their tiny forepaws a minute bit of parsley," she began. Discussing this subject so dear to Mrs. Klemme, we sat for well over an hour in her lovely English drawing room—she as straight as an Indian on an antique tile coffee table before the deep divan. For several reasons this animal table is Mrs. Klemme's favorite. First of all reasons is her love of the miniature. Then her love of vivid color; the hues of the tiny animals blend perfectly with the complementary appointments of her table. Third is her—and Dr. Klemme's—excusable pride in their unique collection of venetian blown glass figures. "Mine are all dainty, graceful, blown figures," she resumed enthusiastically. "I am completely out of tune with the heavy, grotesque, Mickey Mouse type of thing. One of my pets is not an animal at all, but a perfect little tableau of Adam and Eve under the apple tree—serpent and all."

Mrs. Klemme uses about 50 of her 106-piece collection at one time, placing them on a long mirror. Several are in her favorite color, Chinese lacquer red, which she emphasizes by placing at either end of the table, a glass bowl of like color filled with full-blown talisman roses. On each end of the mirror, is a flower pot, two inches high, matching the bowls in color, and holding tiny live cocoa palms, which lend a tropical touch to this assembly of jungle birds and beasts. Tall red candles are placed in low holders at the four rounded corners of the mirror. A beautifully modeled beige goat, rearing to a height of 10 inches stands midway between the table's edge and the roses, while his more sedate mate graces the opposite end.

"With this setting," Mrs. Klemme continued, "I particularly like to serve cocktails and hors d'oeuvres at the table, for then I can use my tall-stemmed cocktail glasses. I don't like to use them in the drawing room, because I feel that balancing those tippy glasses and hors d'oeuvres when one is not seated at a table destroys equinamity. Besides, the glasses are a perfect complement to the centerpiece, when used in the dining room. They are light as a feather, for they are also of blown glass, with a clear crystal globe between bowl and stem inclosing a tiny animal. And the final touch in keeping with this animal theme is a dainty glass dragon fly, which floats on a rose leaf in each finger bowl. I use the leaf rather than petals, for the dark green is a better background for the delicate colors."

Further emphasizing the predominating color, Mrs. Klemme uses red bordered hors d'oeuvres plates, which rest on pale apricot and gold encrusted service plates. On the buffet are deep red and white girandoles and a matching vase, filled with a spreading bouquet of white flowers. Other tapers, which provide the only light in the dark paneled dining-room, are placed on the serving table, mantel and in window niches on either side of the fireplace. A connecting link of color is used in the living-room; red bowls of more talisman roses decorate the mantel, piano and small tables. To complete this color harmony, the hostess wears a dinner gown, always of that same flamboyant shade of red, though the fabric and style may vary. Perhaps she likes the color, because it so becomes her striking type of beauty, enhanced by the severity of her sleek coiffure.

The animal table is one which Mrs. Klemme has used with success for several years, for different groups of guests. It has been so much discussed that some who are dining with the Klemmes for the first time have even asked that she use it! She is not averse to obliging them. However, she keeps a memorandum book in which she records the menu and decorative detail of each party in order not to repeat.

Another decorative scheme which Mrs. Klemme has worked out in careful detail is one she calls her "yellow rose table." Actually it is designed of clusters of white coral, sea shells, yellow roses, calla lilies and violets, all set in a heavy crystal bowl, an oval, 27 inches long and so shallow that it is little more than a tray.

This season Mrs. Klemme gave a series of three champagne parties, at intervals of two weeks, using the same decor and foods and wearing the same gown. For these she devised a new centerpiece of more than 100 fruits and vegetables so distinctive that many guests are still wondering whom she engaged to "do" her table.

—o-o—

FRUITS and vegetables were piled high on the same long, crystal bowl. There were seven huge, glossy purple egg plants; 18 unusually large, red Japanese persimmons; big snowy white heads of cauliflower; hot house tomatoes in every size—as big as apples and as small as strawberries, green chayote, oranges, grapefruit, lemons; big, dark green Persian limes; 10 unusually large avocadoes that glistened as though they had been shined; large Belgian grapes of dark blue and red; long, graceful clusters of little white seedless grapes; dozens of kumquats, with their leaves attached; and several types of squash. At two opposite points, additional cauliflower—larger than the others—rested on the table, against the unseen edge of the bowl. An egg plant at a third point, and innumerable kumquats and Japanese persimmons gave the effect of having tumbled out of the center group. Then—and this she felt was the truly distinguishing feature—Mrs. Klemme placed a gigantic head of shaded, curly endive against the fourth point of the bowl, as a background for a circle of large gardenias in the center of which was a cluster of violets. Other gardenias with their shiny leaves and more bunches of violets extended from this focal point. At each end of the table stood a large crystal-clear ice swan, the base encircled by smilax and white blossoms. One held fresh caviar, and the other fresh shrimp.

Among the costly and exquisite appointments which are the tools, so to speak, of Mrs. Klemme's creative work, are a yellow and gold brocade cloth, made in Italy by the man who makes the Pope's robes; a lace cloth, more than 150 years old, once used as a bedspread in a Florentine palace, and consequently so long that it hangs to the floor; and a 60-piece set of ruby glass, gold-embossed, with hand-painted scenes of white enamel. This set was made on order for the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia but never delivered to him because war intervened.

The accomplished hostess prefers highly formal entertaining, or the other extreme — casual Sunday night suppers of hot shrimp, curries or black bean soup, served in front of the fireplace. She takes sole responsibility for all such dishes; for the hors d'oeuvres, soup and dessert courses for formal dinners, as well as for the arrangement of the table and its decoration. The making of hors d'oeuvres is to her as much a labor of love as the creation of centerpieces. From her impressively-stocked larder she could concoct almost any delicacy without once having to telephone for supplies.

"However homely it may be considered," Mrs. Klemme said in defense of her enthusiasm, "I feel that the decoration of the table and the planning, both visual and gustatory, of food, may well be placed among the arts. That thought will meet with opposition, I know, from those who think the term 'art' embraces only painting, sculpture, music and so forth.

—o-o—

"I CONSIDER one's own table a gold mine of opportunity for artistic expression, a stimulating challenge to one's creative ability." Mrs. Klemme believes that a party is no better than the time and thought given its preparation. She has spent as long as four hours arranging a centerpiece. However, she cautions, meticulous preparation does not insure success. She shares with other hostesses sad memories of unforeseen happenings which at the time seemed "positively tragic."

"My most frequent bad dream," she laughed, "is having guests arrive at the appointed hour, when to my horror I realize I have forgotten even to order the food. By that time—dinner is always at 8 at our home—all the stores are closed. I go into the dining room and in this dream-frenzy, see scattered about the room all the materials for an elaborate centerpiece which would require hours to arrange. Here, thank heaven, my anxiety grows intense enough to bring me back to consciousness. How sweet that first waking moment is!"

HOW MUCH LIQUOR IS ENOUGH?

"I FIND THREE DIFFERENT TYPES OF OPINION: A BELIEF IN TOTAL ABSTINENCE, A BRIEF FOR MODERATE DRINKING, AND AN ARDENT ENTHUSIASM FOR LIQUOR.

It All Depends on the Individual, Maintains Doctor; "Some Persons Can Take Several Drinks Without Any Harm, While Others Cannot With Safety Touch a Drop."

By DR. WILLIAM MOULTON MARSTON

REPRINTED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION FROM FORUM MAGAZINE

THERE is no question which is asked more frequently, with graver concern, by a greater variety of people than this query about drinking. I find three different types of opinion: a belief in total abstinence, a brief for moderate drinking, and an ardent enthusiasm for liquor.

A young wife of New England ancestry, living in New York, with an adorable baby and a husband who recently rolled his car off the road in a smashing somersault (under the influence of a flock of drinks), speaks as follows:

"Doctor, there isn't any such thing as moderate drinking. If Harry takes one little cocktail he loses all control. He drinks and drinks until his money and credit are exhausted. Oh, these people who talk about moderate drinking make me furious! You drink or you don't—and if you drink you are crazy."

Harry, now a total abstainer, agrees.

"I think my wife is right. Total abstinence is the only thing. We don't go out any more to our friends' houses or to clubs or parties where liquor is served. Margaret likes cocktails occasionally and wine, but I won't let her have any."

An eminent clubwoman wrote me recently:

"You may think I am very old-fashioned, but I believe firmly that liquor is a sin and an abomination. I can cite so many cases where social drinking ruined the lives of fine men and women . . . and I maintain that no spirituous liquor should ever be served."

Comes Herbert Renley, college graduate, successful business man, cultured gentleman of the world, who deposes:

"What silly nonsense!" (I had shown Mr. Renley the clubwoman's letter.) "The surest way to make a nation of drunkards is to tell people they can't drink. Our national prohibition experiment proved that, didn't it? Teach them to drink moderately—drink like gentlemen—and you eliminate the danger of excessive alcoholism."

Mrs. Joel Townsend Rogers, wife of the well-known writer and mother of four splendid children, told me:

"Cocktails are fun if you don't have them every day. People who drink regularly, day in and day out, soon reach a point where they must drink to escape depression. They don't really enjoy it then, and certainly it does them harm. Sometimes in the afternoon when I'm tired and tense, one or two cocktails relax me all over, make me feel cheerful, patient with the children, and able to eat a dinner which I could not otherwise touch."

A young Connecticut manufacturer, known to his acquaintances as a man of poise and balance and a prince of good fellows, summarizes his experience as follows:

"No drinking in business hours, of course. A drink or two before going home at night gives relaxation, sweeps your mind of commercial cares, and makes you fit to enjoy the evening hours with your family. A few highballs at a party, now and then, increase enjoyment, break down social barriers, and do no harm to anybody. I question the physical effects of too much liquor; one must learn to drink in moderation."

And now the enthusiasts—college boys, men about town, movie stars, newspaper men and those who work long hours under terrific nervous strain have poured into my ears humorous but seriously motivated paeans of praise for John Barleycorn. And there are others—creative workers especially—who sometimes strike the same note.

A writer of international reputation confesses:

"When I am completely at a loss for a phrase or an idea, I drink.

KNOW THYSELF, AND KNOW WHEN TO "SAY WHEN."

And behold, O magic of the subconscious! On white paper before me the words I sought appear, materialized from nowhere, without thought or effort. I consider alcohol fate's kindest gift to inhibited humanity."

A noted scientist admitted recently:

"I drink far more than is good for me. But liquor sustains me mentally and physically. I should have learned to do without it, perhaps—but as things stand I produce my best results with the help of alcoholic stimulants."

—o-o—

SUCH wide divergence of intelligent opinion indicates a corresponding difference in experience. The fact is that liquor, like high-voltage electricity, is an extremely dangerous tool. It may destroy or benefit its user, according to the user's capacity for and method of handling it.

Not all the bugaboos conjured up by prohibitionists to frighten timid souls into total abstinence need be taken seriously. For example, the effects of moderate amounts of liquor on liver and kidneys are often exaggerated. Almost as many total abstainers as drinkers suffer from cirrhosis of the liver; and, since heavy and moderate imbibers are lumped together in these statistics, it seems likely that reasonable alcoholic consumption need hold no special terrors in this direction. In general, physical ill-effects are not caused by liquor as such but by the piling up of more alcoholic products in the system than the natural bodily processes can take care of. In other words, if you drink too fast and too often or if you drink too great a total quantity of liquor for your body to dispose of properly, you will suffer physical harm —but not otherwise. (Of course, your organs must be functioning normally to begin with.)

The mental and emotional effects of drinking are far more complicated. They differ incredibly with different individuals and with different physical and psychological conditions of the same individual at different times.

Some experts will tell you that resistance to liquor depends on the mind: that strong-willed men and women can shake off the effects at any moment they choose and concentrate on the problem in hand. This I know to be true of some people, sometimes. But the exceptions are fully as important as the rule.

Other experts maintain that resistance to alcohol depends on physical stamina: that the weakest-willed truck driver can drink the strongest-minded professor under the table. But I know a number of intellectuals with relatively slight physiques who can spot the average husky three drinks and come out on the sober side.

The important point is that there isn't any general rule about resistance to liquor which is safe to depend on. Each person must study himself: his mind; his body; the different effects of different dosages of alcohol, of different beverages and mixtures; and the conditions under which he is most likely to be much affected by even a single drink. He must learn to take precautions accordingly.

There is one common effect of liquor which it is useful to understand. Alcohol removes inhibitions. That is why it is pleasant. Our "gray matter"—the parts of the mind which direct our animal functions intelligently—throw off nerve energy which continually checks and obstructs our "natural" impulses. This constant conflict in the brain is unpleasant. Alcohol releases the elementary impulses from control and so temporarily ends the cerebral struggle. This release is in itself pleasant; it affords relief and relaxation.

As more liquor is consumed, the animal impulses become more and more active. Herein lies the greatest psychological danger of drinking—a danger which need not be explained by childhood unhappiness or subconscious rebellion against reality. Everybody experiences this same effect and not everybody had an unhappy childhood. As the primitive parts of you are stimulated, you enjoy their activity—that's all there is to it. And, the more liquor you drink, up to a point, the more pleasure you feel. The danger is, of course, that because of your increasing pleasure you will release more of the animal in you than is good for you or for the people around you.

You will note that the moderate drinkers whom I quoted at the beginning of this article all stop close to the line where relief at freedom from mental conflict merges into the savage, unrestrained pleasure of primitive emotional activity. That is the point where I advise everybody to stop. I do not say, "Take one cocktail," or, "You may drink two highballs safely," because some of you ought not to take any—even a single drink may start the animal self rampaging—and some of you may require several drinks to gain legitimate relaxation and mental harmony.

Don't let anybody tell you there is an objective drinking rule which applies to all drinkers; the only safe rule is subjective. You must go by your own feelings and experiences. The moment you feel yourself riding high, casting restraints to the wind, stop drinking! You are as happy at that moment as alcohol can ever make you. If you go on seeking more joy from another glass, you will begin piling up unpleasantness and depression which will soon wipe out your pleasure. Moreover, the after-unpleasantness leads to a vicious circle of habitual drinking to get rid of it.

THERE seem to be two extraordinary types of drinkers: the brain worker, who sometimes drinks heavily without serious dertiment, and the abnormal or uncontrolled drinker, who suffers enormously from heavy drinking. Both these types are using a destructive force in unsafe ways. The difference in results springs from an initial difference in mental and bodily equipment. The mind worker is able, in some instances, to give his animal impulses a mental outlet which is relatively harmless; he stirs up his primitive feelings with much liquor and lets them ride him, suffering mainly physical harm from the reaction.

But the uncontrolled drinker has no such organized avenue of self-expression. When he consumes a quantity of alcohol he is likely to do anything—jump through plate-glass windows, pick fights, undress (often a feminine impulse), weep, and almost always talk loquaciously. His is no Dutch courage—that is a popular misconception. If liquor-inspired daring and dominance were false, artificial, it would be relatively harmless. But alcohol turns loose real derring-do, dauntless animalism—look out for the individual who shows it. And people do look out for him; and soon he loses his job, his friends, his place in civilized society. There is only one course for him—total abstinence. Psychologists who use the system originated by the late Richard Peabody of Boston will ease the mental conflicts from which he is trying to escape, teach him to live happily without liquor, and so enable him to readjust himself to normal life, once he sincerely desires to stop drinking and rehabilitate himself.

Liquor is no instrument of the devil to fear and run away from. Nor is it a cure-all, a surcease of human woe to which one may flee for refuge. Liquor is a highly potent food substance which has its uses and its dangers. Drink, if you drink at all, to secure a maximum of benefit and a minimum of harm from this strong and potentially dangerous diet.

Drink for peace, relaxation, and emotional harmony—never for animalism or egotistical delusion. Drink slowly, moderately, with plenty of food and cheerful society. Never drink to escape this world, because your life task is to meet reality and extract from it your birthright of happiness. If you use liquor and never let it use you, there is small danger of ill effects. You cannot live, love, laugh, and be happy while drunk; but carefully controlled drink may serve as one instrument among many to establish a personality balance which will accomplish these universal human purposes.

much of it appropriated as their own.

There was that night at "Tobacco Road," when a woman a row ahead of Honeychile, queried in a shocked sotto voce to her companion, after observing the antics of Jeeter:

"Are the people really that bad down there?"

The sotto voce could be heard all through the hushed orchestra-pit. And that made Honeychil "hoppin' mad!" So she answered, in a whisper every bit as loud:

"No, they're the country club crowd!"

For a while it was difficult for the audience to return its attention to the actors on the stage. But Honeychile had made her point, and in her own unique way, defended her beloved Southland.

After the talent scouts heard of Honeychile, they left her in no peace, until she had fixed her signature to a contract and was on her way to Hollywood.

But, sad to relate, Honeychile's first experience with a Hollywood motion picture studio was not unlike that so riotously and bitterly detailed in "Once In A Lifetime." She arrived here, was put on the payroll—and then nothing happened. Several months went by, and if it had not been for the regular delivery of her checks, Honeychile would have considered herself the Forgotten Femme.

Now Honeychile despises inactivity. She felt that she should be giving a fair exchange for those fat checks. So she attempted to communicate with the then Big-Man of the studio where she was under contract.

"It was just no soap," she said. "He was always busy, or in conference, or getting a shave. And he wouldn't see me, or even talk to me on the telephone."

And right here is where Honeychile cut the Gordian Knot of Hollywood's customary red-tape. "I decided," she said, "to beard the lion in his den—by Western Union."

This is the telegram which she sent to the Big Man:

"I'm getting sick and tired of trying to see you. Who do you think you are, anyway, Zanuck?"

The wire, which was signed, "Honeychile Wilder," secured her an immediate interview with the Number One Fellah. And thereafter Honeychile began to get parts in pictures.

No Slackening Of Trend for Giant Jewelry

Large Links of Gold and Silver Adorn Women's Throats and Arms.

NOT since the day Cleopatra sailed down the Nile has there been such a chance to bedeck oneself with jewelry as 1938 affords. There are rings for your fingers and circles for your ears, fantastic, weighty things so enormous they reach from knuckle to joint and jut out half an inch, gleaming with gold and combinations of colored stones.

There are necklaces two inches wide of solid gold, gold plate or alloy, twisted strands of real or imitation stones, caught with enormous shining metal clasps that have the look of the rising sun in brilliance. Bracelets will be one, two, and even four inches wide, and so heavy only a strong arm can carry them. There will be clips larger and more colorful than Cleopatra dreamed, and great earrings

Whether you have 50 cents, $20 or $20,000 to spend, the story is the same: wear a lot of jewelry. Whether you are in Alaska or New York, Maine or Oklahoma, there will be jewelry galore of such massiveness that even the most lavish taste can be sated.

The air is positively electric with thet new trend. This is a year for giantism in jewelry. And a year for gold. You will glisten with gold in your hair, on your hat, on your lapel, neck, arms, fingers, and purse. You will glisten in gold and gems wherever you go in 1938. Ensembles are stressed; nacklace, clip and ring, sometimes bracelet and earrings. Tradition to the winds! No more filigree work, no more down-to-the-waist necklaces.

—o-o—

THE TREND IS TOWARD gold and stone combinations this year, with emphasis on sapphires. Sapphires are considered an almost neutral stone for the new shades in dresses.

For the chic person who must be prepared in advance for the onslaught of a new fashion on the purse, here is a word of hope: silver necklaces, silver bracelets and clips and rings and ear ornaments, silver in more and bigger items to follow the lead of gold jewelry.

One of the Fifth Avenue authorities who has advised good taste in gems and settings for years, feels that 1938 will see not just one color gold used in a setting, but a combination of red, yellow and green gold in one item.

Paul Flato, long a revolutionary against the traditional in jewelry, contends that the new jewelry trend is barbaric, fantastic and witty, and the most fascinating ever permitted to women. Above all, he says it will be exciting. He is introducing an entirely new line of jewelry modeled after fruits.

A woman jewelry designer, who has been known to start new styles, offers hope for the lassies who shrink from being laden with gold like an old-time Russian bride. She has designed ensembles in which gold is but a complement to the stones, as bits of white are to a smart, dark frock. But what a touch! Whereas the catch of a necklace heretofore has been dainty, her "touches" are enormous balls of gold the size of small apples.

Do not let the bulk of queerness of the new costume jewelry frighten you. Almost every item was copied from a fabulous design shown at the Paris openings. The proof of its perfection is that Paris is importing American copies.

LET ME SUGGEST

by
Josephine Walter

AFTER combing the St. Louis area for a house suited to the needs of her growing family, a young friend of mine recently wailed:

"Don't architects know the facts of life? Hasn't anyone ever told them about children?"

Well, of course, that's an overly maternal view and yet it is amazing how many houses are built with no thought of the young occupants, even by people who build their own homes and know that special features should be provided for the children.

However, even a house that seems extremely unsuited to youthful occupants may be so rearranged as to provide adequate and comfortable quarters for them. Of course, most of us don't expect or feel the need of having such elegant suites as the movie stars do for their children, with day and night nurseries, private dining rooms and even adjoining kitchenettes but most modern mothers realize the psychological benefits to a child of a room of his own. A room where furniture is scaled down to his own size, where he may be allowed to secrete some of his treasured possessions, and above all, where he may learn habits of neatness and a sense of responsibility.

Now, what are the essential requirements for a house that will make it a livable place for children?

—o-o—

Among the first of these I would list a lavatory on the first floor which will save endless steps, especially in the training pants stage. A separate downstairs closet, preferably off the kitchen or back hall where the children may leave their wet wraps and galoshes, without tracking through the house, will prevent irate tempers. And some sort of a play room on the first floor, especially with a separate door to the outdoors so that the children may come in and out at will, will be well worth the sacrifice of space which might be used for a breakfast room, study or sun porch.

—o-o—

● THERE ARE CERTAIN other items which many mothers feel essential that I have left out. For instance, some feel that a maid's room next to a child's room is important. I have found that a maid's room on a different floor from the children is perfectly practical, at least from the age of 2 on, with a buzzer system rigged up between this room and the nursery. For even a toddler can be taught in short order to learn to ring this bell if he requires help. A basement playroom, that darling of the builders, I have found impractical for children as it is usually damp and sunless, unless it is built in such a way that it is above ground, at least on one side.

—o-o—

Now, let's talk about the child's castle—his own room. I am not one who believes in sacrificing everything in life to the little dears, and yet if there is only one large bedroom, I believe the children should have it, especially if it is to be used as a combined bedroom and nursery. After all, the living room is for grown-ups and if we hope to keep the children out of there we should at least give them an adequate place in which to play.

—o-o—

● HOWEVER, there are ways and ways of making even a small room seem more adequate for a run-around child. If the room is rather small and two children are to occupy it, bunk beds are a grand solution, even if they are a bed-making problem. If the closet space is rather limited and you have one long wall, try building in a closet at either end and leaving a recessed place in the middle for the bed. A recessed bed is out of the play area, makes the room seem much larger, and somehow seems to give a child an added sense of security when he goes to sleep. Also, such an arrangement will provide individual closets where two children occupy the same room.

AND WHILE we're on the subject of closets, let me say a word or two about their arrangement. Put the closet pole low enough so that the child may be able to reach it in hanging up his own clothes. This is good phychology, and it also leaves the top of the closet free for shelves on which to place toys. If space is at a premium, instead of having a chest out in the room, but a little unfinished chest and place it in one corner of the closet, to hold the child's clothes. This will prove as practical as built-in drawer space in a regular dressing room.

In the decorating of the room itself, try to avoid being quaint or cute. A nursery paper that looks cunning this year when Junior looks like a blond-headed cherub will likely seem a little silly when he's one of the gang. Not that a child's room can't be attractive and individual; in fact, it should be to keep his interest. But there are many charming, gaily-colored pieces of children's furniture which are simple, sturdy and in good taste. And by all means have linoleum on the floor for its practicality as well as its attractive appearance.

AN OLD WELSH RECIPE COMBINES BEER WITH FISH.

AN UNUSUAL COMBINATION—PANCAKES STUFFED WITH SEAFOOD.

By Fredrika Borchard

FISH is one of the most primitive of foods. It has also become one of the most sophisticated. Early man speared his fish; his effete descendent sometimes loses track of the many virtues contained in fish . . . the health-giving properties of the iodine content, the food value, the comparatively low cost and easy availability, the quick digestibility and low fat content. If he is a true gourmet, however, or a man reasonably fond of good food, he does not forget how graciously fish blends with a vast variety of spices, wines and condiments.

Since all good cookbooks furnish reliable directions for the baking, frying, poaching, boiling and broiling of fish, we shall confine ourselves to more distinctive and unusual methods and combinations. Shellfish are susceptible to variation. Crab or shrimp may be substituted for lobster; clams or scallops for oysters, etc. Fish, more than any other food—with the possible exception of eggs—depend upon seasoning for palatability and careless seasoning will greatly detract from the delicacy of any fish.

CRAB BISQUE

One and one-half tablespoons butter.
One and one-half tablespoons flour.
Three cups milk.
One cup heavy cream.
One teaspoon chopped parsley.
Two tablespoons chopped celery.
One can (one-half pound) crab meat.
One-fourth teaspoon scraped onion.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
Two tablespoons sherry.
Capers.

Melt butter; blend in flour, add milk slowly, and cook over low heat five minutes or until smooth and slightly thickened. Add one-half cup cream, parsley, celery, flaked crabmeat, onion, salt and pepper. Cook over hot water 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Whip remaining cream, stir in sherry and place a spoonful on each portion of soup. Garnish with capers. Approximate yield: Six portions. Serve with souffled crackers.

GUMBO SANDY HOOK

One pound raw shrimp.
One and one-half dozen oysters.
One tin (one-half pound) crabmeat.
Two tablespoons butter.
Three medium-sized onions, minced.
One can (No. 2½) tomatoes.
Two cups water.
One tablespoon chopped parsley.
One teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
One-quarter teaspoon celery salt.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
Two tablespoons flour.

Cook and clean shrimp; pick over and drain oysters, reserving liquor. Flake crabmeat removing all bony tissues. Have You Ever Heard of the Dobos Cake?

It Is Famous Among World's Leading Gourmets; Recipe Is Given.

A FAMOUS Hungarian pastry chef once was challenged by his employer to make a cake very different, very rich, and, above all, very superior to anything ever achieved in the dessert line heretofore.

"Create something that will make my place known all over the country," the proprietor of the popular confectionery told the chef, "and," he added as if afraid that the reputation of the concern would not be of sufficient importance in his employe's estimation, "try to create something so outstanding, that it will make you famous as a baker."

The "Dobos Cake" was born, and the pastry chef, Dobos, who died in 1924, has indeed won fame which will last as long as gourmets have anything to say. It takes by no means an experienced baker to make a Dobos Cake, but what it does take, is patience and adherence to all rules.

Have two (or better still, three) spring forms of the same size. Quantities in the formula following are for the eight-inch size cake form. You will need also a board a few inches larger than your form, and a very large board or enamel table top.

DOBOS CAKE

Six eggs, separated.
One and one-fourth cups sugar.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.
Three-fourths cup sifted flour.
One-fourth cup cornstarch or potato flour.

Beat yolks until creamy. While still beating, add sugar gradually, beating until all is added. Stir in one tablespoon lemon juice. Mix and sift cornstarch and flour together and add one-third of it to egg yolk mixture, stirring gently until blended. Add remaining lemon juice. Then stir in stiffly beaten egg whites, alternately with remaining flour, one-third at a time, as gently as possible. Grease and line an eight-inch spring mold with wax paper. Turn in a few tablespoons of batter, and spread evenly over bottom of pan. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) five to six minutes or until lightly browned. Remove cake to cooling rack, and repeat baking process until all batter is used. The usual result is eight layers, though if very thin, 12 layers can be made. When cool put one layer aside and spread following filling between and on top of remaining seven, pressing the layers firmly together. Chill.

CHOCOLATE FILLING

Four squares unsweetened chocolate.
Four egg yolks.
Two-thirds cup sugar.
One-half cup heavy cream.
One and one-fourth cups butter.
Drop of coffee extract.

Melt chocolate over hot water. Beat egg yolks well with sugar and add cream. Add slowly to chocolate, stirring rapidly. Cook over hot water five minutes, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Cream butter until soft and add chocolate mixture a tablespoon at a time, beating until blended after each addition. Add extract and chill mixture until of spreading consistency. Then spread between layers of cake.

ICING

Three-fourths cup powdered sugar.

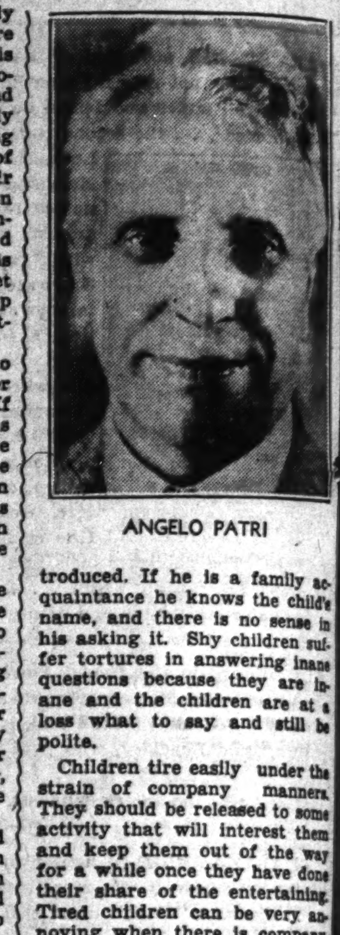
Melt sugar over low heat until caramel color. Then pour onto remaining layer and spread evenly, working rapidly. As soon as the sugar begins to set, mark it with the dull edge of a spatula. Place this layer on top of frosted layers, pressing down as firmly as possible. Spread remaining chocolate mixture on sides of cake and dust lightly with chopped nuts if desired. Approximate yield: One (eight-inch) eight-layer cake.

This cake will taste better the day after it is made. It should stay in the refrigerator, where it will keep fresh for about a week.

Paris decrees skirts a little longer. But wait a minute! That doesn't mean long skirts. It means a little longer than very short, which comes right back to a practical length of 14 to 15 inches from the floor.

CHILDREN AND YOUR GUESTS

By Angelo Patri



ANGELO PATRI

CHILDREN of the family have a share in the pleasure of entertaining guests. If this is not provided for in the program, the children will attend to it in their own way. Usually this takes the form of showing off. They take the center of the stage by standing on their heads, or getting together in corners and giggling, or running about, slamming doors and making strange noises. It is much better to give them set places in the program and help them to have their share of attention.

It is sometimes possible to have a child, or two, at the door to help receive the guests. If there are more than one it is easy to handle more than one child, too. because there will be things for them to do. They can take bags, umbrellas, packages that the guests carry. They can open doors on the way to the room to be used.

In the room they can lead the way to chairs, agreed on before time. They can put the match to the fire, if there is such a luxury in the grate. They can bring in a tray with water and glasses, tea, sweets, and cakes. After they have done their part they can be excused to go to their own affairs; to come back later, perhaps to serve and enjoy the guests' presence in other ways.

The point is that children need to have active participation in entertaining. The shy child can be carried safely over the hard places by giving him things to carry, specific bits of service to perform for the visitors. Children should not be asked to perform in any way for visitors unless the performance has been agreed upon, and rehearsed ahead of time.

Visitors do not know what to say to children, so they usually begin by asking them their names. Saying one's name out loud, in public, as it were, is as hard for most children as it would be for most people to strip in the public square. It is a form of torture that is common and none the less awful. If the guest is a stranger he can be introduced. If he is a family acquaintance he knows the child's name, and there is no sense in his asking it. Shy children suffer tortures in answering inane questions because they are inane and the children are at a loss what to say and still be polite.

Children tire easily under the strain of company manners. They should be released to some activity that will interest them and keep them out of the way for a while once they have done their share of the entertaining. Tired children can be very annoying when there is company. That is the time the pinching and pulling and giggling begin, and the showing off that annoys mothers so. This is avoided by the early dismissal of the children.

Only be sure that they are dismissed to a specific place, and to a waiting occupation. If they do not know where to go or what to do they will return like the locusts. This will take a bit of time and thought, but it will make the visit pleasanter and send the guests away with a high idea of the children's good behavior.

ONE WAY IN WHICH TO BRIGHTEN UP THE HOME

By Elizabeth Boykin

ARE you on needles and pins over your spring refurbishing? Trying to make something out of nothing? Wishing you could wave some magic wand to make all the old things sit up and look fresh and new again?

Guess what will make the most difference with the least work and expense? New cushions for accent here and there. For cushions are very much back in the fashion picture, after having been more or less "out" between the eras of fancy work and the studio couch when those three squarely boxed ones turned up everywhere.

For the more formal room, cushions for sofas are very big and very square and very flat. Not boxed but finished around their edges with a wide soft hem extending several inches beyond the seam of the cushion. These are generally placed over the upper corners of the sofa, a pair of them in a dramatic fabric.

Next most favored by the decorators who create styles are the not-too-big, not-too-small cushions of rectangular shape made to fit in the space where arm joins seat of a sofa. These are usually not boxed and they often have a moss fringe in their seams, quite a fat bulky one.

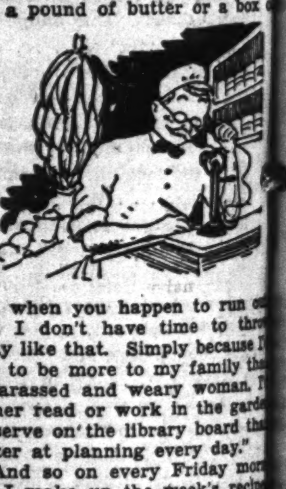
Round cushions are usually boxed. And they most generally go in pairs, too. A floral chintz medallion or even something grand in brocade can be the inspiration for these, or maybe you will pick up a remnant to suit. And, strange to say, a pair of round cushions in a handsome floral pattern in a room otherwise plain can make the effect seem quite patterned. Needlepoint is a pet of ours for cushions for it makes them seem so much more important. You can buy a galaxy of nice cushions ready made in the stores—really smart decorator types they are.

Now lest you're thinking that we're taking our cushion much too hard (or soft), please be assured that we know they're not great matters in the scheme of life. Except as graciousness itself is a great matter. But cushions do make life more comfortable. And that's alibi a-plenty for them. Even if they weren't so good to look at in their contemporary versions.

—o-o—

"OH, MY GROCERY MAN and I are the best of friends," remarked Marcia when we asked her recently how she took care of a big house and a big family, helped in civic projects and still managed to be a gracious individual.

"You see, I have eliminated all the time wasting jobs, such as marketing," she explained. "Oh I know it's fun to go to the store, and it's the path of least resistance to send for a pound of butter or a box of salt when you happen to run out. But I don't have time to throw away like that. Simply because I'd like to be more to my family than a harassed and weary woman. I'd rather read or work in the garden or serve on the library board than putter at planning every day."



"And so on every Friday morning I make up the week's recipes and the week's grocery order which includes all staples we're running short of, replenishes any canned goods we've used up during the week and covers all items on the menu. I divide the list in half, ordering part on Friday and part on Tuesday, and always on the phone. I know a lot of people who say I could do better if I went to the store, and maybe I could save a penny or two a week. I doubt that. I always deal with the same grocer and butcher, and they take pride in giving me nice fresh things and good values. And because I don't phone in small orders they go to extra pains to give me service. Of course, I do run out of something occasionally, but it's pretty rare and I can usually manage.

"And I'm a regular crank about keeping things at hand where they're used, so there aren't a lot of wasted steps in every operation. So I have shelves and hooks tucked all over the house."

MUSIC and Music MAKERS

Things One Had Better Not Know

By Thomas B. Sherman

AFTER every successful musical performance in any public place there are always a number of persons who rush back stage to shake hands with the artist. No one can quarrel with the generous and wholly human motive behind this practice. Those who yield to it are merely trying to get closer to the source of their gratification. Nevertheless they would be well advised to think of their favorite soprano, or tenor, or violinist as a creature who had no existence except between the boundaries of the proscenium arch and the footlights.

Artists are seldom interesting as human beings. They are no more prosaic than bankers or bond salesmen or newspaper men, to be sure, but they are under the disadvantage of having to cope with lay preconceptions about themselves that are derived from an association of ideas. When a singer is the medium through which the glories of Schubert are imparted to the sensibilities, the affected listener may persuade himself that some of that glory must perpetually surround the singer's own person. In that case it would be better if he didn't know that said singer had refused to open his trap until his fee had been laid on the line.

As man to man, the listener wouldn't blame him. But as man to Schubert-glorified evangel, he wouldn't want to be in on any coarse squabble over money. If the listener stopped to think, of course he would realize that a man as hefty as Lauritz Melchior, for instance, wasn't being fed by the ravens. But why should he stop to think about such matters. Better to regard him as just a voice.

—o-o—

● IF THE LISTENER stops there he will not only keep his illusions about the divinity that hedges the person of some cherished performer, but he also will run no risk of ever discovering that music is not only an art (sometimes), but is also a merchandising business.

When a manager gets hold of a boy or girl who seems to have something that can be exchanged for money, he proceeds to build him up in the same way that another producer would build up a new can of soup that he was putting on the market. The analogy is not exact, for the latter would not expect the can of soup to pay in advance for its own exploitation. But the spirit is the same.

Then having softened up the market, in a manner of speaking, with advertising broadsides based on carefully selected excerpts from the criticisms of the prospect's New York concerts—given for the sole purpose of extracting such criticisms—the commodity, that is, the pianist, singer, zitherist or what have you, is sent into the field. Here again the analogy is not exact, for the pianist or singer may come back with some money of his own in his pocket. Sometimes, of course, three or four seasons will pass before he has any such experience.

● THERE WAS one young pianist who played some 70 or 80 concerts in one season only to find that he owed his manager $3000 when it was all over. How that happened I don't pretend to know. In fact, it is another one of those things that one had better not know. For so long as one is ignorant one can assume that it was all quite legitimate and that the young artist was being naive if he expected to realize anything on his investment in his first year.

After all he didn't have to accept those concerts. He could have stayed at home and played chopsticks with the little girl from next door and would have been $3000 ahead. But since he chose to go in for a concert career he should have known that managers are inescapable necessities and that managers always get theirs.

In any case the possible cupidity of managers is not the proper concern of one who occupies a place on the near side of the footlights. If they are as crass as they are often represented they may kill off one secondary talent in order to push another. But the true first raters will always be heard somehow.

—o-o—

● FIRST RATERS will get what they are worth or be satisfied with what they get. They will also be strong enough to escape another kind of confusion that managers—local managers in this case—sometime visit upon them. I am referring to the confusion that is wrought by the oft encountered insistence upon the customer's right to make an artist's program. It is not an uncommon experience for a singer to go into a town with a program derived from the works of Schumann, Brahms, Debussy and others of a similar rank only to find that he must also include the "Road to Mandalay" and "Short'nin Bread." If he has courage as well as taste he will refuse and the customers will be the better for it. But he may not be re-engaged.

In the face of such a possibility he will probably yield unless he happens to be a demoniac top-liner or a moral hero. But whatever he does it is better for the public to know only what it hears. If the artist sounds good then he is good. Everything else is irrelevant and should be classified with the many things that one had better not know.

WHY THEATER IS COMING BACK

"In the New Deep Emotional Surge and Sweep of World, Puny Little Emotions Purveyed by Films No Longer Satisfy."

By GEORGE JEAN NATHAN

AFTER a period of doubt on the part of the lusher variety of numskulls, the theater has this season proved conclusively that the threat of the movies, so awesomely spoken of, is approximately as ominous as that of a small boy shaking his finger at the Fifth Field Artillery or a Bowery cop. It begins to look, rather, as if the theater may turn out to be a threat to the movies. For people are again flocking to it in such numbers as to make the box-offices sing, and standees are the order of the night at many houses, and the plays are getting livelier and better, and the trains and planes from Hollywood are crowded with film shadows hungry for a look at the real thing.

All this, I appreciate, sounds pretty extravagant. But, if statistics mean anything, only the very devoted boy-friend of a Hollywood Brown Derby waitress can disbelieve it. The renewed interest in the theater has got to the point where any observant person must agree that no one need further concern himself with the old bogey movie threat until such a time as the theater begins bidding the thousands upon thousands of dollars for the stage rights to screen successes that the movies currently bid for the screen rights to stage successes.

The curious thing about the renaissance of the theater is the sudden widespread interest demonstrated in the stage by persons who previously didn't bother about it the one way or the other. Our novelists, who for years kept aloof from it, have overnight become so eagerly conscious of it that they are foregoing novel writing for playwriting. Sinclair Lewis, the Nobel Prize winner for literature, says that he is through with novels for at least a couple of years and that he is going to devote himself heart and soul to the theater. He has already finished one play, is busy upon another, and has outlined a third. Thornton Wilder has come into the theater with his first full-length play; John Steinbeck has turned dramatist, and Ernest Hemingway has followed suit. Sherwood Anderson has written a play and Theodore Dreiser is working on one. William Saroyan is entering the lists, as Erskine Caldwell already has. And many others are hotfoot on the way.

Even more significant is the rush of movie scenario writers to try their hands at play-writing, at whatever dangerous personal risk and financial loss to themselves. Not only are quondam playwrights who went to Hollywood galloping back to the theatrical scene, but dyed-in-the-wool film writers are running them a race for a proud hearing on Broadway. Sidney Howard, Ben Hecht, Valentine Davies, Laurence Stallings, Irwin Shaw, Allan Scott, Clifford Odets, Francis Faragoh and other such former playwrights who went to Hollywood have hustled back for tries at the theater, and they have been followed by such scenario gents, all itching to prove their dubious mettle, as Dore Schary, John Millen, Paul Hervey Fox, Matt Taylor, Sam Taylor, Horace Jackson, Herman Mankiewicz, et al.

Also in the race have been not only movie actors and actresses but even movie directors, John Cromwell heading the latter. Among the players who have already felt the theater's call away from the films are Miriam Hopkins, Julie Haydon, Lupe Velez, Sylvia Sydney, Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Elissa Landi, Frances Farmer, Wallace Ford, Charles Bickford, Henry Fonda, Heather Angel, Alexander Kirkland, Joy Hodges, Jane Wyatt, Derrick de Marney, June Clyde, Conway Tearle, Ian Keith, Laura Hope Crews, Doris Nolan, Paul Lukas, Sidney Blackmer and a dozen others. And among those who are hoping to get a stage hearing in the near future are Mary Brian, Adrianne Ames, Tilly Losch and fully a score of Hollywood's other glamor girls. Surely something is in the air.

Even the newspaper drama critics, those erstwhile pickle-pusses, are beginning to feel the re-emergence of the theater from its doldrums and are writing about it in a way to make the casual reader believe they must be soaking their typewriter ribbons in marijuana. Their enthusiasm has become so exotic that, if they don't watch out, it won't be long before Hollywood's "colossals," "magnificents," "super-colossals," and "epics" will pale in comparison. I quote some of their reactions and tributes to various recent exhibits:

"Gorgeous entertainment."

"A triumph!"

"A modern masterpiece!"

"One of the finest achievements of the drama."

"Never such an evening of riotous fun."

"Superb! A master performance!"

"Nothing so original and jovial has turned up for a long time."

"Truly joyous in every single particular."

"One of the finest, most pungent productions to enrich the stage in years."

"A work of tremendous beauty. Nothing short of perfection!"

"Relentless in its power."

"Epically beautiful."

"Every reason to beat the drum royally."

"All hats must be tossed into the air. Great stuff!"

"An explosive success."

"Utterly ingratiating."

"Immense! Fascinating!"

"Enormous wit and brilliance."

"Wonderfully captivating and irresistible."

What is back of all this sudden return of theatrical interest and excitement? I suggest the following reasons:

1. Those audiences who had deserted the theater for the movies have found that they can no longer get any satisfaction from the movies' endless reduplication of themselves. They have also come gradually to realize that the much advertised "romance" and "glamor" of the movies is confined very largely to the outsides of the picture palaces, what with their gaudy fronts, electrical displays, imposing doormen, gilded lobbies and the like, and that once you get inside and the show begins it is like visiting Buckingham Palace, sitting at table before a wealth of gold plate, and being served a cheese sandwich.

2. In the new deep emotional surge and sweep of the world, the puny little emotions purveyed by the films no longer satisfy and only the profounder spiritual emotions of drama can meet the cravings of a psychically beset and grown serious public.

3. Even the lower forms of mentality progress upward, however slightly, with time and experience. After years of film-going, even the movie mentality seeks something finer, better, and more exalted.

4. The critics have driven trash quickly into the discard and have thus made theatergoing safer and more profitable for the public. Their occasional noted over-enthusiasm for the relatively better plays, while critically deplorable, has nevertheless been a good thing in the encouragement of theater attendance on the part of a public not yet altogether ready for the higher aesthetic criticism.

5. The countless amateur theatrical groups spread throughout the country, the many new college courses in drama, the activities of the Federal Theater movement and other such things have stimulated an immense interest in the professional theater.

6. The managers are no longer cheating and bamboozling the road with poor plays, poor casts and poor productions and, by sending out good plays with good actors, are gradually rebuilding the road's confidence in the theater, just as Hollywood's Grade-B films slowly began to destroy the road's confidence in pictures.

7. Idiotic censorship has disgusted the public with many otherwise possibly entertaining films, whereas the theater is relatively free from any such censorship.

8. And the quality of drama has improved greatly in the last half dozen years.

Come on, let's go to the theater!

On Selecting Spring Shoes For Children

Proper Fitting Is of Utmost Importance to Growing Child.

SPRING is here, leggings are coming off, and the very young man and the young miss will exult jubilantly over new spring shoes. Whatever the age of the child, shoes are all-important in the spring outfit and at every season of the year.

Before a baby begins to toddle his shoes should be soft-soled. At this age the shoes are a covering primarily for warmth. But when the child begins to walk, and "real shoes" are selected, they should have flat soles, shaped to the foot, and be well fitted.

No matter what the age of the child, take him to be fitted when you buy his shoes. He has many thousands of miles to travel on those same two feet during his lifetime, and you owe it to him to be assured that every pair of shoes fits his feet properly.

For the first year of a baby's life, the feet grow very quickly and you will find he needs a larger size about every three months. After that, the change in size of the shoes will depend on the growth and development of the child's foot. Too often shoes are bought or sent home by the parent and fitted at home, only to discover that the child has outgrown them in a few weeks. Experienced shoe fitters will tell you that when the shoes are purchased you should be able to press the thumb down on the toe of the shoe without touching the big toe.

Handbags are rimmed in nailheads, providing a shiny costume note when shiny beads are worn. This is very smart.

STAR GAZING in GRAND CENTRAL

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

WE wondered what ever became of the distinguished visitor who used to ride in the locomotive cab with the engineer. Inquiries at Grand Central Station indicates he has been eliminated by the streamline works.

—o-o—

That doesn't mean he was sideswiped by a freight of honor on a grade crossing of welcome. It simply implies that the streamline train has reduced all visibility to a needle's eye.

—o-o—

All the portable potentates and semi-detached royalties have been sidetracked by the streamliner and also by the equally fragile kings and queens of Hollywood, who are always subject to evaporation during transit.

—o-o—

When the cinema boons arrive in Grand Central Station it is essential that each one be accoladed by a committee made up of non-partisan relatives and absolutely unbiased press agents. There must be a fanfare of publicity and a hullabalooloo of flashlights.

—o-o—

This is proof that the movie star is still clicking minus the dread of that forgetful Coroner's monogram, D. O. A. Meaning Ditched on Arrival. Therefore, it is legitimate to use any size of depth spoon to stir up public interest.

—o-o—

That's why no celebrity arrives in Grand Central Station looking out of the porthole of a streamline engine somewhat like an adventurous moth gazing upon the world through the buttonhole in an all-wool suit of underwear.

—o-o—

When you ricochet into New York you must come thundering down the ramp like the herds of buffalo just passing Rochester. Simple faith is better far than Norman blood, but a sliding scale contract whips them both to a white blister. Your career depends on the welcome you get at Grand Central. And when they stop asking for your autograph you might as well get ready to chin yourself on the exhaust pipe.

—o-o—

Some people are annoyed by the hubbluff surrounding the life of a celebrity. That's like being jealous of the tinsel on a Christmas tree. No one gets the lights and the neons until they are about ready to shed, and it never lasts over the holidays.

—o-o—

Celebrities have always had our sympathy and our somewhat acidiferous admiration. We have seen them come and go like shadows on rotten canvas. A few years in the spolight, and then time gives you the soft focus of ennui and lack of interest.

—o-o—

From then on you are dated, like the landing of the Pilgrims and the discovery of the Straits of Magellan. That's why you must get it all on the first trip. Only a policeman can do his peanut shopping a little at a time.

—o-o—

So never get angry when a celebrity elbows you on the Grand Central ramp. He won't be there tomorrow, and you still have your commutation ticket.

Three New Shows in First Weeks of Opera Season

"Gentlemen Unafraid" to Be Followed by "Of Thee I Sing" and "White Horse Inn," With "Roberta" as First of Revivals.

THE order of productions at Municipal Opera, announced yesterday, provides for three new shows in the first three weeks of the season, spaces revivals throughout the summer and leaves the last week of August open for a work yet unchosen.

The season, which marks the twentieth year of the Forest Park enterprise, opens on Friday night, June 3, with the world premiere of "Gentlemen Unafraid," the new operetta by Jerome Kern, Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach. The composer and librettists, Max Gordon, New York producer who is interested in the show, and his staff will all be here during the rehearsal period and for the opening, which is expected to attract Broadway theatrical reviewers as well. The show will run 10 nights.

"Knights of Song," another new show intended for later Broadway production, is set for the week of Aug. 1, since Laurence Schwab, former producing director of Municipal Opera, and Hammerstein, backers of the piece, have announced plans to take it on to Broadway immediately after production here. It had its premiere in Pasadena last month.

Other notable features of the repertory are the placing of "Virginia," the Center Theater musical which deals with Revolutionary and pre-Revolutionary days in the colony, the week of July 4, and "Gingerbread Man," the show for children, in the middle of August. "Show Boat," a production of such magnitude that it has always been placed at the end of the repertory previously, takes the next to last week, which allows it to be held over if its popularity requires a second week.

Under consideration as the closing show, however, is a foreign operetta which has not been done in this country previously.

More than 100 outstanding singers and comedians of the stage, screen and radio, leading ballerinas and specialty dancers, are being considered for roles in the 12 shows. Most expensive casts in the history of the Municipal Theater are being planned. Tryouts for the singing and dancing chorus of 92 will begin Monday, May 2, at a place to be announced later.

The complete list of productions:

June 3 to June 12—"Gentlemen Unafraid," new operetta with music by Jerome Kern, book by Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach. The action centers in student life at West Point, in the days immediately preceding the Civil War.

June 13 to 19—"Of Thee I Sing." This musical play, which in 1931 set a precedent by being the first and only musical play ever to win the Pulitzer drama prize, will be seen for the first time at the Municipal Opera. Its music is by the late George Gershwin, book by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, and lyrics by Ira Gershwin. The story is a satire on a mythical president of the United States.

June 20 to 26—"White Horse Inn." A production of the big New York Center Theater which has never been presented anywhere else in this country other than in New York. The operetta has a Tyrolean background and centers around a head waiter who is in love with his pretty feminine employer. The book is by Hans Muller, lyrics by Irving Caeser and music by several composers, including Ralph Benatzky, Robert Stolz, Irving Caesar, Irving Zeno and Will Irwin.

June 27 to July 3—"Roberta." The first of three revivals scheduled for the summer. This musical play, with songs by Jerome Kern and book and lyrics by Otto Harbach, on its first presentation at the Municipal Theater in 1935, its only previous offering in Forest Park. The story was adapted from Alice Duer Miller's novel, "Gowns by Roberta." Familiar songs are "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," "The Touch of Your Hand" and "You're Devastating."

July 4 to 10—"Virginia." Another New York Center Theater offering, produced originally at a cost of more than $200,000, and being seen in St. Louis for the first time. It is a musical romance about Virginia in Colonial days. The book is a collaboration by Laurence Stallings and Owen Davis; the musical score by Arthur Schwartz, composer of "Three's A Crowd," "The Band Wagon," "Revenge With Music" and "At Home Abroad." A song hit of the operetta which has become popular is "An Old Flame Never Dies."

July 11 to 17—"Lost Waltz." A stage adaptation of Robert Stolz' world-acclaimed Viennese motion picture operetta, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time." It is being seen for the first time in America at the Municipal Theater. The English adaptation is by William Drake and Daily Paskman from the original Viennese book and lyrics by Paul Knneppler and J. M. Welliminsky. The plot revolves around a Viennese composer who is inspired to write a brilliant waltz for an operetta. Its principal selection, "Two Hearts in Waltz Time," has achieved world-wide popularity.

July 18 to 24—"Chimes of Normandy." The immortal comic opera, which was the most popular presentation at the outdoor theater in Forest Park in 1919 and 1921, will be revived with a cast of New York Metropolitan Opera singers of equal importance to those who sang principal roles in "The Bartered Bride" last summer. Robert Jean Planquette, French composer, created the score, while Clairville and Babet wrote the book, which centers on peasant and fisher life in a village of Normandy during the reign of Louis XV.

July 25 to 31—"Rosalie." A Ziegfeld piece being presented for the first time at the open-air theater. Both George Gershwin and Sigmund Romberg wrote the popular songs in "Rosalie." The book is a collaboration by Wiliam Anthony McGuire; lyrics by P. G. Wodehouse and Ira Gershwin. The story centers around a romance between a Princess and a West Point cadet.

Aug. 1 to 7—"Knights of Song." First St. Louis production of a spectacular musical romance based on the life stories of the immortal collaborators, Gilbert and Sullivan. The score contains songs selected from the 14 light operas by the famous pair. The book is by Glendon Allvine, Hollywood author.

Aug. 8 to 14—"Gingerbread Man." An old extravaganza, comparable in songs, dances, comedy and jingles to Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland," which has never been presented in the park before. Book and lyrics are by Frederick Rankin, music by A. Baldwin Sloane, who composed the songs for such familiar musical fairy-tale plays as "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Wizard of Oz."

Aug. 15 to 21—"Show Boat." The third of the revivals. Closed two Municipal Opera seasons, 1930 and 1934; running for two weeks each time.

Aug. 22 to 28—Production not yet selected.

Nino Martini With Symphony This Afternoon

WITH Nino Martini as guest artist, the annual pension fund concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will take place at the Auditorium Opera House at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Symphony's season ends with it.

During the last two weeks, the orchestra has been on tour of the South, visiting Nashville and Memphis, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga., and Birmingham, Montevallo and Montgomery, Ala.; Houston, Austin, San Angelo, Dallas and Denton, Tex. It arrives home this morning.

In choosing Martini for its benefit program, the Symphony has selected one of the best known singers in the country. Since coming to this country in 1929, the young tenor has been succeeded as a star with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company, on the radio, with the Metropolitan and in the movies. He is the only singer to have been engaged by the Metropolitan as a direct result of radio experience.

His motion picture appearances have been in "Here's to Romance," "The Gay Desperado," and "Music for Madame."

For his part of the program, Martini will do two arias—Rodolfo's Narrative, "Che gelida manina," from "La Boheme," and "O Paradiso," from "L'Africana"—with orchestral accompaniment and two groups of songs in Italian, Spanish, French and English, with accompaniment of Miguel Sandoval, noted Guatemalan pianist-composer.

Purely orchestral numbers are Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero," not played by the Symphony in several years; Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" overture and Tschaikowsky's Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet."

The detailed program:

Overture "Roman Carnival," Op. 9—Berlioz
Fantasia "Romeo and Juliet"—
—Tschaikowsky
Two Arias with Orchestra:
Rodolfo's Narrative, "Che gelida manina," from "La Boheme"—Puccini
"O Paradiso" from "L'Africana"—
—Meyerbeer
Songs with piano:

Picture Fare Sufficient, Even If Not Sensational

By Colvin McPherson

IN such a week as this, when the first-run theaters are holding back big attractions like "The Goldwyn Follies," "In Old Chicago" and "College Swing" for the Easter trade, not much is to be expected in the way of movie entertainment. As a matter of fact, there is plenty to see, for those who haven't seen it.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," for instance, has many a chuckle and capital performances by Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert. It is retained at the Ambassador. Likewise, Deanna Durbin's "Mad About Music," as exuberant as either of her earlier efforts, is brought out again by the Missouri Theater and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," in which Shirley Temple really goes to town, is part of the same program.

Loew's new feature, "The First Hundred Years," is a light but beguiling kind of comedy romance and Bobby Breen's "Hawaii Calls," at the Fox, strikes a nice combination of Breen, Ned Sparks and ukulele-strumming. Altogether, it isn't a bad week.

The First Hundred Years.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY and Virginia Bruce will be the envy of many persons as they go through a breach of friendship and reconciliation in "The First Hundred Years" at Loew's, not because two-plus-two is four as usual in their romance, but because they have such good jobs and live amid such luxury and can buy anything they want.

Bob is a yacht designer who, with scarcely a reel of experience, commands $15,000 a year, and it obeys. Virginia is a theatrical agent and must get nearly that much, from the looks of things. He says, "I am the man of the house. You quit your job." She replies, in feminine fashion, "Don't be silly."

So there you have a husband and wife separated and home-wreckers like Binnie Barnes and Warren William can get in with their nefarious work. It takes, roughly, 80 minutes to work out the problem and there is time, meanwhile, to fly out to Hollywood, drive up to New Bedford, play a few numbers on an electric organ and have a couple of cocktails in a fashionable joint. And what solves everything? A little stranger.

Written and produced by Norman Krasna, the comedy has much fine humor and reality, is acted efficiently and moves at a sufficient speed. But the most fun in it is to imagine you are making that much money or know somebody who makes that much money and can tell you to drop in and play their electric organ any time you want to, if you can play an electric organ.

The second feature, "Little Miss Roughneck," tries to tell us that Edith Fellows has more vocal ability than Deanna Durbin and can knock off that gasping ditty, "The Wren," without moving an eyelash. Maybe she can sing that well, but the spectators will find it hard to believe.

Miss Fellows is supposed to be a vaudeville youngster trying to enter the movies. Equal to any occasion, she runs away, hops a freight train and writes her family ransom notes, all to get publicity. Footsore and weary she finds haven with Leo Carillo, a good-natured gold prospector, and in time is restored to her family. Carrillo has one of his most ingratiating roles, but I don't think he sings "La Golondrina" any more than Miss Fellows does.

To cap the climax of the show, the little star sits in a garden and warbles "Caro Nome" from "Rigoletto." Students of opera will recall that Gilda, who does "Caro Nome," is eventually put in a sack and carried to the river.

Hawaii Calls.

ADVANTAGES of filming a picture on location are set forth in Bobby Breen's "Hawaii Calls," at the Fox. The story isn't important, but the trip to Honolulu and out into the islands is eventful. Some backgrounds proclaim the use of process photography, some sets have the look of studio carpentry, but in the main, "Hawaii Calls" appears to be Hawaiian and carries the double advantage of a Breen song program and a trip to the paradise of the Pacific.

Bobby's songs are "Aloha Oe," "Song of the Islands," "Hawaii Calls," "Down Where the Trade Winds Blow" and "Macushla," all done in his usual style. Raymond Paige's orchestra has an appealing musical interlude and the natives do pretty well themselves at sundown. Ned Sparks, as a sour composer of Pacific melodies, is a comic joy. Some bits of melodrama complete a diverting adventure.

The stage show, put on by KMOX radio entertainers, runs to singing—some of it excellent—but has a rather heavy emphasis in the direction of Pappy Cheshire and his hillbilly band. Not that all of us don't relish rural opera at times. We do, but it's always a question of whether there's enough or too much.

"The March of Time," appended to the feature and trailers, is about the rejuvenation of Key West and the history of the League of Nations. Both are highly absorbing subjects as presented.

With "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" at the Ambassador is a melodrama called "Dangerous to Know" that is lifted somewhat out of its class by the sincere performing of Anna May Wong, Gail Patrick and Akim Tamiroff.

The St. Louis Theater, for the week, has gone back to second-run features, playing "The Big Broadcast of 1938" and "The Baroness and the Butler."

Program for First Of Operatic Concerts At the Auditorium

ELEVEN arias and duets and one ballet number are on the program for the first of two operatic concerts for the benefit of the St. Louis Grand Opera Company, to be given at the Auditorium Opera House on Saturday evening, April 23, and Monday evening, April 25.

The participating artists are Giovanni Martinelli, tenor; Lucy Monroe, soprano; Robert Weede, baritone; John Gurney, basso; all of the Metropolitan Opera in New York; Rita De Leporte, ballerina of the Metropolitan, and Maria Marceno, St. Louis soprano.

The first concert wil open with Miss Marceno's singing of Mimi's "Farewell" from "La Boheme," followed by Weede in the Prologue to "I Pagliacci," Miss Monroe singing the Waltz Song from "Romeo and Juliet," Gurney in the aria, "Madamina" from "Don Giovani," the oriental ballet from 'Lakme" by Miss De Leporte and a group of St. Louis dancers, and Martinelli singing 'Celeste Aida" from "Aida."

After the intermission, Martinelli and Miss Marceno will be heard in the duet, "Oh, Lovely Maiden" from 'La Boheme," Miss Monroe in the Gavotte from "Manon," Weede in the Toreador Song from "Carmen," Gurney in Mephistopheles' Serenade from "Faust," Miss Monroe and Weede in the duet, "Weep, My Child," from "Rigoletto," and the program will end with Martinelli singing "O Paradiso" from "L'Africana."

Ted Lewis and Company To Fox Theater Friday

Ted Lewis and his band will head the stage show at the Fox Theater next Friday, on the bill with the film musical, "College Swing." In the Lewis unit are "Snowball" Whittier, the Ben Yost Variety Co-Eds, Gaye Dixon, Ray Royce, Theo Troy, Loretta Lane and Betty Dickerson.

Other stage show attractions which the Fox expects to have soon are Benny Davis, song writer, and his company on April 22; Major Bowes' "International Revue," an entirely new aggregation, the week of April 29, and Tommy Dorsey's orchestra on May 20. Negotiations are also under way for appearances of Guy Lombardo, Benny Goodman, Clyde McCoy and Bunny Berrigan.

Studio Turns Down Personal Appearances For Shirley Temple

SINCE the announcement that Shirley Temple will make her first trip East in June, the 20th-Century-Fox has turned down more than $350,000 in offers for personal appearances of the Number One box-office attraction of the film world.

Although Shirley and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Temple, have not as yet decided on their itinerary, literally hundreds of requests have poured into the studio, urging that Shirley be permitted to appear in key spots throughout the country.

In rejecting the offers, the studio pointed out that the tour will be strictly a sight-seeing jaunt and vacation for Shirley. Mrs. Temple declared that inasmuch as Shirley has just started to study American history in connection with her schoolwork, she is anxious that the small star shall have the opportunity to see historic American landmarks at first hand.

It is expected that the Temples will be gone from Hollywood for about four weeks. Following the completion of her present picture, "Little Miss Broadway," Shirley and her parents will go to Palm Springs for a short vacation. On their return Shirley will start another picture. As soon as that is completed, the family will leave for the East Coast.

"George and Margaret" Next at Little Theater

"George and Margaret," Gerald Savory's London and New York comedy success, will be presented for two weeks of public performances at the Little Theater from April 21 to May 4, by a cast composed of Madeline Haerrter, Eugene Wood, Eugene Krell, John Weaver, Frances Buss, Julian Luckett and Rozene Johnson McClelland and Katherine Maze.

Detailing the antics of a giddy English family, "George and Margaret" has no two characters such as those named in the title. They are merely two very dull acquaintances whose impending visit the family regards with something of uneasiness. Most of the happenings in the play center around two love affairs and engagements—that of a daughter, Frankie, and a houseguest, Robert, and another of a son, Claude, and the housemaid, Gladys.

Broadway's Best Plays And Performances of Year

"On Borrowed Time" Nominated for Honors Among Dramatic Works, Ethel Barrymore's Century-Old Grandmother as Finest Acting.

By Mark Barron,

Drama Editor of the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.

THIS theatrical season finishes along Broadway as a successful, profitable one and with most of the hit plays philosophizing on the old-fashioned virtues.

In this reviewer's opinion:

The best play of the season is "On Borrowed Time," which is Paul Osborn's dramatization of Lawrence Edward Watkin's novel.

The best performance is that of Ethel Barrymore as the 101-year-old grandmother in "Whiteoaks."

Dwight Deere Wiman, who came away from the plow-making business in the Middle West to become one of Broadway's most affluent producers, brought "On Borrowed Time" quietly into town about two months ago and the first night audience applauded for more than 20 curtains.

It is bounding along as one of the most sentimental hits and with Dudley Digges, Frank Conroy and 7-year-old Peter Holden giving heart-warming performances. Digges is the grandfather, "Gramps," who is about to die and who refuses to do so until he has finished imparting all his wisdom and advice to his grandson (young Holden).

Taunting them is Death (Conroy) who has been chased up into an apple tree by Gramps because only when he is standing upon the earth can Death say who is to die. Trapped there, Death keeps reminding Gramps that he must hurry, that he cannot permanently postpone the fatal hour.

The other mortals decide that Gramps is insane and try to put him away in an asylum, but he almost convinces them that they are the ones who are berserk instead of himself. In the end Gramps and his grandson approach the tree to meet Death, both of them to escape all these silly mortals together instead of leaving the grandson alone behind to cope with them. And they learn that Death is not the horror that the less knowing mortals imagine.

Here are all the primary elements of drama compounded excitingly into one play—life and death, age and youth, love and hatred, greed and nobility.

MISS BARRYMORE, who has threatened so often to quit the stage, remains in the theater, and happily so.

In "Whiteoaks" she is the centenarian grandmother who humorously, tolerantly rules her almost impoverished grandchildren who hover about waiting until she dies so they can inherit her fortune.

Most of the grandchildren of this Canadian family are rude, outdoors folk concerned mostly with horses and sports.

The only sensitive one of the group is a weakling grandson who wants a career as a pianist, but who is forbidden to have that by his stronger brothers.

In the end, the grandmother wills him her entire fortune and then comes the disintegration of family pride and strength as they bicker over the will.

Miss Barrymore gives a thrilling performance of an aged, all-wise woman on the threshold of death, but who still clings to her zest for life to the very last moment.

When, finally, she dies, the loss seems to be not so much that she has gone physically as the fact that each of the younger ones has lost the influence of this sparkling spirit.

Top ranking among the other plays of this season are:

"Of Mice and Men," John Steinbeck's dramatization of his novel about a couple of tramp field workers, one of whom is a huge half-wit and the other is George, a little fellow who has been buffeted about so much he has a permanent chip on his shoulders. And the chief trouble he has to bear is that he must always take care of the half-wit Lennie whose fixation is that he likes to stroke animals and when he does he unwittingly chokes them to death with his abnormally strong hands. Then a blond slattern flirts with him and he begins stroking her sun-bright hair. Suddenly she crumples in the hapless Lennie's arms, choked to death. So George finds that the last service he can do for Lennie is to shoot him to death to save him from the lynch mob. The roles of Lennie and George are beautifully played by Broderick Crawford, son of comedienne Helen Broderick, and Wallace Ford.

"Shadow and Substance" is the prosperous drama of the Irish schoolmaster, Paul Vincent Carroll, in which he dramatizes the extent that the clergy can dominate a small village. Sir Cedric Hardwicke gives an authentic performance as the ruling bishop, but most illuminating is that Carroll has written here a most literate drama. The play is earning for him more than $1000 a week in royalties, stimulating when compared to the $35 a week he earns as a schoolmaster.

"Our Town" is Thornton Wilder's simple and effective dramatization of people in the New England village of Grover's Corners, N. H. There is no scenery on stage and Frank Craven admirably acts as master of ceremonies, explaining what is about to happen in the various scenes. The plot largely concerns itself with the births and deaths, loves and quarrels and other homely and sentimental daily happenings in a rural village.

"Prologue to Glory" is the W P A production of Prof. E. P. Conkle's play about the young Abraham Lincoln. This University of Iowa professor has written a drama of Lincoln, the rail splitter, and has brought in his romance with Ann Rutledge, a role which is played by the great-grandniece and namesake of the original Miss Rutledge.

"Golden Boy" is Clifford Odet's drama of the boy who is both a promising prize fighter and a violinist. He faces the problem that to gain the quicker glories and gold of a prize fighter he must destroy his potentialities as a violinist because fighting will injure his hands.

"I'd Rather Be Right" is not only an amusing musical show, but is also evidence that one may criticise freely in this country for this operetta continuously hurls humorous barbs at President Roosevelt and his New Deal administration. George M. Cohan, in the role of Roosevelt, gives one of the most exciting performances of his career.

Other than Miss Barrymore, the best performances of the season include Gertrude Lawrence in "Susan and God," Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "Amphitryon 38", Ruth Gordon in "A Doll's House" and Orson Welles in his modern Fascist version of "Julius Caesar."

And there is one hightly triumphant face in this theatrical season of contrasting youth and age. That is 18-year-old Uta Hagen, daughter of a University of Wisconsin professor, who scores such a success in the Theater Guild production of "The Sea Gull," her first role on Broadway.

APPARENTLY, so the theater teaches this season, life begins anywhere or at any age. Child actors, as a matter of fact, have been getting more than their share of applause in the last few months.

The outstanding success among the younger generation, of course, belongs to young Holden of "On Borrowed Time." He plays an exhaustive role that is as long as any given to the adult members of the cast.

But the producer who is looking for a quiet and peaceful haven away from the theater is Philip Dunning who is pleasantly plagued with the humorous and profitable "The Schoolhouse on the Lot." This comedy about Hollywood child actors has a cast that includes 15 players between the ages of seven and 16. All fine performers they are, too, although Producer Dunning has had to avoid the necessity of calling out the National Guard to maintain order by isolating them in groups in separated dressing rooms and appointing monitors to preserve the peace.

So far, his busiest task has been to persuade Natalynne La Goff, a 7-year-old Negro girl, that she should make her entrance singing "Good Morning, Dear Teacher" as the script directs, instead of ad libbing her personal favorite song, "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen."

Several of the players are actual recruits from the Hollywood movie lots. Joe Brown Jr., age 16, has appeared in several movies and 9-year-old Petty Philson, who plays the blonde and temperamental child star, has just returned from the West Coast where she appeared in the RKO film, "Wise Girl."

All the child players are not confined to dramatic plays. The musical shows present several in their tender years. Carol Wanderman, 9, is a song and dance lass with Ed Wynn in "Hooray for What." Evelyn Mills, 11, and brother Warren Mills, 8, are the questioning youngsters who seek advice from George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right."

In the adolescent age, Broadway, too, is seeing Charita Bauer, age 14, in the two-year hit, "The Women," which has a cast of 40—all feminine. Peter Fernandez, 11, is the great-grandson of Ethel Barrymore in "Whiteoaks."

Sound Equipment Exhibit in St. Louis Wednesday and Thursday.

An elaborate showing of sound amplification and reproducing devices, housed in a pullman car, will be at Union Station Wednesday and Thursday to demonstrate to architects, educators, business men and the public the advances in RCA-Victor equipment for homes, schools, industrial buildings, stores, amusement centers and public assemblages. The exhibit, which is making a 7000-mile tour of 24 large cities, is accompanied by sound engineers and executives from the RCA-Victor laboratories, and locally is under the auspices of the Interstate Supply Co., RCA-Victor distributer.

On the car's rear platform are two new power speakers capable of projecting sound more than a mile with realism and volume for directing fire fighting, beach patrol work, rescue work at sea, shipdock communication and outdoor meetings. They can be used to direct sound in a beam or on a wide angle. An electron amplifier tube makes possible transmission of music over a beam of light. A cathode ray oscillograph enables one to see voice or other sound characteristics in varying wave forms on a luminescent screen.

Other exhibits include multi-wave antenaplex systems for many radio sets in a large building, sound reinforcement systems ranging up to ones for the largest auditoriums, disc recorders on which records are made and played without intermediate processing, new microphones of the velocity dynamic, lapel and uni-directional types, and a new RCA-Victor intercommunication system for two-way conversations in offices or rooms in houses without interconnecting wires.

A high fidelity speaker for checking the quality of broadcasting stations, electrical transcription turntable systems, speakers of various types and an electric chimes system also will be displayed.

Jessica Dragonette and Ed Wynn Planning Radio Series—Leopold Stokowski Considered for Programs—Deanna Durbin Billed for Radio Theater April 18—Studio Gossip and Network News.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE, now on a concert tour, is planning a return to broadcasting which she says will come about the end of May. Although her radio plans are still tentative, she said that her new programs might be combinations of straight singing, specialties and light operas with speaking parts. A five-instalment dramatic series called "The Living God," will be broadcast on the WEAF net at 5 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday, under the auspices of the National Council of Catholic Men. Adapted from the French for the council, the dramatization will be broadcast from Hollywood and will be acted by Una O'Connor, Peter de Cordoba, Frederick Lewis, Donald Brian, John Sheehan, Connie Keefe and Pedro de Cordoba Jr. "The Living God" is written around a roving announcer who, having lost his faith, asks passers-by, "Who Is Christ?" Suddenly, he is transported to Jerusalem, where he witnesses the entry of Christ into that city. With his portable microphone, he catches the voice of Christ. In ensuing scenes, he gives an eye-witness account of Holy Week, picking up the words of the apostles, Mary Magdalene, Pontius Pilate, the two thieves upon their crosses and participants in the betrayal and the crucifixion.

Fear of War Spurring Russia To Build Steel Plants Far Out of Reach of Hostile Bombers

Trend of Plants Toward Japan—Ural Base Making Tank Type Tractors, and, It Is Said, Knock-Down Submarines.

By JOSEPH BARNES.
(Moscow Correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.)
SVERDLOVSK, Siberia, March.

AT the beginning of its third five-year plan, Soviet Russia is still a boom country. In the Ural mountains, where the capital investments of the first two plans are concentrated, the landscape is still one of excavation, mud, scaffolding and hurrying people. But a significant change has taken place in the last four years, and this change is war.

The Ural industrial base, slung in a triangle between this city, Chelyabinsk and Magnitogorsk with a 1400-mile spur eastward to the Kuzbass coal fields, was conceived in war. It was Lenin's dream 20 years ago when interventionist armies had stripped the struggling revolution of its chief iron and steel and coal resources. It is Stalin's achievement, the most important asset for which the Russian people have paid in the last 10 years in hunger, misery and terror.

Out of range of any bombing plane yet built, it is an invulnerable industrial base. In less than 10 years it has significantly changed the economic and military maps of Europe and Asia by making it essential, from now on, for an enemy to strike at the very heart of Siberia before Russia can be paralyzed. It was built quickly and expensively because the Russians feared war; the increase in the visible symptoms of this fear over the last four years shows the Soviet conviction that the next world war has already started.

The Urals Mobilized.

For Marxists, the Urals are closer to Spain and China than they appear to be on the map. There are few soldiers to be seen in the Urals. A few armed guards stand outside every factory; Red army officers can be found on most trains, going to some new post. But without troops or bugles the Urals have been mobilized. in Marshal Voroshilov's phrase, "to constant readiness."

Part of this military mobilization is a pall of official secrecy thicker than the snow which blankets all Siberia in winter. Where this correspondent was treated four years ago as a welcome guest, an audience for the full-blown pride of industrial pioneers, there is today only reserved courtesy mixed with frank suspicion. The distinction between reporting and espionage tends to break down in every war.

Through the curtain of this secrecy, made more opaque by the hysteria of any carefully stimulated spy scare, it is possible to see some of the results of this mobilization. Figures are still published, if only to castigate lagging directors. Russians still drink, and talk, with irrepressible vigor. Newspapers, speeches and decrees, written for the Russian masses, are phrased in language so blunt as to leave no doubt as to their meaning.

Sverdlovsk, where the late Czar Nicholas was executed with his family by the Bolsheviks in 1919, is the center of mobilization. It is a key junction on the all-important Trans-Siberian Railroad. Since 1581, when Yermak, military chieftain of the Stroganov family, marched across the Ural Mountains here with 800 Cossacks to conquer the Kuchum Tartars, it has been one key to control of Siberia. The Bolsheviks have made it a major industrial city.

"Tank Types" Produced.

Arriving at Sverdlovsk you walk past, but not through a new railway station apparently in the same scaffolding which covered it four years ago. The official explanation is lack of workers; a few hours in the city and its suburbs show that there are literally hundreds of thousands of workers, but that they are engaged on more essential jobs.

Less than 90 miles south of Sverdlovsk, at Chelyabinsk, is the world's largest tractor factory, capable of producing 50,000 heavy caterpillar-type tractors a year. The factory is currently engaged in shifting to the production of Diesel-motored tractors, but it has lost the spotlight even in its own home town. It has been dwarfed by its own experimental department, recently named Strankostrov. The Chelyabinsk tractors were always called, significantly, "tank type," in Russian, and there is little doubt, even if no concrete information about what Stankostrov produces.

For Military Reasons.

Two hundred miles farther south is Magnitogorsk, western end of the Ural-Kuzbass iron and steel combine which at present produces more than a third of all Soviet ferrous metals. Its plan to become the world's largest iron and steel plant has apparently been cut in two in recent months. Economic reasons, the present Bolshevik campaign for lower costs and higher quality, have played a large part in this decision, but it also has its military reasons.

For defense against attack from the west Magnitogorsk and the whole Ural heavy industry development of which it is the nucleus have already answered Lenin's original demand. Even if another coalition of capitalist powers should lay siege to the oil of Baku and the coal and iron of the Don basin, and threaten Leningrad's steel industry, as in 1918 and 1919, the Bolsheviks could fall back to the Urals with the sinews of modern war still behind them.

Trend Toward Japan.

For a war in the East, this new base is not so valuable. Japanese Army leaders who have said that the Ural industrial base is a threat to Japan ignore the fact that the threat is nearly 4000 miles away, its force carried eastward only by the slim tracks of the Trans-Siberian Railroad. Bolsheviks and the Red Army have not forgotten this.

It is believed by many Russians that the uncompleted half of the Magnitogorsk blueprints has been quietly shifted eastward. At Komsomolsk, on the Pacific, at Khabarovsk, headquarters of Gen. Bluecher's Far Eastern army, and Petrovsk, near Lake Baikal, important steel plants are known to be under construction. They are not under the Commissariat of Heavy Industry, as is the rest of the nation's steel, but under the Commissariat of Defense Industries. Beyond admitting this, Russian officials refuse to discuss them.

Signed for Shipyards.

Manitogorsk grew in ten years to be a major city by virtue of recruiting campaigns among workers of the Ukraine peasants of Siberia, nomad peoples of Central Asia. In recent months it has been on the reverse end of recruiting campaigns. Its best structural steel workers, welders and riggers, have been signed with heavy bonuses for the Soviet Union's ambitious new naval shipyards at Archangel and Murmansk, or for these steel plants of the third Five-Year Plan, built where the Soviets are afraid they will be needed, near the Japanese frontier.

Sverdlovsk itself is full of military tension, if empty of soldiers. Its chief plant, Uralmashzavod, built eight years ago, was once the pride of the Soviet Union, a triple-starred site on all Intourist programs for foreigners who ventured this far into Siberia. It is still producing heavy machinery, and most citizens of Sverdlovsk believe that submarines are being built here, to be assembled in Vladivostok. One cannot tell whether this is fact or rumor, because the plant is now as difficult to approach as a military airplane factory.

During two weeks in Siberia this correspondent has heard little talk

AMBASSADOR OF LABOR

HERBERT MORRISON

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, April 9.

LEADERS of the American Labor Party in New York went down the bay the other day to meet at Quarantine aboard the Washington a representative of the British Labor party. Herbert Morrison, this unofficial ambassador, has come to America not only to give advice and counsel to American colleagues out of his broad experience but to study the rise of labor in American politics.

While there is, of course, no intention to copy the methods of British labor, both sides feel that this exchange will be profitabe. In fact, this is Morrison's third visit. Each time he has come under auspices of New York's Labor party, the party that last fall returned Mayor LaGuardia to office and now holds the balance of power in State politics.

Vote-Getting Politician and Also Labor Statesman.

Morrison is in many ways a fortunate choice for this lesson in international understanding. He combines, as few men do, the capacities of a practical politician, a vote-getter, with the abilities of a student of government. A great deal of his time and energy has been put to the practical consideration of how public utilities and certain major industries can be brought under socialism in a democracy.

As Minister of Transport in the Labor government from 1929 to 1931 he drew up what is regarded as a model bill for Government consolidation and ownership of transportation. It was intended to create a national transportation system, with fares at the lowest possible level, out of the confused tangle of busses, subways, trams and railways that competed, or supposedly competed, in the area of greater London.

Morrison's bill had advanced a long way toward passage and was still relatively intact, despite the onslaught of a variety of interests, when the Labor government fell. The Conservative National government that followed took up Morrison's bill to create a unified public ownership and control over London's transport system and eventually passed it, setting up the London Passenger Transport Board.

But there were important differences as it was approved by the Conservatives. Morrison had, of course, provided compensation to the owners of private bus and subway systems, but his original bill called for nominal rates of interest to be paid on Government bonds, 2 1-2 and 3 per cent. These rates were so hiked by the Conservatives that the bonds will not be amortized before 1979 and therefore there can be no material increases in wages or decreases in fares until that remote time.

Labor Position in Face of Europe's War Threats.

For the immediate present, Morrison told his American colleagues and reporters who met him, such domestic problems have been obscured by the grave threat to European peace implied by the presence of Hitler in Austria and Mussolini in Spain. Following the Nazi invasion of Austria this situation was so threatening that Morrison almost postponed his visit. The hope was that Neville Chamberlain's Conservative government might split on foreign policy, thereby precipitating an election in which Morrison would naturally take an active part. It became apparent that this hope was illusory when Anthony Eden stepped out of the Cabinet and relapsed into discreet silence.

"The present government is not leading anything anywhere," Morrison said in his initial interview. "I can't blame the United States for not being willing to be a catspaw for Europe's discredited diplomacy and declining to pull our chestnuts out of the fire. The government in England is paying far too little attention to France and the other democratic Powers. The present negotiations with the dictators are not only ill-timed but entirely futile as will inevitably be shown."

But while it is eclipsed for the time being by the gravity of the crisis over foreign policy, the Labor party's current program includes a detailed plan for immediate socialization of certain key industries. Party literature widely circulated describes the steps that would be taken when next the Laborites come to power. And after a long period of despair and indifference Labor party leaders are looking forward to a possible return to power.

At the last general election the Labor party polled some 8,000,000 votes out of 21,000,000 cast. Morrison expressed confidence that that total would be increased, perhaps to 10 or 11 million, if an election were held this year. The Liberal party has been split into several factions and it is doubtful, according to Morrison, that Liberal candidates would poll any considerable number of votes. The vote, in his opinion, would be fairly evenly divided between Conservatives and Labor.

One Seat Gained, More Expected This Spring.

The Labor party now has a majority of 81 to 144 in the London County Council. Laborites govern 17 of the 28 boroughs into which the city is divided. While the Labor party has only 25 out of the 62 London seats in Parliament, Morrison expressed the belief that this number would be increased to a majority at by-elections, to be held this spring. In the first by-election since Eden quit as Foreign Minister, last Wednesday, Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor, defeated the Conservative candidate, C. J. Busby by a majority of 1421 votes in the previously Conservative constituency of West Fulham, London. She polled 16,583 votes to Busby's 15,162. Conservatives had fought the campaign on the issue of the Government's foreign policy. The district ir the 1935 election gave Conservative Sir Cyril Cobb, now dead, a majority of 3483. At the by-elections a year ago the Labor party made a poor showing, but at least, Morrison pointed out, no seats were lost.

When Laborites moved a vote to censure against the Chamberlain government for its foreign policy last Monday, they mustered only 152 votes to the majority's 359, but Morrison insists that this is not representative of present public opinion.

There is one thing that the Spanish civil war has achieved. It has brought a larger degree of unity within Labor's ranks than has prevailed since the Labor collapse of 1931. This has not come all at once. In fact, it has developed only in recent months, too late to bring any effective pressure to alter the policy of the Chamberlain government. During early months of the war Labor leaders were indifferent. They clung to a policy of detachment from the troubles besetting the Continent which, according to Morrison, was not unlike the isolationism that dominates American public opinion.

Series of Setbacks in Last 12 Years.

During the past 12 years the Labor party has survived a series of blows. The first and perhaps the most serious of these was the failure of the general strike in 1926. After that vast, yet orderly struggle had collapsed, Labor lost not only prestige but votes and power. So much hope and loyalty had gone into this mass effort that inevitably disillusionment and mistrust followed failure.

What was worse, the following year a Conservative government took the opportunity to apply certain restrictions to Labor's political activity. Under the law passed in 1927 it is no longer possible to certify trade union members automatically as members of the Labor party. The union member must register his willingness to have his name enrolled on the party lists whereas under the system that prevailed until adoption of the new law union membership could be blanketed into the party. The 1927 law contained other restrictions but they are comparatively unimportant.

Minority Government of 1929; Later Developments.

Despite this handicap and the losses suffered after the general strike, the party polled a sufficient vote in the election of 1929 to form a minority government. Dependent for survival upon votes from other parties in Parliament, the new Labor government proceeded with exaggerated caution. It had scarcely made a start on the official party program when the world-wide depression presented a serious problem of unemployment. Conservatives took advantage of the depression to agitate against the Laborites. A minority government was scarcely in a position to pass drastic measures to cope with a critical situation. Finally the Laborites were voted out of office and Conservatives went to the country with a scare campaign for a "National" government to save Britain from ruin.

The success of this campaign was a blow, too, but not so serious as the defection of certain of the most trusted leaders of the party. Ramsay MacDonald, twice Labor Prime Minister, headed the list of those who were condemned as traitors. Another deserter was Viscount Snowden. The third Laborite to enter the so-called National government was J. M. Thomas. Both MacDonald and Snowden had a large personal following, MacDonald particularly among the simpler Scots whose economic views were none too clear but whose trust reposed in a man who spoke their language. The bitterness that this engendered was also a factor. MacDonald's old associates said angrily that he had fallen for the blandishments of the aristocracy and had become merely an ornament to ducal dinner tables.

On top of all this came the international crisis. Intellectuals within the party called for a strong stand for the Spanish Government. These intellectuals are the inheritors of the tradition of the Fabian Society which was founded by such Socialist pioneers as Sydney and Beatrice Webb and George Bernard Shaw. In the early days the Fabian Society had played an important role in shaping the direction of the party, but in recent years intellectuals have found themselves more or less pushed out of the party's inner councils.

Trade Unionists in Charge of Party.

The direction of the party has been taken over very largely by trade union leaders. These men have spent their lives bargaining with employers' representatives about a shilling or two shillings a week on the wages of the men they represent. Their outlook is conservative, cautious. In their concern with the details of collective bargaining, critics in the left wing of the party have charged, these leaders have neglected the broad aspects of policy.

The rank and file, it is argued, stands considerably to the left of the trade union heads but without leadership. Rank and file strikes are suppressed in the interests of peace. In the strike of London bus men last summer it was only very reluctantly, compelled by the force of circumstances, that Ernest Bevin, head of the Transport Workers' Union, finally gave his blessing. The settlement of the strike was a great deal less than satisfactory and subsequently a separate left wing union of transport work-

Chicago Political Horsetrading Brings Igoe Support of Kelly And Nash in U. S. Senate Race

Candidate Backed by Bosses Has Record as Moderate Progressive in Legislature—His Victory Over Lucas Indicated.

BY ERNEST KIRSCHTEN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
CHICAGO, April 9.

IT is a strange bargain, but nevertheless one typical of American political horse trading, that promises to make Michael L. Igoe, United States District Attorney at Chicago, the junior Senator from Illinois when Tuesday's votes are counted. True, this week's election is only a primary, and the Republicans are doing some tall talking about capitalizing the strife between the Kelly-Nash and the Horner factions of Illinois Democracy next fall. But the practical people in politics and on the side lines are not impressed. They are sure that the Democratic nomination still means election, too.

If Igoe wins it will be due in considerable measure to his present alliance with the Chicago machine—an alliance that he insists was more of the Bosses' seeking than his. Of course, Igoe is not blind to the fact that the Kelly-Nash forces still control 48 of the 50 Chicago ward committeemen and that this means a comfortable majority in Cook County, where about half of the State's votes are cast.

His Lesson in 1932.

He is aware, too, of the penalties for opposing the machine. He tried that in 1932, when he ran for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against the dictates of Boss Cermak, who was sponsoring Judge Henry Horner. He was thoroughly chastised for that independence. He lost not only the gubernatorial nomination, but also his positions as Democratic national and ward committeeman. In fact, so far as the Chicago machine was concerned, he was on the political junk pile.

The wounds of 1932 have been healing slowly. Igoe never was reckoned as a real Kelly ally before this campaign. Only two years ago he was active in the support of Gov. Horner against the machine's candidate, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, in the gubernatorial primary.

However, menaced by the growing political strength of the Governor, the Chicago bosses were compelled to pick a winner in the current senatorial contest. Another defeat like that of 1936 would mean that Horner would get more than the lion's share of Federal patronage in Illinois, and—what is worse for the machine—it would mean in all probability the election of his candidate, State's Attorney Thomas Courtney, as Mayor of Chicago next year.

Why Igoe Was Chosen.

Without an acceptable candidate of their own, there was nothing for Boss Kelly and Boss Nash to do but climb on the Igoe bandwagon. Here was a man who made a good record during eight terms in the Legislature—years during which Democrats were few and far between in Springfield. Here also was a man who was popular in Chicago and also had a strong following "downstate"—something that no machine regular can boast.

Considering his past performances, he might not take orders from the Chicago City Hall once he was in Washington. That would be too bad, but he could beat Gov. Horner's senatorial choice, Scott W. Lucas of Havana, successor in Congress of the late Speaker Henry T. Rainey, and Horner's rise must be checked. So it was decided that Igoe should have the organization support on Tuesday. And, frankly, he does not mind having it.

Igoe also has the Rooseveltian blessing, extended last week by Assistant Attorney-General Joseph B. Keenan, and more recently by Igoe's old friend, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, an astute politician who has a reputation for indorsing only winners.

Backing of Labor.

Added to these considerations, which probably have more weight with professional politicians than with the voters, are the enthusiastic recommendations of Igoe by the Legislative Voters' League, an impartial group that closely scans the performances of Illinois law-makers, and the solid backing of labor.

In Chicago Igoe is sure to get many a vote because he is sponsored by the A. F. of L's State Federation of Labor despite a letter from William F. Green urging the nomination of Lucas. The Green letter apparently was prompted by the action of Ray Edmundson, state president of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and head of Labor's Non-Partisan League in Illinois, in supporting the Chicago district attorney.

Backing such as this should go far to offset any loss of strength by the Kelly-Nash machine in its own bailiwick—and there can be no doubt that it has lost strength in the last two years. On paper, it is impossible to figure that Igoe can lose.

He should, at least, be relatively as strong in Cook County as was Dr. Bundesen in 1936 when the machine piled up 526,116 votes for him there against 450,210 for Horner. On the other hand, the Chicago health commissioner received but 133,105 votes "downstate," against 450,210 for Horner.

Strength in State.

Theoretically, Igoe should make a much better showing "downstate" than did Bundesen. During his 16 years in the Legislature, during most of which he was minority leader, he made many a "downstate" friend because, although he championed Chicago's rights, he was always considerate of the interests of the rest of the State, and actually gave the rural districts their present hard roads over the opposition of many of their own representatives.

Many of these friends of Springfield days—men like Tom Sinnett of Rock Island and Howard Doyle of Decatur—are now on the hustings for Igoe. How much they can do to offset Southern Illinois feeling that the State should not be represented in the Senate by two Chicagoans, and the downstaters' natural antipathy for a Chicago Catholic, who is wearing the Kelly-Nash label, is one of the imponderables of this campaign.

Another imponderable is the strength of the so-called Chicago independent vote. There has been no real test of this since the Crowe-Swanson State's Attorney race in 1928 when the "independents" upset all calculations by defeating Crowe. Since then elections have always been dominated by major issues—such as national, gubernatorial or mayoral campaigns. This week, by way of contrast, a side-issue may influence the outcome of the senatorial contest.

New Voting System.

The current furore over the new permanent registration machinery in Cook County—which, by the way, requires a voter's signature before he may receive a ballot, unlike the set-ups given Kansas City and St. Louis by the last Missouri Legislature—may bring the "independents" into action once more.

Igoe has accused County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, among whose duties is the supervision of the Cook County Election Commission, of woeful incompetence, although not of dishonesty, in connection with the present alleged confusion of the registration cards.

The Horner forces, fighting for the renomination of Jarecki, on the other hand insist that the opposition to him is an attempt by the Kelly-Nash machine to steal the county's election machinery. As evidence of intended polling place irregularities even before the machine takes over the county judgeship, they point to Thursday's order by the Kelly-Nash Police Commissioner, John P. Allman, taking

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Pastor on Magazine Censorship.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I HOPE there will be many letters of protest against the action of the Prosecuting Attorney in censoring the latest issue of Life magazine, as being a "lewd" publication. I hope particularly that members of the religious bodies will resent his attribution to them of responsibility for his action.

I do not like public censorship at all—even if I could pick the censor—for the plain reason that it fails entirely to accomplish its good purpose, in these days of uncertain and divided moral standards. I like this kind of censorship even less, where the issue of the "lewdness" of the material in question is so debatable, and where a public ban might, or rather must, inevitably call exactly the wrong kind of attention to the article in point.

I resent very much being offered a dollar for my copy of Life as being a "hot number"; it does not seem to me fitting in any way to have a serious study of maternity classed with the cartoons in a score or more periodicals on public and unprotested sale, and I am reluctantly obliged to lay the responsibility for this degrading interest at the door of the unnamed religious institutions, and of the Prosecuting Attorney.

It is an extraordinary situation in public morals, when magazines of unquestioned pornographic intent—whose sales and circulation notoriously rest on their ability to stir, with cartoon and photograph, the lowest emotional responses of their readers—are unprotested, and freely offered for sale in public places, as, for instance, where I buy my postage stamps, and where children may freely read and buy them; and, on the other hand, a magazine without pornographic interest, and surely lacking in the very elementals of obscene design, is banned.

What action like this means is clear: it drives our children back to the snickering, unclean authority of the behind-the-barn magazines for their information—it terribly extends the difficulty of fundamental moral instruction—it indicts a whole city with the stork-and-rosebush moral teaching of the unnamed religious authorities. I resent the whole business very deeply.

St. Louis as a Host.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN view of the fact that many Americans who had planned to go abroad will stay here this summer, there will probably be more traveling in the United States than in many years.

The Northern lake states, the resorts of the Eastern seaboard and Canada will be after the tourist trade. St. Louis hotels and business interests should organize and induce many of these people to stay over in St. Louis.

The tourist dollars are well worth having. The tourist is one of the nation's biggest spending units.

NEED BUSINESS.

Protests Rumored Junction.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN a recent survey made in St. Louis County on the transportation problem, it was found that more traffic passed the corner of Clayton and Big Bend roads than any other intersection in the county.

It has been rumored that Highway 40 is to connect with Clayton road at a point immediately west of this intersection. When we consider the conditions that exist, I cannot believe that the Highway Commission, which is composed of intelligent men, would ever approve such a plan.

There are so many avenues open for a proper remedy of this condition that the taxpayers in this immediate vicinity know that the best judgment will be used when the necessary time comes. The connection of Highway 40 with Clayton road does not belong where it has been rumored it will be.

INTERESTED CITIZEN.

Married Women vs. Single Day-Dreamers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ONE cannot pick up the paper without seeing a comment on married women working. I, for one, would rather employ a married woman, as I find they are not inclined to day-dream, or to be so independent as the average girl. Give me the married woman who does not primp all day and dream about her date for that night.

EMPLOYER.

Temporary Relief.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT has been stated that the Social Security Commission provided relief temporarily to 3000 persons who were given W P A jobs. I would like to put my experience alongside that statement.

My husband went to work on a W P A job on Monday, March 21, without any food. I applied for relief that same day and was turned down. Because our seven children were hungry, I went back the next day and was turned down again, even though I begged them. I cried. I was hungry and pleaded with them, but they would not help me. I only asked them to help me until my husband made his first pay.

When I went home, my children were crying and I went back, but they only refused me again.

How can it be said that people don't go hungry in St. Louis?

MRS. F. C. C.

IT WORKS.

The message of the hour for the United States of America was sounded last week at Albany. The occasion was the opening of the eighth constitutional convention of the State of New York. The speaker was Chief Judge Frederick E. Crane of the New York Court of Appeals, presiding officer of that important gathering.

Rising to the occasion with an eloquent challenge for the times, Judge Crane said:

> We are here to do one thing, if nothing else: to prove to the world that our form of government does work; that it will work efficiently, and can meet the problems of the day and the necessities of the times as well and as intelligently as any other form of government; and that we are capable, by our earnestness and by our sincerity, in spite of all our differences, to rule ourselves, and to provide a proper rule for those whose representatives we are.

This charge to his fellow-delegates was no blind bowing before the ideal of democracy. Judge Crane, to be sure, thinks that our system of representative government is the best yet devised for the ruling of all the people, irrespective of class or condition. He looks back over a century and a half to find that the plan of the first Constitution framers in Philadelphia to bind rulers and ruled alike, to hold the governors as well as the governed within limits, has worked, in his words, "pretty well."

But he recognizes the complaints that have arisen in many foreign countries and even in certain quarters over here. He has not shut his ears to the harsh judgments which have been passed on our fundamental ideas in recent years. He hears the cry that our form of government is weak, effete and probably a failure, and he would meet it with a practical demonstration. He calls on the State constitutional convention of New York to show the world by its deliberations and achievements that our form of government does work!

This responsibility to prove that democracy works rests not on the New York constitutional convention alone. It is an obligation of the Congress of the United States, and every Senator and Representative has his full share of that obligation. The President and every member of the executive branch of the Government owns the same responsibility. Every state administration, every state Legislature, is under obligation to demonstrate continuously the workability of the American system.

And it does not stop at the state capitols. Every county court, every board of supervisors, every board of aldermen, every city commission, every school board is jointly responsible for proving to the world that our democracy is not weak and ineffective, that on the contrary it is strong and efficient and fully capable of meeting the problems a changing order lifts up from day to day.

Finally, of course, it comes down to the individual citizen himself. If he is thoughtful and concerned and broad-minded, democracy works well. If he is narrow and selfish and easily stampeded, it works badly. The chain is no stronger than its links, and the strength of the American democracy lies in the intelligence of its people.

There are differences, and differences there should be. It is the greatness of the American system that under it men of varying views can live together and enjoy the common blessings of liberty and freedom. All this sounds elementary, and it is. But these are days which require a return to fundamentals. When dictators stamp out human rights across the seas on either hand, it is time for the men and women of the United States to renew their faith in self-government, learned in their school days.

Democracy works. It has worked. It will go on working if we remain true to our heritage. Judge Crane addressed his appeal to 168 delegates at a State convention in Albany. It needs to echo in the ears of every American, from the highest in authority to the humblest.

THE MUSE VISITS MOBERLY.

Mrs. John Gasparotti of Moberly, one-time student at Washington University, resembled several million other Americans in thinking she had a book in her system, but she made herself different from most of the rest by writing it. Because her novel won the Dodd, Mead & Co.-Redbook Prize for the best first novel of the year, Mrs. Gasparotti has been in New York City hobnobbing with Sinclair Lewis, Pearl Buck and other literary bigwigs. And, incidentally, she has collected the prize of $10,000.

Her novel, "Young Dr. Galahad," is a story of the hardships and triumphs of a physician in a small Midwestern city. It represents, we are told, a sublimination of the author's early ambition to become a doctor. She wrote the book in the spare hours she could steal from the routine of doing her own housework and rearing four children—"with all the distractions of tonsils and teeth bands."

Mrs. Gasparotti, or Elizabeth Seifert, to use her pen name, deserves all the recognition she will receive. Even under the most favorable circumstances, writing a book is arduous work—as all those whom Mrs. Gasparotti's success inspires to try their hand will quickly discover.

WIMAR'S "BUFFALO HUNT BY INDIANS."

A campaign has been organized for the Statewide solicitation of funds to purchase Carl Wimar's widely-known oil painting, "Buffalo Hunt by Indians," from its present indigent owner, for presentation to the State of Missouri. As planned by a committee, organized by Mrs. Frederick B. Hall of St. Louis, chairman of the division of art of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the large canvas would be placed permanently in the historical museum at the State Capitol, where it could be seen by the thousands who visit Jefferson City each year.

This campaign can be indorsed and supported without hesitation. The German-born artist, who made friends with the Indians on the Missouri River frontier in the '50s, occupies an important place as a producer of early historical and ethnological pictorial records. He died in St. Louis in 1862, before he was 35; but he left a series of carefully detailed canvases of subjects, which, as the Review of Reviews said in 1909, "his contemporary artists practically ignored."

The value of the enterprise is further attested by the committee which has been assembled to sponsor the campaign. The support of Gov. Stark, Director Rogers of the City Art Museum, Mrs. Nettie Beauregard of the Missouri Historical Society, Floyd C. Shoemaker of the State Historical Society of Missouri, Dr. Horace Soper, to whom contributions may be sent at 3701 Westminster place, St. Louis, and others, would give distinction to the campaign if its purpose, namely, the preservation of one of Wimar's best paintings, had not already done so.

A FORESTRY IDEA WORTH INVESTIGATING.

The city water works or electric power plant which helps pay the cost of municipal government is a familiar institution in the United States. Not yet well-known, but none the less on its way to a similar distinction, is the community-owned forest, now already extended to 27 states. A new bulletin of the Forest Service tells its interesting story.

Although they have been developed without fanfare, upward of 1100 town and community or watershed forests have been set up under local government authority in this country, we learn on reading the bulletin. These forests are patterned after the well-established community forests of Europe and have demonstrated their many uses. They provide income to supplement local revenues. They open the way for community improvements which might otherwise be unobtainable. They afford a means, if a slight one, for reducing unemployment. They provide a natural and profitable use for much tax-delinquent land.

The Forest Service bulletin goes on from generalities to particular cases. Concord, N. H., has sold $16,000 worth of timber out of its systematically replanted forest. Petersham, Mass., has sold $5200 worth and expects to receive $50,000 from its timber during the next 40 years, while Westfield, also in Massachusetts, has estimated that it will receive a return of $20,000 a year on its 5000-acre watershed forest.

Clearly, here is something for many a Missouri community—particularly those in the natural timber-growing Ozark upland—to think about. If the community forest is proving a valuable asset for towns in New England, Missouri communities owe it to themselves to explore the idea. This applies as well to communities in those portions of Southern Illinois which are suited to systematic tree growing.

THE MAN WHO FOUGHT THE WHITEWASH.

The announcement of State Representative Francis Smith of St. Joseph that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senator calls to mind his public service in fighting the O'Malley insurance compromise.

Mr. Smith made a single-handed fight in the Legislature for the thorough investigation which the circumstances required. But the bosses arranged for a legislative whitewash, and so he followed the only course open to him. He moved to discharge the committee and end the meaningless inquiry. Defeated on this, he resigned from the committee. When his resignation was refused on a technicality, he announced he would attend no more hearings, and made public his reasons. Since then, O'Malley has been ousted by the Governor and the notorious compromise voided by the State Supreme Court.

On his record, Mr. Smith is entitled to aspire to promotion to the Senate. The need for men of his resolution in the chamber controlled by the Kinney-Casey-Brogan triumvirate is plain.

"THE SABER CUTS OF SAXON SPEECH."

Louisiana State University dedicated a number of new buildings the other day, and the ceremonies drew many notables to Baton Rouge. Among them were Walter M. Harrison, managing editor of the Oklahoma City Times, and the Italian Ambassador to the United States, Fulvio Suvich.

As a luncheon speaker, Editor Harrison denounced Fascism. Moved by an interview in which the Ambassador coyly confided that "Premier Mussolini does not make the laws of Italy, but merely recommends them to the Cabinet, which passes them," the editor remarked:

> Well, for 16 years Il Duce has operated as a dictator, with a Cabinet of stooges and a puppet King.

This comment of course created an awkward situation which brought to the rescue Louisiana's suave Governor who poured oily words on the boiling waters. The tension subsided. Nothing occurred remotely related to a rough-house. But the experience poses a nice question for the stylists.

The Italian Ambassador, as quoted, was speaking the language of diplomacy.

The Oklahoma editor was speaking the Oklahoma language out loud.

Our own notion is that the speech of Oklahoma packs a punch wholly wanting in the feathery patter of diplomacy, but let the stylists shoot it out.

SMALL—BUT SERENE.

Happy is the nation whose primary assets excite no predatory lust in its neighbors. Sweden answers this description. So do Norway, Denmark and, to a lesser extent, Finland. They are rated as minor Powers, but if one is looking for a cultivated attitude toward life, he is much more likely to find it in one of those charming Northern capitals than anywhere else in Europe.

These four Scandinavian countries have just concluded an agreement which pledges them to keep aloof from all other groupings of Powers and to stay out of wars. No doubt it is a happy accident that has given them an immunity from the prevailing European madness, but it is a commentary on their common sense and their recognition of civilized values that they are determined to reinforce their advantage in every possible way.

The relative safety enjoyed by a citizen of these countries is sufficiently enviable in itself. But when the high level of their arts and social practices, the serene beauty of their countryside and the general urbanity of their peoples are considered, they seem to be the only countries left in Europe which understand the true measure of greatness.

England strains every muscle in preparation for the "day" when the Empire may have to be defended with the blood of its people. But one Britisher has had this to say: "When England is as big as Denmark, London will be as safe as Copenhagen." Was that a prophecy or merely a wish?

THE NEW CHINESE WALL.

The Perversion of Pensions

Old-age assistance has degenerated into a political racket, threatening to "bankrupt character of people," as well as state treasuries, says writer; Missouri and Oklahoma are cited as affording two outstanding examples of mismanagement; effort to help aged can be saved only by bringing in civil service staffs of trained workers.

John T. Flynn, Author and Economist, in Collier's Weekly.

THE politicians have been singing love songs to the old folks about bigger and better pensions. And how the old folks do enjoy it; they can sit all night and listen.

As a matter of fact, these old-age assistance payments or pensions, as they are sometimes called, have just about taken on the proportions of a national scandal. The whole thing has become just another plum tree full of little plums for little people too old to work but not too old to vote.

The beneficiaries of this scandalous misuse of public funds are the chiselers who get on the rolls without right. The victims are the worthy old people who have to be satisfied with inadequate pensions so that there will be enough for the politicians to hand around to the ineligibles.

In Missouri, you are supposed to have to "show them" if you want to get anything. But you don't have to show them much to get on the old-age pension roll in that State—just a wrinkle or two and a suspicion that maybe you might perhaps be entitled to get there.

There the old-age assistance plan has been a grand feast for the politician. The thing a politician does business with is jobs. Of course it's not just jobs primarily that count—it's the pay roll. If a fellow can get on the pay roll without getting a job, so much the better.

When Missouri launched this plan, she was not toying with anything new. There was plenty of experience available if the authorities wanted to protect it from exploitation. They rejected the advice of experience and began this experiment with a plan of their own that was just about as bad as it could be.

The law provided pensions of not to exceed $30 a month for persons who had already reached the age of 70 years and who were in need. Having set up this simple formula, it threw the whole thing to the politicians.

The ward heelers went about urging the old folks—great numbers without any claim—to "go down to the county courthouse and give 'em your name and address and start gettin' your pension."

The consequence of all this was pretty much what you might expect. In New York State, where, notwithstanding the great poverty in the big industrial cities, the old-age assistance pension system is wisely and honestly administered, there are 130 out of every 1000 old people on the rolls. In Missouri, there are 402 out of every thousand, or over three times as many. And this means that great numbers not entitled to get anything are getting monthly checks and, of course, that great numbers in dire need are not paid enough. For while Missouri contemplates $30-a-month pensions, she has not yet averaged above $15.53.

In some counties almost every person over 70 is collecting something from the State. But in Butler County County, where, according to the last census, there are 603 persons over 70 years of age, pension checks are actually going to 654 persons.

In Missouri a new Governor has been elected—Democratic but not on such good terms with Boss Pendergast—and, as a result, the administration of the pension system has been overhauled.

In February, about 2400 ineligibles were stricken from the rolls. But the corrections move at a snail's pace and even if the new director does what he hopes—strikes about 7000 from the list—Missouri will still have an indefensible number of people on the rolls. And in 1940, when the law must be liberalized to admit to pensions all over 65, instead of all over 70, the State will face pension reinforcements of nearly 50,000.

The real old-age pension paradise is Oklahoma. In New York, 130 out of every 1000 old people get these assistance payments. In Missouri, 402 out of every 1000 get them. In Oklahoma, it is 600 out of every 1000.

But the long arm of the Social Security Board in Washington reached out to the prairies, did some investigating of its own and announced there would be no more Federal money for Oklahoma until it set up a proper administrative machine.

But in the meantime, all these states are having money trouble. Who is paying for all this? The rich? Of course, if you listen to one of these pensions-for-everybody champions you would think the money for this is being wrung out of the swollen bank accounts of the depraved rich. As a matter of fact, the states are soaking the poor to pay their share and, incidentally, the Federal Government is doing the same thing to pay its share.

Thus, under the evil influence of local politics, a great experiment in human decency—the effort to mitigate the cares of helpless old age—is being brought into disgrace and perhaps collapse. Of course the cure of this is simple, though now, with its bad start, it will be difficult to bring about. The weakness of the whole plan lies in the weakness of the Federal law, which turns the administration over bag and baggage to the states.

The Federal law should have laid down minimum requirements that would have excluded the politicians. The relief and pension and subsidy laws must be severely disassociated from politics, committed to the administration of civil service staffs of trained workers.

Some of the states are riding headlong toward bankruptcy on this wave of ill-considered legislation. And along with the states' finances they are preparing to bankrupt a far more precious asset—

The character of their people.

TOPEKA GOES HIGH-HAT.

From the Topeka State Journal.

A FEW weeks ago, we commented on the appearance of rubber-tired wheelbarrows in Hotsy-Totsy Town, Topeka's uppity West Side settlement. It has been brought to our attention, with quivering nostrils, that we overlooked something vitally important. These new yard conveyances have ball bearings!

By next Saturday, we presume, we'll be told they have tail lights, air brakes and are equipped with radios.

The Spanish Tragedy

From the New York Herald Tribune.

THE dispatches continue to record the bitter death of republican Spain—weakened by its sectionalism, its individualism and independence of spirit; abandoned by the Soviets, which alone raised an effective hand to save what was, after all, and despite its radical strains, an experiment in liberal democracy; crushed, finally, under a remorseless superiority of fire, steel and the machinery of death.

Perhaps some miracle may still change the face of affairs; perhaps, if not, the end may not be quite so near as it seems. The loyalists are said to have a strongly prepared position east of Lerida, and though the Nationalists sunder the vital sea road at Tortosa, that in itself need not end the resistance either of Barcelona or Madrid. But the power to resist must be ebbing.

At no point in Franco's great drive have his troops shown signs of outrunning their support or over-extending their striking power; at no point have the loyalists shown signs of building up their defensive strength as they fall back upon their bases. Unless such evidence appears, it must be only a question of time.

Catalonia—which Madrilenos used derisively to describe as "the only nation observing the non-intervention agreement"—is now paying the price of her earlier detachment and localism; republican Spain as a whole is paying the price of any attempt to oppose amateur enthusiasm to professionally directed artillery, naked courage to armored tanks and to air-bombing, a loosely knit mass movement to centralized dictatorship backed up by the scientific aid of two military totalitarianisms.

In the conflict itself, which owes its unparalleled savagery to the fact that it is a combination of civil, religious, class and international warfare, one's sympathies may differ. But whatever the sympathies, no believer in the old-established sanctions of liberal society can take pleasure in this picture of a people's fate being settled, not by law or majorities or reason or principles—though to these things, both sides could appeal—but by the cold imperatives of military professionalism, foreign intervention, imported mercenaries and the weight of machinery.

So, however, it will be settled, barring the miracle. And if there is no miracle, what then? If Mr. Chamberlain's apparent hopes prove justified; if a Francoist dictatorship in Spain provides the basis for the removal of Italian troops from the peninsula and the Balearics; if, in other words, the swastikas on the Brenner incline Mussolini to make some sacrifices in the interest of Franco-British friendship, it seems probable that a Western European system could be put together with enough working stability to look with calm on further Nazi advances down the Danube.

The realization of such a vision depends, of course, on many factors—from the real nature of Mussolini's calculations to the real ability of Franco to control his conquest without foreign support.

Should Mr. Chamberlain's hopes be disappointed, it is hard to read a happy future for democracy in Europe. But at least one can say that it is better for Spain to be a pawn of diplomacy than the pawn of demolition bombs; and the diplomacy may yet produce a reasonably workable solution of the question.

CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES BEFORE SCHOOL BOARD

Tax Election Past, Members Turn to Questions Left Undecided for Several Months.

GENERAL SURVEY PROPOSAL PENDING

Naming of New Beaumont Principal and Election of Supply Commissioner, Other Matters.

With the 85-cent school tax question settled by an overwhelmingly favorable vote in last Tuesday's election, the Board of Education has turned its attention to a number of controversial matters which have been left undecided for several months for varying reasons. These questions include:

General survey of the school system—Motion for this was laid over last month until next Tuesday, when a public hearing will be held. A citizens' committee has been created, under auspices of the League of Women Voters, to sponsor this idea. Opinions of board members were sharply divided for and against it last month.

Naming the new high school, temporarily called Southwest High—The Instruction Committee took this under advisement last November after a public hearing, and has done nothing about it since. Strong citizen groups have advocated the names Central and Southwest and others have favored a variety of other names.

New principal for Beaumont High—An active movement of patrons for selection of Albert H. Huntington, now acting principal, to fill a vacancy, although the superintendent recommended another man, caused a postponement of change from February to June.

Election of Supply Commissioner—The four-year term of Charles Lee Barr expired in December, but because some members opposed his re-election the board voted in January to retain him at its pleasure. There have been indications that at least a bare majority of the board favored giving him a new four-year term. The matter may be called up at any regular meeting.

Union Seeks Closed Shop.

Closed shop for custodians' and matrons' union—The Building Committee has heard repeated requests from the union, an A. F. of L. affiliate claiming a majority of the 500 or more employes as members, but has taken no action. Some board members are inclined to believe they have no right to give outright recognition to a union or grant the closed shop. The union also has asked for an eight-hour day for custodians, higher pay for matrons and full 12-month employment for matrons.

New Stowe (Negro) Teachers' College—Acquisition of the site, a slow process, recently has been completed. The construction question may be taken up Tuesday on a report of the availability of the site, whereupon the next move would be for the board to order plans drawn. Construction funds have been earmarked.

Waring (Negro) School—The order to erect this on a corner of the Vashon High School campus, made in November, 1936, has been held up by an injunction suit of Negro objectors. The protestants won in Circuit Court and the board has perfected an appeal to the Supreme Court of Missouri, but has not decided whether to press it. Negroes have urged the board to buy another site in the vicinity, but the board has not acted. The P W A has served notice that its grant allotment of about $73,500 for this structure would be withdrawn if construction was not finished by June 30, 1939. Doubtless the Supreme Court appeal, if pressed, would not be settled in time to build on the Vashon site by that date.

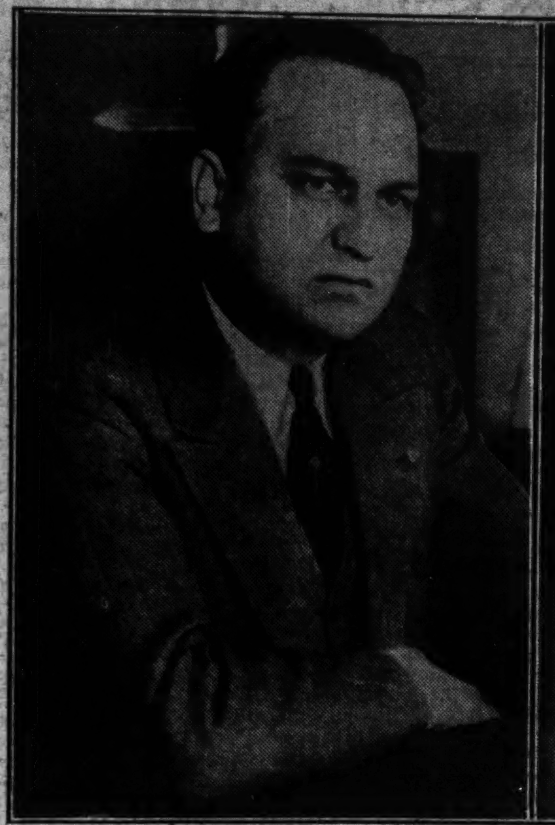
Free College Advocated.

Free general college—Various groups have been urging such a college. Dr. Gerling would like to establish it. The matter was deferred heretofore because of uncertainty over the tax election result. A formal recommendation may be made in June or July, in connection with the budget for the next fiscal year. Officials have considered buying the old Mary Institute building, Lake avenue and Waterman boulevard, for a college for white students, if the price was reasonable; Washington University has suggested a price of $200,000. For Negroes, there would be space in the proposed new Stowe College. Dr. Gerling said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that, if buildings were available, he would recommend establishment of an accredited college of arts and sciences, to be opened next September. Officials have feared that Washington and St. Louis universities might object to the competition.

St. Louis U. Glee Club Concert.

The annual concert of the St. Louis University Glee Club will be held at 8:15 p. m. April 8 in the auditorium of the School of Law. The program will be under the supervision of Dr. Patrick Ward Gainer, director of the organization.

Illinois Senatorial Candidates



SCOTT W. LUCAS.

MICHAEL L. IGOE.

Political Horsetrading Brings Igoe Into Kelly-Nash Camp

from State's Attorney Courtney the 100-odd policemen usually assigned to his office.

Igoe is not greatly perturbed about this side-issue, nor is he worried about the charge of the Horner partisans that he is boss-dominated. He just laughs at that. He never took orders in Springfield and he does not intend to begin in Washington, he says. He points out that he has not permitted Kelly and Nash to mount the stumps in his behalf—much as Ed Kelly enjoys delivering a campaign speech.

Opponents, however, say that this is merely shrewd strategy. Kelly's orations were a millstone around Dr. Bundesen's neck—a load that Igoe did not propose to carry.

Can Afford Dignity.

And, in a way, Igoe admits this. Accustomed to uphill fights, this time he is out in front, he feels, and there is no point in entering a vitriolic fight of the Kelly brand. He can afford to be dignified, he declares, and in his speeches he even says nice things about Gov. Horner. He really does admire Horner's administration, but he insists that Horner is not his opponent. He warns voters about identifying Scott Lucas with the Governor. They are not men of the same caliber, he insists.

Rotund and pink-faced, with thinning gray hair, Igoe can wear kid gloves or boxing gloves. He has demonstrated that during this campaign as well as in the Legislature. But he really prefers the boxing gloves.

In Springfield he was a hard-boiled, effective leader. He first went to the Legislature under Democratic Gov. Dunne, but performed most of his service under the Republican Len Small, ally of Chicago's "Big Bill" Thompson, and the dry Republican Louis Emmerson. He fought both of them, especially Small, tooth and nail.

Often he had to resort to rough and tumble methods to make himself heard in a chamber full of Republicans. The legislative correspondents like to recall the day his patience with a heckler from Rock Island—a man who affected a "crew" haircut—came to an end.

"Sit down, you porcupine," roared Igoe. The man never bothered him again.

He Led Filibuster.

Probably Igoe's most spectacular accomplishment in Springfield was his leadership in 1923 of a filibuster which tied up the business of the House for six days as a protest against the measures being used by the majority leaders to put through Mayor Thompson's legislation to double the bonding power of the City of Chicago. At that time the law set the bonding limit at 5 per cent of the city's assessed real estate values. These values, in turn, were supposed to represent 50 per cent of the real worth of properties. The Thompson bill increased this to 100 per cent.

Igoe finally consented to the passage of this measure on condition that the Thompson forces withdraw a bill that would permit the Chicago school building tax to be diverted to other uses.

Labor voters are supporting Igoe because he backed an eight-hour day law for women in 1919, and a bar on child labor in 1923. His greatest contribution to their cause, however, came in 1915 when he effected the adoption of an anti-injunction bill that put an end to the issuance of blanket orders against labor unions without notice. This had become a common practice with Chicago judges. Against his record must be set his failure to vote on a number of other important labor bills.

Some Other Reforms.

In 1915, too, he championed the first law to give school teachers security of tenure as well as a pension. He showed his interest in honest civil service in 1918 when he led a losing fight against an amendment that permitted the discharge of a civil servant without a prior hearing.

As a liberal, Igoe battled for Women's Suffrage, the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and of the State dry law, reforms in the handling of State funds, and engineered the adoption of the first Illinois emergency relief measure.

With the exception of the hard roads legislation, however, Igoe probably takes more pride in his fight for the Illinois link in the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway than in anything else that he did in Springfield. And that probably was the one time that he was on the same side as Mayor Thompson.

To Chicago in 1893.

Igoe was born near St. Paul, Minn., on April 16, 1885. His father, James F. Igoe, a telegraph operator, was killed when a fire swept through the plant of the Minneapolis Tribune four years later. Mrs. Igoe then became a telegraph operator, and in 1893—the World's Fair year—she brought her children to Chicago. Igoe began contributing to the support of the family at an early age, but he did manage to attend the University of Chicago. He secured work as a Government stenographer in Washington and went to the Georgetown law school.

On his graduation, he returned to Chicago to open a law office, but was soon active in politics. In 1912 he was elected to the Legislature for the first time from the Fifth district—located in Hyde Park, seat of the University of Chicago.

Although the district was strongly Republican, he represented it—with the exception of two terms when he made unsuccessful races for the office of State's Attorney—until 1931. The Illinois system of minority representation, of course, helped to keep him in the Legislature. Under this, three representatives are elected from each district. If a party nominates three men, each candidate, of course, gets only one vote; if it nominates but one, he gets three votes for every ballot marked for him. In the Fifth district the Republicans usually named only two candidates, and the Democrats only Igoe.

He Catches Eye of Boss.

Igoe's ability did not escape the eye of Boss George Brennan, the real founder of the Chicago Democratic machine, and he designated the legislator as his successor as party leader on his deathbed in 1928. Igoe did become National Committeeman—a post now held by Boss Nash.

The rising Anton Cermak, however, did not bow gracefully to Brennan's political last will and testament. Igoe, meanwhile, had been named a member of the South Park Board by the judges of the circuit court—a position without salary but commanding considerable patronage.

When Igoe made his bid for the governorship in 1932 against Bruce Campbell of Belleville and Judge Horner, Cermak turned his guns on him. He assailed Igoe because he drew $5000 a year as auditor of the South Park Board, and he also attacked him as a partner in the Federal Pipe Co., a concern that was getting its share of governmental contracts. The other partners, Cermak said, were the members of Igoe's law firm. The Mayor, whose career was cut short by a bullet intended for President Roosevelt, also became politically indignant because this law firm had been retained by the Sheriff of Cook County.

Defended George Remus.

Generally speaking, however, Igoe's law practice has not been criticised by his opponents. He did defend George Remus, the bootlegger whose illicit exploits included the emptying of the Jack Daniel distillery in St. Louis, in a liquor case in Cincinnati.

"Remus, who had been a lawyer in Chicago before he became involved in bootlegging, asked me to come down to Cincinnati because he said he wanted one lawyer he could trust among the 10 who were defending him," Igoe told this reporter. "And I have never made any bones about the $200-a-day fee that I received in that case."

Later when Remus was on trial in Cincinnati for the murder of his wife, Igoe was asked to appear as a character witness in his behalf.

"I wanted to know how I could do that," said Igoe. "I was told that they only wanted to question me about Remus' reputation as a lawyer in the days when he was practicing in Chicago. Well, to be admitted to the bar, a man is supposed to convince the Supreme Court that he is of good moral character. And Remus was admitted to the bar. So, with the understanding that I was to be asked only about that phase of his career, I went down."

In Cincinnati, however, the prosecutor went farther and questioned Igoe about the fee he received from Remus. "He also asked me whether I had received any gifts from the man," Igoe told this reporter, "and I told him that I got a suit case."

Second Phase of Career.

Igoe began the second phase of his political career after he had been punished by the machine for his opposition to Horner in 1932. With Cermak out of the picture, he ran for Congressman-at-Large in 1934 and won by the sufferance of the machine. He had served but a short time when Senator Lewis secured for him the post of United States District Attorney. Again no objection was made by the Kelly-Nash forces. No doubt, they remembered that Igoe had campaigned for Kelly in the 1935 mayoral contest, asking "a vote of appreciation" for Cermak's successor.

Despite this and the fact that Kelly was president of the South Park Board while Igoe was a member, the two men are hardly on intimate terms. Kelly came to the Park Board from the "Whoopee Era" of the Sanitary District Commission and immediately began to embellish Chicago's lake front with parks and boulevards and such structures as the Soldier Field Stadium, the Adler Planetarium and the Shedd Aquarium. It has been said that the bills presented to the taxpayers for these improvements were high, but it must also be said that Igoe had the courage to disagree with Kelly on occasion.

Igoe is no reformer, but he is a moderate liberal—a shrewd politician with fairly high standards. He has been faithful to the interests of Chicago without descending to sectionalism. He has been loyal to his friends. He is intelligent and able to care for himself.

These qualities, together with a sonorous voice and a gift for biting invective — he once described Mabel Walker Willebrandt as "a lady jackass" — will make him something more than a nonentity in the Senate where the Roosevelt faction is already dusting off a seat for him.

In Washington he will follow the President — but not blindly, Igoe says. He is already following his example in Chicago, accepting votes wherever they are offered—even if by the Kelly-Nash machine. And considering that he carried 40 "downstate" counties in 1932—more than Horner did—it seems a safe bet that he will join his friend Lewis in the upper house in Washington. But all bets are gambles.

ROOSEVELT SATIRIZED AT GRIDIRON DINNER

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A world turned upside down was pictured tonight at the semi-annual dinner of the Gridiron Club as the members of the well-known organization of Washington newspaper men impartially turned the heat of satire on dictators, politicians, labor leaders, "economic royalists," mere taxpayers and business men.

President Roosevelt, heading a distinguished audience of almost 500 guests, saw himself portrayed in a combination suit of a football quarterback and a sea captain standing on the quarter-deck of the Ship of State while big and little business, sore and seasick, hung disconsolately over the rail, wishing he would attain at least one of his objectives after five years. Unmoved by their pleas, he calmly announced that he had many objectives and hoped to reach them all simultaneously by directing his course toward one and then toward another. The scene ended with the Ship of State on the rocks.

Roosevelt as Caesar.

In another skit he was shown in the role of Caesar, assisted by his son, James Augustus, auctioning off his commentaries, his "innermost second-hand secrets, which never have been published before—except in the newspapers."

Casting about for other things to sell, son James suggested advertising in the Congressional Record and putting the daily Treasury report on the news stands as the "administration scandal sheet." Caesar quickly took the lowest bid for his literary endeavors, explaining that he wanted to get rid of them before they got stale.

To the tune of a feud ballad, Paw Franklin's troubles with his T V A directors, Dr. Arthur Morgan, Harcourt Morgan and David Lilienthal, were graphically described up to the point where Paw, his patience exhausted, leveled his squirrel gun at Arthur Morgan, only to have the gun backfire and singe himself.

The absence of Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange now awaiting sentence for embezzlement, was noted by "four members of the New York Yacht Club finance committee," scanning the faces of the guests through telescopes. Whitney was a frequent guest at the dinners and often was stood up as an autstanding personage.

Hoover on the Scene.

Former President Hoover's ambition to run again in 1940 was depicted by a scene at a pier in New York. The former President, disguised in a Rough Rider ontfit, was quickly recognized by Dr. Glenn Frank, a customs inspector, who introduced himself as the chairman of the 264 members of the committee of 100 selected to draw up a Republican program.

Among the things the customs inspector drew from the Hoover luggage was a speech on the American system as he had rediscovered it in Europe. This elicted from Dr. Frank: "You certainly believe in evolution—from stuff shirt to Brown Shirt."

"No," the former President replied, "It was a case of Topeka or swastika."

Dr. Frank wanted to know if Hoover would again be willing to be "our peerless loser."

"Why do you think I am wearing this Rough Rider uniform?" he replied sharply. "We must not let the people up."

After this skit, Dr. Frank was introduced as the Republican speaker of the evening. President Roosevelt, as is customary, closed the dinner with an unreported speech.

The St. Louis guests were Mayor Dickmann, Charles G. Ross, a former president of the club; Dr. Roland M. Klemme, Russell W. Murphy and James Conzelman.

Labor Movement in Britain

ers was formed. Many individual unions are very wealthy; altogether in trade union treasuries there is more than $100,000,000 and wealth makes for conservatism and caution. It must not be understood that this criticism comes from extreme leftist sources. Many true Laborites and Liberals are concerned over the caution of the party's recent course.

But the Spanish crisis has done not a little to unite the many elements within the Labor party. Even the ardent pacifists who follow the lead of George Lansbury have begun to realize the impossibility of their position, according to Morrison; and on this issue of an aggressive foreign policy Laborites believe they might be able to win a large section, if not perhaps a majority, of British voters who are disgusted with what they regard as Chamberlain's indecision.

Program Ready, When and If.

If and when the party returns to power an immediate program is ready, Morrison pointed out. Laborites would move at once, no matter how threatening the international situation, to put this program into effect, Morrison said. These detailed proposals were for the most part worked out at the annual conference of the party at Leicester in 1932. Here, taken from a pamphlet called "For Socialism and Peace, the Labor Party's Program of Action," is the immediate plan of "economic reorganization":

"1. To apply a policy of full and rapid Socialist economic planning, under central direction.

"2. To establish public ownership and control of the primary industries and services as a foundation step, including the banking system, transport, coal and power, water supply, iron and steel, and other key industries.

"3. To establish public ownership of the land and its proper utilization, including the provision of national parks.

"4. To reorganize agriculture under public direction and control.

"5. To apply public regulation, including enforcement of reorganization, of industries and services not under public ownership, in accordance with general economic planning.

"6. To establish the right, acknowledge by law, of employes in socialized industries to an effective share in direction and control.

"7. To utilize fully the consumers' co-operative movement in national economic planning."

Step by step in the pamphlet, and in others like it, the program of the party is detailed; what shall be done to the Bank of England; how the railways shall be taken over and so on. There have been other and more elaborate charts of future action. One of them was "Practical Socialism for Britain," by Hugh Dalton, a party leader, which was reviewed at length in the Post-Dispatch in June, 1935. The official pamphlets put out by the party have the virtue of brevity and simplicity.

Morrison himself has outlined a detailed blueprint for bringing one industry, transportation, under public ownership and control. In his book "Socialization and Transport," he uses the area of greater London as an example, emphasizing, however, that the same methods would apply on a larger scale. As a member of the London County Council, early in his political career, Morrison served on a transportation committee and became thoroughly familiar with all phases of the problem. This early experience equipped him to serve as Minister of Transport in the cabinet. In many respects what Morrison has to say about the problem of consolidation and ownership of the means of transportation applies to the serious railroad situation now confronting this country.

Free Competition a Social Ill.

Far from free competition bringing a higher measure of social good, at least in transport, Morrison writes, it tends to give "the highest measure of social ill." "The remarkable thing," he adds, "is not that the doctrine of free competition has been blown sky-high by Socialists, or even that it has been set aside by anti-Socialists; the remarkable thing is that this economic absurdity has possessed the public mind as long as it has."

"I suggest that though the political fight may be the heavier," he says, "it may be simpler and more direct if—given a determined government possessing adequate support—we go straight for socialization over as wide a field as possible instead of mere regulation. If time did not press and if there was real virtue in governing the country on the basis that we must never do the thing we know to be right if we can find some half-way or quarter-way house to call at, a case could be made for regulation first and socialization afterwards. But that means a wicked delay; moreover it involves two stand-up fights instead of one. So we may as well determine on the second fight first, and thus avoid altogether the half-way house fight—in many ways the more difficult."

Necessary to Delegate Authority.

At some length Morrison writes of the necessity to delegate authority. He says:

"If the Ministers of a Socialist Government are to be immersed in a large amount of detail connected with the management of industries which have been socialized, it will be physically impossible for them to give adequate time to the socialization of other industries still in private ownership. I have never swallowed the 'Socialism in Our Time' slogan, partly because I have an instinctive dislike of that kind of slogan, and partly because 'Our Time' is ridiculous as a measure of years as between a veteran of 80 and an 18-year-old member of the Labor Party's League of Youth.

"But I am all for speed. The vision of one minister alone socializing two big industries in one year pleases me enormously; and it is a possibility. The pre-war ideal of Socialism in the dim and distant futrue pleases me less and less. Socialism for me is a policy for today and not for some indefinite day after tomorrow. But if Labor ministers are to be choked up with the management of industries which have been socialized, the revolution of our 'Socialism in Our Time' friends will be a slow process.

"The function of Labor governments in the future will rather be to secure the socialization of industry after industry under a management which can, broadly, be relied upon to go on with its work. And having done one good deed, the minister can let the people put in charge carry on with the work thus done, whilst he immediately sets about the other good deeds of socialization which await his attention."

Others Think So, Too.

While this was written in 1933, Morrison indicates that he would not change it today. There are others within the Labor party, it should be added, who are much less optimistic than Morrison. One of these is Prof. Harold J. Laski of the London School of Economics, now in Washington conducting a two-week seminar at George Washington University. It is feared that the owners of industry would undertake economic sabotage on such a scale that it would be impossible to carry out any plan of socialization. Laski and others in the left wing won a victory at the party congress last fall, when they succeeded in bringing about a change in the method of election to the national executive. As a result of this change, Prof. Laski and two other leftists were elected to the executive.

Morrison will stay in America until April 20, spending most of his time in New York, conferring with Laborites here and lecturing to trade-union groups. His only scheduled speech outside New York was in Chicago on Friday. It is expected that before his return he will go to Washington to talk with President Roosevelt, as he did on the occasion of his last visit here. Realizing that methods of political action are entirely different in the two countries, American labor leaders nevertheless are confident that they can learn a great deal, both on the practical and the theoretical side, from this ambassador of British labor.

Fear of War Spurs Soviets' Steel Plans

of war, in restaurants, on trains, in the long lines of people waiting to buy railroad tickets. War is like arrest, or exile, or death itself—it is not talked about. But it is universally believed to be both imminent and inevitable. Most Russians accept it, make the necessary adjustments and go on about their business.

They have, after all, more pleasant things to talk about than the coming war or the continuing purge. For nearly all of them the last 10 years of Siberian construction have apparently produced both pride and hope. Hunger is gone, apparently for a long time, and physical suffering has been sharply cut. Although they are poor in many ways, by their own admission, the curse has been taken off their poverty.

Meanwhile, they say, they want peace and a chance to build their future; common citizens talking in smoking cars on trains in the Urals are as clear about this as their Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinov. They point out that their military preparations are conspicuously defensive. The Russian people have been told and retold that war against the Soviet Union by Germany or Japan is inevitable, and they hope that their readiness to defend themselves will help to postpone the actual attack.

In the Shadow of the Swastika

THE MORTAL STORM. By Phyllis Bottome. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

HERE is the story of a family that is destroyed by the storm of modern German politics. Dr. Roth, a brilliant Jewish scientist, and his wife, who belongs to the old aristocracy, cling to their faith in liberalism despite the Nazi hysteria, whereas Olaf and Emil, the sons of Frau Roth by a previous marriage, are swept away in a passionate espousal of Hitlerism. Freya, the daughter of the house, is a promising medical student so absorbed in her own ambitions that she fails to understand the trend of events. Too young and vital to heed the warnings of her half-brothers or to make any compromises with life, she does not realize until too late that her insistence upon freedom of action has brought about the murder of her Communist lover, the death of her father, and the ruin of her own career.

Happily, the author has shown restraint in the handling of a theme which might easily have degenerated into a mere tale of horror. Scenes of physical violence are introduced only when necessary to plot development; the main interest in the story lies in the gradual psychological change which takes place in the characters under the impact of the Nazi rule. The tragedy of these people, however, is not imposed upon them, but arises quite naturally from a conflict with their environment. Dr. Roth, Emil, Olaf, each suffers his particular fate because his mind and emotions force him to act as he does.

It is with the character of Freya that the author has shown the most tact and understanding. The girl's failings are those of youth and idealism; stubborn courage is her undoing. Generous, intense, logical, she is bewildered by a world suddenly become brutal and unreasonable. This is the record of her growth from an enthusiastic and heedless adolescent into a woman matured by sorrow and necessity.

There are, it must be admitted, certain flaws in this work. Too much conversation upon ethics becomes at times boring. Miss Bottome, ever unable to resist an opportunity to introduce a sensational scene of childbirth, detracts from the story as a whole by the melodramatic exaggeration of Freya's ordeal upon the mountain. Then, too, the poetic justice in the contrast between the saintly Dr. Roth and the degenerate Nordic, who was the father of Emil and Olaf, is a bit too obvious. But these are minor faults which are outweighed by positive virtues. Miss Bottome has shown a real comprehension of character, a feeling for atmosphere, and a sense of drama. A real sorrow over the German situation and a passion for the democratic ideal have made this her most successful work.

Succeeded Without "Success"

CHORDS AND DISCORDS. By Sam Franko. (The Viking Press, New York.)

A MUSICIAN may be able to fulfill all the exacting requirements of his art, and yet, if circumstances are not favorable, fail to win public acclaim. Thus, while New York and the important capitals of Europe recognized and appreciated Sam Franko's ability as concert-master, composer, and conductor, and while he could include artists of the caliber of his own brother, Nahan, and Yehudi Menuhin among his pupils, he did not succeed in building an international reputation as concert violinist.

Sam Franko, however, was an innovator. He was the first to organize an all-American symphony orchestra; he founded the New York String Quartet; he undertook the training of a children's orchestra in the Jewish quarter of New York, most of the members of which became successful professional musicians. But his most important contributions were his concerts of old music, in which he introduced the now famous Dolmetsch family to this country, and for which he prepared material that has since enriched the entire musical world.

The memoirs of this American musician, written when illness forced a long "fermata" upon his activities, will be of particular interest to other musicians and to music lovers, not only because of Mr. Franko's achievements, but because of his professional associations and friendships with the distinguished artists of Europe and America over a period of 80 years. Nor can the value of his authoritative analyses and comparisons of the techniques of virtuosos and teachers, or his clear, discerning views on music in general, be overestimated.

By his refusal to compromise with his ideals, Sam Franko may have sacrificed worldly "success," but sympathetic readers of his life story will be inspired with profound respect and admiration for a man who could say, "I have not achieved the goal which I had set before me, but I am grateful to my destiny, grateful from the bottom of my heart."

Diplomat Records Experiences

THE EDUCATION OF A DIPLOMAT. By Hugh Wilson. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

HERE is one of the brightest books that have come to this reader in a long time. By the new American Ambassador to Germany, it is a delightful report on the first years of a career diplomat. The chronicle begins with Mr. Wilson's departure from his native Evanston as a young business man in his twenties, and continues through his preparatory training in Paris, his service as assistant to the American Minister to Portugal, his happy and fruitful stay in Guatemala, his work in Buenos Aires, Berlin, and Vienna, and finally at our legation in Berne, Switzerland, where he was sent when American diplomats were recalled from Germany and Austria.

Mr. Wilson's family frowned on his choice of life work, but he is well pleased. He admits the disadvantages. The career diplomat spends his days in alien groups and never becomes an integral part of any community; his fate may be decided in what seems an arbitrary manner; monetary rewards are slight; the best posts may go to political hacks. But there are real and enduring compensations—the opportunity for continuous study, access to the most interesting personalities, the sense of duty accomplished.

Almost every page has its quotable lines. Recalling the Victorian era of his youth, Mr. Wilson says: "We lived in the illusion of immutability, but we had unquestioning faith in the illusion." There is a memorable description of the Douro valley in Portugal, where port-wine grapes are grown—late autumn, the steep slopes russet and purple with the vine leaves after the grapes have been plucked, troops of laughing girls, with bare legs stained to the thighs, marching through the vats and singing to guitars, while the warm sun pours through the open doors of the vat rooms.

There is an appreciative introduction by Claude Bowers, American Ambassador to Spain, who expresses the hope that other career diplomats will set down their observations and experiences. It is to be hoped that they may do so, if they can write half as well as Mr. Wilson does. In any case, the charming Illinoisan, who has spent his life under foreign skies, should find time to bring his story through the World War and to the present troubled days.

A Counterpart Of Mowgli

THE YEARLING. By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

FULL-GROWN, Penny Baxter was no larger than a husky boy. Short rations and hookworm had hampered his development until he stood among his neighbors, the huge Forresters, "like an ash sapling among giant oaks." After his return from the Civil War, Penny had retired to the Florida scrub lands with a buxom young wife who would not be terrified at invading alligators or marauding bears. Children were born, and all died in infancy. Then Jody appeared. Like Fodderwing Forrester, grotesquely crippled child of shiftless hunters and traders, the puny youngster loved and understood all the wild creatures abounding in the swamps and "hammocks." Fodderwing was allowed to keep a curious assortment of pets, but Mrs. Baxter held to her determination that Jody should not be pampered in similar fashion.

Mrs. Baxter's years in the scrub had served to sour her disposition. Gradually the brightness of her bridal dreams had faded into the gray hue of poverty. Of the carefree Forresters she said: "Ever' one of 'em's lower'n a doodle-bug. And blackhearted to boot." But the harum-scarum neighbors proved they could be "purely friendly" on an occasion when Penny, bitten by a rattlesnake and near death, was saved by their prompt and openhanded assistance. It was a hard life in the scrub. The soil was meager, and hunger was not unknown when crops failed because of drouth, flood, or hurricane.

After the death of Fodderwing, Jody felt a great loneliness which was only partially assuaged by the devotion of a pet faun whose mother had been shot by Penny. The small creature supplied that companionship and love which more fortunate children find with parents, playmates, or family. But the deer grew up, developed a taste for corn, sweet potatoes, and other food crops the scrub family could not spare. Penny reflected sadly that both boy and deer were now "yearlings," would soon be destructive and troublesome. A tragedy precipitated by the eruption of his mother's smoldering antagonism toward the faun left Jody convinced that he could never love anything, man or woman or child, as he had loved the yearling. "He would be lonely all his life. But a man took it for his share."

Though she sometimes inclines toward ultra-sweetness, Mrs. Rawlings is a shrewd student of wild life, and her elf of the Florida scrub is a legitimate descendant of Kipling's Mowgli and other boys who have loved and been loved by animals. Her frequently labored mannerisms do not seriously detract from the enjoyment of her novel.

He Couldn't Live For Thinking

THE WAYWARD PILGRIMS. By Gerald Warner Brace. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

IN a delicately garrulous second novel, Gerald Warner Brace reverses the theme of his first, "The Islands," which told of a young Maine shipbuilder who couldn't think for living. Here we meet a young Massachusetts college instructor who couldn't live for thinking.

The latter, however, makes better use of the chance given both to reform their philosophies, and when "luck cuts him loose and lifts his eyes to freedom" by offering him a fellowship to study local variations in the Vermont dialect, he joyously packs a knapsack and starts off for the White Mountains. On first alighting from the train in Vermont, he is picked up by Margot, a tall, dark-eyed woman who, having lost her pocketbook while fleeing from her third husband, is faced with the necessity of returning to him on foot. She offers to share the road with Minot, and before long they have discovered in each other an infinite, tongue-loosening understanding. Talking continuously of what Minot has learned by reading and Margot by living, they encounter all manner of Vermont folk—hard-bitten store-keepers, hospitable dwellers in white farmhouses, bleak souls huddling meanly on barren hillsides, and a misunderstood farmer-poet who accompanies them on part of their journey. Minot, of course, falls in love with Margot, but after a night in a haymow she unaccountably leaves him to pursue her own casual way.

In "The Islands" Brace's mysticism was somewhat tempered by a more eventful plot. Here he has all but left substance behind. Margot is a sort of Belle Dame sans Merci, and Minot is far more mind than matter. Even the philosophical concepts for which the story is merely a carrier are so etherialized that they sift through the brain, leaving little residue.

Brace's real ability lies not so much in character study or philosophical discourse as in his restrained and polished style and his gift for scene-painting. His regional descriptions, suffused with the character and emotions of the inhabitants, give the feel of sunshine, of altitude or depth, of peace or menace.

A Great-Hearted Human Being

JACOB A. RIIS: POLICE REPORTER, REFORMER, USEFUL CITIZEN. By Louise Ware. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

AS long as the struggle against poverty continues, the name of Jacob A. Riis is likely to be remembered. His chief efforts were directed against the crowded slum, and, as a result, Mulberry Bend Park and the Jacob A. Riis Neighborhood Settlement now stand where the slum sprawled before. His labor for more parks for the poor has left a definite mark upon New York City, so that, more than 20 years after his death, one of the most important park developments is named after him. The Red Cross stamps on Christmas mail might very well carry the portrait of Riis, for he suggested their use in the United States. And undoubtedly the Boy Scouts honor him as one of the founders of their organization. These are some of the fruits brought forth by the strong and generous nature of the Danish immigrant whom Theodore Roosevelt called the "most useful citizen of New York."

Though he wrote a good deal, he cannot be considered a man of letters. He was the evangelical reformer, not the literary artist or creative thinker. It was what he wrote, not how he wrote, that made his books important; and he wrote what he saw. What lay beneath the surface was beyond him. Charity must, by its very nature, concern itself only with the effects of poverty, never with the causes thereof. Fifty years after Riis wrote "How the Other Half Lives," with the hope that it would arouse sufficient indignation to reduce poverty, there is as much poverty as ever. Today the President speaks of one-third of a nation that is poorly housed, clothed, and fed.

Were Riis alive today his naive and indomitable optimism would still keep him a reformer. He could still help the individual in whom he was primarily interested. He had a limited social outlook, and his chief complaint against the social workers was that "they are so blamed social that the individual disappears." It is therefore not surprising that he understood the labor movement even less. He deplored the "tyranny of so-called organized labor" because it opposed his pet immigration schemes. He would undoubtedly be astonished to learn that labor has taken over his job of fighting for better housing by demanding the expenditure of a billion dollars annually for homes for the poor. But his sincerity and devotion were such that he would gladly have cheered their efforts.

Louise Ware's sympathetic and searching study here noted is the first full-length biography of that great-spirited man.

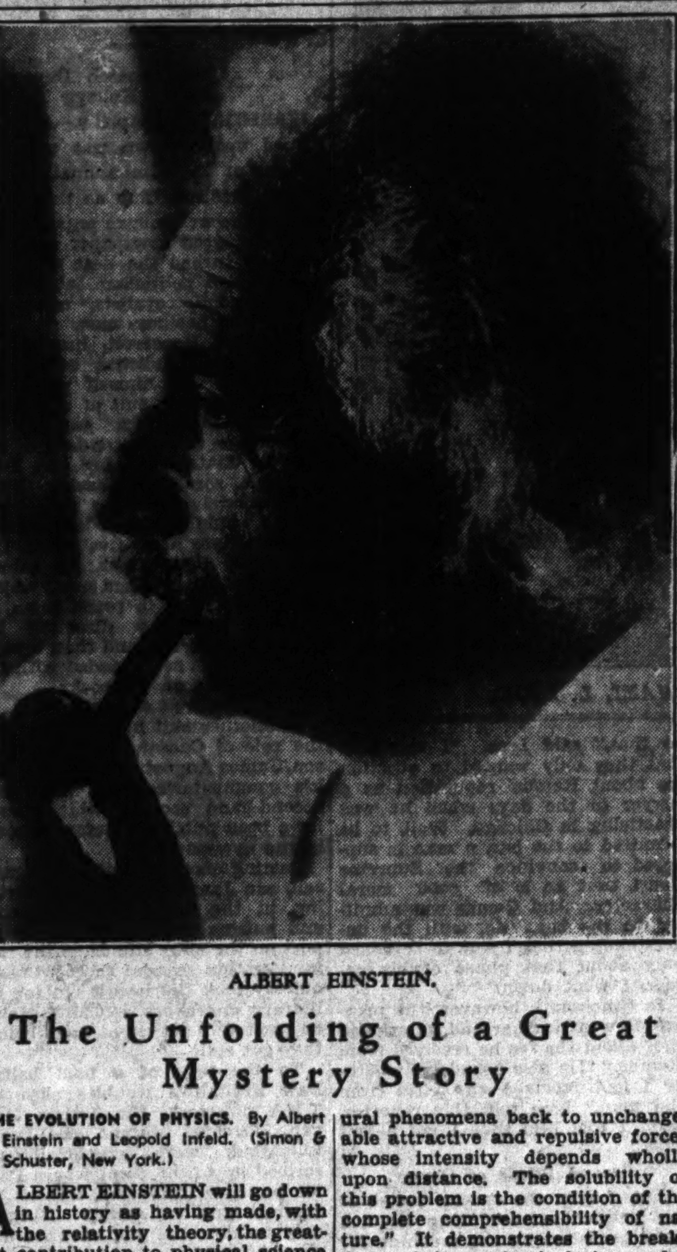
Makes Physics Intelligible to Laymen



ALBERT EINSTEIN.

The Unfolding of a Great Mystery Story

THE EVOLUTION OF PHYSICS. By Albert Einstein and Leopold Infeld. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

ALBERT EINSTEIN will go down in history as having made, with the relativity theory, the greatest contribution to physical science since Newton. Contemporary readers, however, may thank him for another benefaction, since, in this book, written in collaboration with Leopold Infeld, he has made physical science intelligible to the layman.

The difficulties of such a simplification can hardly be over-estimated. Revolutionary concepts, at complete variance with ordinary experience, had to be made reasonable and acceptable; highly technical experiments, comprehensible only to trained laboratory workers, had to be translated into terms of everyday happenings; and, most important of all, the whole language of mathematics, upon which all modern physics depends, had to be eliminated and replaced with ideological explanation.

The book follows an idealized chronological pattern, so that the general treatment is historical but the steps come logically. It begins with a survey of the classic mechanical theories, based upon the discoveries of Newton and Galileo and summed up by Helmholtz: "We discover the problem of physical material science to be to refer natural phenomena back to unchangeable attractive and repulsive forces whose intensity depends wholly upon distance. The solubility of this problem is the condition of the complete comprehensibility of nature." It demonstrates the breakdown of the mechanical view under the new difficulties raised by electrical and optic phenomena. It describes the development of field physics, the structural analysis of relations between objects rather than of the behavior of the objects themselves. It shows how the relativity theory rose from the otherwise insoluble problem of light-ray transmission, and how the theory, applied to gravitation, made possible the statement of absolute relationships. Finally, it takes up the recent findings of the quantum theory, the breakup of energy into quanta, and the shift in emphasis from positive laws to statements of statistical probabilities.

The authors liken the development of science to the unfolding of a great mystery story. Actually the narrative, as they have presented it, is more exciting than any mystery story ever written; and the constant dialectical progression from theory to contradiction to more adequate theory holds out infinite hope for the optimists who believe that, by and large, human intelligence can advance.

The War Years Reviewed

AMERICA GOES TO WAR. By Charles C. Tansill. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

IN his preface, the author of this study of American neutrality states that his purpose is to make an objective analysis of the main problems that confronted the Wilson administration during the three years preceding this country's entry into the World War, and that he has no "thesis to prove or any viewpoint to exploit." Whether or not he has succeeded in maintaining an objective attitude is less important than the fact that he has written the most comprehensive history of the years 1914 to 1917 thus far published.

The sympathy of American leaders for the Allies' cause, Prof. Tansill has found, led them to overlook British infringement of American neutrality rights, while at the same time holding the German Government to "strict accountability" for any infraction of our legal rights. Had Wilson "closed American harbors to belligerent merchant ships carrying defensive armament, the British Government would have immediately removed all guns from their merchantmen, and Germany would no longer have sunk enemy passenger ships on sight." The loss of American lives on British ships led to the strained relationship between the American and German Governments.

The author rejects the thesis that this country entered the war in order to protect American investments. "Despite all the efforts of the Nye committee, there is not the slightest evidence that, during the Hundred Days that preceded America's entry into the World War, the President gave any heed to demands from 'big business' that America intervene in order to save investments that were threatened by possible Allied defeat." Significantly, he adds in a footnote: "It should be remembered, however, that the large number of American investors in Allied loans created a class that was interested in Allied success."

It is well to remember also the statement once made to President Wilson by the man whose judgment the President trusted, the late Col. House. "I feel that our position with the Allies is somewhat difficult," Wilson's adviser wrote early in 1915, "for we are bound up more or less in their success, and I do not think we should do anything that can possibly be avoided to alienate the good feeling that they now have for us."

Tansill had at his disposal numerous documents unavailable to previous writers on the subject, including some 4000 letters used by the Nye Senate Committee, correspondence from the files of Morgan & Co., official papers from the German admiralty archives, and records of dispatches from the British Foreign Office.

THE WORLD'S WEALTH: ITS USE AND ABUSE. By Broadus Mitchell. (Henry Holt & Company, New York.)

Broadus Mitchell, American economist, here undertakes to explain the underlying principles of economics for the general reader. "The World's Wealth" is not economics made easy; rather it is economics made "engaging, inviting" by presenting its theories in clear and non-technical language.

ACCORDING to reports received from 76 booksellers throughout the country, the books now most in demand stand as follows in order of popularity:

FICTION

THE CITADEL, by A. J. Cronin, reported by 70 booksellers out of a total of 76; ACTION AT AQUILA, by Hervey Allen, 64; NORTHWEST PASSAGE, by Kenneth Roberts, 54; THE RAINS CAME, by Louis Bromfield, 45; JOSEPH IN EGYPT, by Thomas Mann, 30; THE NUTMEG TREE, by Margery Sharp, 26.

A British Heroine Tells Her Story

THE STORY OF MELINA RORKE. By Melina Rorke. (The Greystone Press, New York.)

MELINA RORKE, "the Florence Nightingale of the Boer War," was a person to whom things happened. Not that she was merely the passive victim of events: her personality was strong enough to dominate any external circumstance. But she was one of those who seem to draw toward themselves by some inner and unconscious magnetism the pattern of dramatic action. This book, her own story, begins with her escape from a convent, at the age of 14, to marry a young Irish football player. From that point onward her private adventures become inextricably tangled with the story of all South Africa. Simply, without self-consciousness, Mrs. Rorke gives her readers a personal history of the Boer War, and the events which led up to it, as well as a vivid picture of the country and the people.

Famous men move through the story: Cecil Rhodes, Oom Paul Kruger and Starr Jameson, to mention a few. One meets these almost legendary figures face to face, sees them through the eyes of the young Melina Rorke. The events of the Boer War become vivid and real, for Mrs. Rorke, trained as a nurse in England, organized her own nursing unit and served throughout the war with the Rhodesian regiments which relieved Mafeking.

All this is history, albeit history written from an extremely intimate point of view. Many readers will be more interested in the (historically) less notable parts of the narrative—Mrs. Rorke's trek in ox-drawn wagons across wild country, her visit to the Kimberly mines, her life in Bulawayo as it grew from a crude pioneer camp to a civilized town. Her descriptions are always dramatic and the characters of her relatives and friends are as sharply drawn as if she were writing a novel. More than all the sketches of war, of the movement of great events, the reader is likely to treasure the fact that Melina Rorke, heroine of the Boer War, decorated with the Order of the Royal Red Cross by King Edward VII, didn't especially care about being a nurse, at all. It seems that what she really wanted, all the time, was to be an actress.

Ingenious Feat Of Imagination

THE MAN WHO INSULTED SOMERSVILLE. By Jennings Rice. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

PRODUCING a clever mystery story without a murder is an ingeniuos feat of imagination, to say the least. Jennings Rice, in "The Man Who Insulted Somersville," has performed this feat with rare success, making of his book a gay, sometimes hilarious, narrative. But he has made more than that of it through his pertinent depiction of American small-town life, especially the seamy side.

It was Leonard Somers, the town "scandal," whose corpse was the cause of all the furore. An illegitimate child, forced to leave Somersville because of the intolerance of the inhabitants, Leonard had plotted a subtle post-mortem revenge by having his body shipped back to his native town for burial and by leaving a sizable fortune to be divided among his unknown relatives in Somersville. The resulting investigations turned the town topsy-turvy. Surprise followed surprise. Town aristocrats were faced with the dilemma of forfeiting their shares of the inheritance or admitting kinship with saloon-keepers and prostitutes. Whichever they did, the family skeletons were already out of the closets. And those fortunate townspeople—or unfortunate, depending on how badly they needed money—whose blood was free from the Somers taint, sat back and gloated in unholy glee while their neighbors' reputations and family traditions tumbled left and right.

Occasionally, during the course of the story, the framework of the plot structure is a little too obvious, so that the reader jumps ahead to a conclusion which should have been a surprise. But on the whole Mr. Rice has handled his situations with dexterity and keeps his suspense at a fairly high pitch until the mystery of the Somers relationship has been completely solved.

MUSIC THROUGH THE DANCE. By Evelyn Porter. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

This excellent handbook for teachers traces the growth of music through the influence exerted upon it by dance forms, and includes a brief account of the history and social aspect of each dance, and the subsequent musical development, as well as specific examples for practical use in music appreciation classes.

COALITION OR CHAOS? By Roger W. Babson. (Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.)

In his role as a great financial expert and unconscious comedian, Mr. Babson has written various books telling what is not the matter with our society and how it cannot be cured of its ailment. It has occurred to him that some day his grandchildren will ask, "What did Grandpa do in the war our nation waged against threatening chaos?" Well, here he has done it.

Three-Ring Educational Circus

THESE BARS OF FLESH. By T. S. Stribling. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

ANDREW BARNETT, superintendent-elect of schools of Atlee County, Georgia, arrived at the university in Megapolis with a problem. When a legislator he had fathered a law requiring all county superintendents to have college degrees. Next time up, he was beaten for the Legislature. He ran for the next best thing open, and was elected county superintendent of schools. His difficulty, which he was now carrying to a great Northern center of what is sometimes called education, was real indeed: he had no college degree. How to get one at the short summer term was the problem.

Thus, with "These Bars of Flesh," does T. S. Stribling fall back into characteristic stride—not so characteristic, perhaps, as "Teeftallow" or the "Forge-Store-Cathedral" trilogy, but definitely more so than the more recent "Sound Wagon." Again Stribling is writing about a kind of man he best knows how to set off, a cracker statesman, a Southern country type. Once more he is using his man as a sort of social yardstick on the commonplace absurdities of the modern scene. The Georgian is Stribling's gauge of the great, high-pressure, Northern culture factory that he calls Megapolis.

Here one meets the jargon-erupting Prof. Fykes, psychologist, who turns out glib tabloids of pseudoscience, keeps two press agents busy, and runs a three-ring educational circus which makes him worth, by his own figuring, $200 a day. Here are the frigidly professional Acting Prof. Stahl; a gassy dean who can be cultivated simply by listening and laughing at the right time; and a miscellany of serious-minded dolts, running in and out of a crazy patchwork, which, save for the academic setting, would pattern the days for most people. Barnett forsooth becomes a member of the faculty, an instructor of a class in practical politics—a development quite in keeping with the rest of the fantastic reality that Stribling knows so well how to create and maintain.

Incidentally, Barnett falls from grace; he not only does not get a degree, but the folks back home arrange to ease him out of his office while he is away. Meantime, however, the Government has pegged the price of cotton at 16 cents, so he is well content to return to the work he forsook for politics when making a living on the farm got too tough.

At bottom, of course, "These Bars of Flesh" is a streamlined "Man From Home"; and it must be confessed that it often is garrulous without being stimulating; but it has merits well within the Stribling canon.

Kindly, Humorous And Wise

FIFTY YEARS A COUNTRY DOCTOR. By William N. MacCartney, M. D. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

IT is uncertain whether Dr. MacCartney wrote this book for the professional or the layman. Probably he intended it for both. The layman, if a thorough reader, requires a medical dictionary for reference; yet he may read without consulting that dictionary and experience many chuckles and moments of pondering.

Dr. MacCartney has lived close enough to humanity, shorn of its pretenses and private walls, to have acquired a considerable amount of understanding, and to feel qualified to toss a few vegetables at his over-sure fellow practitioners—not maliciously, but with sly, good-natured humor. He is especially biting toward those who are scornful of the general practitioner and his makeshift facilities, but are helpless as a layman when out of their carefully ordered surroundings.

The title is slightly misleading, seeming to indicate a biography. The book begins like one, but the good medico soon forgets himself in his absorbing narration of things medical, human, and humorous. He was born in northern New York, began the study of medicine as a pharmacist's helper, attended the College of the City of New York, served an interneship at Bellevue Medical College, and finally, mostly by chance, settled down in the vicinity of his boyhood for a life of devotion. His patients comprised Indians on a reservation, French-Canadians just across the border, farmers, and small-town folk. He has operated on kitchen tables, in tool sheds, alone and with the help of laborers and specialists.

Chapter after chapter is devoted to his views on the treatment of every ailment or accident a general practitioner might encounter, which is everything in medicine and surgery. He even advises as to a doctor's attitude in court, and has garnered a great number of anecdotes. The book is as interesting and lively as Poor Richard's Almanack.

Twenty Years Of Lobbying

UNCLE SAM WARD AND HIS CIRCLE. By Maud Howe Elliott. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

FEW lobbyists have been as successful as "Uncle Sam" Ward. After he had failed in practically everything he had tried, he became, by means of his now famous dinners and ingratiating personality, one of the most powerful figures in Washington during the Reconstruction period.

He was born in 1814, the son of a Wall Street banker. Desiring to be a scientist and showing great promise as a mathematician, he went abroad to study in the 1830's. He met some of the great mathematicians of his time, bought Legendre's library, and received his doctoral degree from Tubingen. Here he met Longfellow and formed a friendship which was to last for a lifetime.

Upon his return to America he entered his father's banking business, but his interest in science and poetry was so great that he neglected his work. The firm failed in 1847, and he went to California. Then followed a sojourn in South and Central America, where he was interested in mining companies. Although the exact nature of his activities is not known, it is believed that he intervened in behalf of the American filibuster, William Walker.

In 1860 he settled in Washington, and for the next two decades he lobbied in Congress. Among his clients were the transcontinental railroads, the telegraph companies, and the lotteries. "He earned and more or less proudly held the title, King of the Lobby." By 1880 he had gone through his third fortune, failed again in business, and fled to Europe to avoid "the process servers." There he died in 1884.

"Uncle Sam Ward and His Circle" is largely a reprint of letters that Ward wrote to his family and friends. It presents an interesting and often amusing study of life and customs in Washington during the Reconstruction era.

Scripts of Two Broadway Plays

THE GHOST OF YANKEE DOODLE. A Tragedy in Seven Scenes. By Sidney Howard. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

AMPHITRYON 38. A Comedy in a Prologue and Three Acts. By Jean Girardoux, Adapted From the French by S. N. Behrman. (Random House, New York.)

WHEN Sidney Howard's play, "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," was presented on Broadway last fall, most of the critics said that they found it confused. Its friends retorted that only in the minds of the critics was there confusion. The play perished quickly, and of it there remains only the published script, which is, to be quite honest, confusing.

Howard, a Pulitzer Prize playwright and author of various important dramatic works in the last two decades, tries to imagine, in "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," what a fine, old, liberal American family would do if, in war time, it found its source of income threatened by its ideals. For that purpose, the playwright makes up a war in which Germany, Italy, and Japan are opposed by France, England, and Russia. The United States is trying desperately to stay neutral; and the Garrison family shares in that purpose.

In order to heighten his drama, Howard makes a newspaper publisher, not too well-disguised, the enemy of peace and also the friend of Sara Garrison, widowed central figure of the family. The whole family and Clevenger, the publisher, are under one roof at Christmas time, and Clevenger, at the proper moment to suit his sensation-seeking soul, looses a campaign to plunge the country into war. There is no way out, and Howard's conclusions are abysmally gloomy.

Howard's skill as a dramatist enables him to give any reader nightmares, but in offering solutions he is not so accomplished. Assassination of the publisher would seem to be his only suggestion, and he does not even avail himself of that.

In very great contrast on Broadway was the success of the Lunts' comedy, "Amphitryon 38," which was taken from the French of Jean Girardoux by S. N. Behrman, and by Girardoux from the 37 previous versions of the Greek legend about the liaison of Jupiter and Alkmena, which resulted in the birth of Hercules.

Salted with its own share of jesting at war, "Amphitryon 38" might be classified as intellectual bedroom farce that was worthy of production by the Theater Guild. It sometimes sounds like a Mae West playlet, then rises to real philosophy and a playful wit that, if it is not Behrman's, is at least the kind that he likes. Even without the glow that the Lunts could give it, the script is greatly enjoyable.

BOND MARKET TURNS AFTER 2-MONTH SLIP

Final Gains Considerable in Recently Depressed Rails and Some Other Issues.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The bond market found the pathway to recovery last week following two solid months of persistent liquidation and a steady fall in prices.

A robust upturn in the market today topped off a week of recovery and left corporate values generally well above the low levels registered on the closing day of March. Rails recorded the widest gains.

Buying interest was stimulated by a number of developments, including the stock market's buoyant response to the defeat of the Federal reorganization bill and further inflationary considerations converging on the administration's tentative plans for new spending to spur business recovery.

United States Government issues and some low yield corporate loans failed to move ahead with the general list. They had been equally backward in Friday's upturn. The Federals closed 6-32ds higher to 8-32ds lower, with losses predominating.

Active demand for carrier issues was attributed in part to the more hopeful attitude of investment circles with regard to the outcome of present Government efforts to find a solution for the railroad industry's difficulties. The Associated Press average of 20 rails rose 1.2 points, the largest gain since Feb. 1.

Among the more important gainers were Great Northern 4s "G," which finished at 83½, up 2⅞; New York Central refunding 5s at 53¼, up 1¾; Pennsylvania 4½s, 1965, at 92½, up 1⅝; Southern Pacific 4½s, 1981, at 40¾, up 1½; Western Union 5s, 1960, at 59, up 3; Southern Railway 4s at 45, up 2; International Telephone 5s at 52, up 2; Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 38⅛, up 1⅛.

Front rank foreign loans were mixed. Cuban public works 5½s dipped 1⅜ to 62⅞.

Transactions totaled $4,513,275 face value against $4,908,600 last Saturday.

In its earlier stages the rally bore the imprint of investment buying for account of bargain hunters attracted to the market not because of any pronounced change in fundamental conditions, but by a belief the protracted downswing had been overdone.

The upturn missed a few beats in the course of the week but with the momentum gained from a strong stock market final gains were considerable in the recently depressed rails and the general run of secondary issues.

Extension of Washington rail conferences brought a variety of proposals for solving the carriers' problems. Investment circles remained a bit skeptical of their immediate value, but it was felt the administration's plans to bolster the industry's structure would in the long run prove beneficial.

Second grade bonds were stimulated rather than depressed by the news from Washington of tentative plans for resumption of Federal spending to aid business.

Top flight liens, because of this or other influences, tended to settle into a slightly lower range late in week. U. S. Governments were inclined to sag in the late sessions, but on the week they were moderately ahead.

The market appeared to be little affected by the unsettling events in France which culminated in the collapse of the Blum Popular Front Government.

Foreign bonds followed an uneven course, and excepting a few inactive issues the week's changes were relatively narrow.

Reorganization Bill Defeat and Pump-Priming Spending Prospect Pull Stocks Out of 5-Year Lows

Widest Recoveries Witnessed in Five Months Take Place at Week-End, Leaders Climbing 1 to More Than 6 Points.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Stocks whirled upward in today's market for the widest recoveries witnessed in five months, leaders climbing 1 to more than 6 points.

The sharp extension of Friday's rally followed the unexpected defeat in the House of the Government reorganization bill which, to some financial quarters, brokers said, indicated other measures disliked by Wall street, might be shelved.

On top of this turn of affairs, speculative sentiment apparently was given a lift by further talk of inflationary influences in connection with reports the President would recommend a huge "pump-priming" program as one step toward combatting the recession.

With the usually thinly populated Saturday boardrooms filled in some cases, and the ordinarily sparsely attended stock exchange buzzing with members who generally shun the two-hour week-end proceedings, the list surged forward at the opening and, for a while the ticker tape fell three minutes behind as blocks of 1000 to 6000 shares changed hands.

Much difficulty was experienced in effecting initial transactions in numerous prominent issues that recently had slumped to new lows since 1933. Because of wide gaps between bids and offers from five to 30 minutes were necessary to arrange starting deals in several stocks. The pace slowed subsequently under quiet profit selling that chipped down top quotations, but buyers came back with a rush in the final half hour and, with the ticker again lagging, most favorites finished around peaks of the day.

Upturn in Averages.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues retained a net advance of 2.1 points at 39.9. It was the largest upturn for any day since Nov. 10 last. On the week, the average was up 3.5 points, the best six-day performance since early in January.

In the Dow-Jones stock averages the 30 industrials at 115.32 were 5.75 points higher for the day; the 20 rails at 22.75 were 1.04 higher; the 20 utilities at 18.44 were .93 higher and the total 70 stocks at 36.64 were 1.80 higher. Compared with a week ago, the industrials were 9.21 points better, the rails 2.29 higher, the utilities 1.86 up and the total 3.17 higher.

The turnover for the two hours amounted to 1,414,480 shares compared with 603,850 a week ago and was the greatest for any Saturday since Oct. 23. Owing to the earlier slow-down, the week's total volume was about 3,000,000 shares under the week before.

Conspicuous in the advancing column were U. S. Steel at 46⅛, Bethlehem 49, Chrysler 45¾, General Motors 33⅜, du Pont 104½, General Electric 35¾, Westinghouse 77½, Eastman Kodak 143½, Standard Oil of New Jersey 48, Santa Fe 29½, Loew's 41, Union Carbide 68, Anaconda 27⅞, Kennecott 34¼, Sears-Roebuck 57½, American Can 86 and American Telephone 131.

An exception on the forward tilt was Columbia Gas which, as the second most active stock of the day, dropped ¾ to 5¾ as the Securities and Exchange Commission refused permission for the company to pay a dividend on the common out of surplus account. Approval, however, was given, for payments on preferred and preference shares.

Foreign Buying Influence.

Considerable short covering was said to have aided the upsurge and houses with foreign connections reported relatively heavy purchasing on balance from Amsterdam, London and Paris. The Amsterdam securities market, the only important European one doing business on Saturday, was strong before the New York opening.

Bonds followed stocks closely with secondary rails particularly buoyant.

Commodities, on the whole, were higher although wheat at Chicago met some resistance after its run-up yesterday and ended ⅛ of a cent a bushel up to ½ cent lower. Corn was unchanged to off ¼. Cotton gained 35 to 40 cents a bale.

Fall of the Blum government and hope the French financial crisis would abate under a new cabinet, helped the franc to push up .01½ of a cent to 3.07½ cents in terms of the dollar. Sterling was unchanged at $4.96¼.

For the day, as well as the week, industrial news was spotty. U. S. Steel reported shipments for March topped February, but were well down from March a year ago. The company's first quarter shipments were less than half those of the 1937 period.

Freight loadings for last week were off more than seasonally, with the Associated Press index for this barometer down to a new five-year bottom.

Total sales during the week were 4,424,050 shares, compared with 7,372,510 a week ago and 8,66 ,050 corresponding week a year ago. Sales from Jan. 1 to date were 67,567,290 shares, compared with 171,417,996 a year ago and 193,286,433 two years ago.

Little Help From Business.

Business news had little to offer in explanation of the further upswing from the recent 1938 lows. A combination of technical conditions after the early spring nose-dive and the prospect of renewed "inflationary" spending in Washington, brokers said, accounted chiefly for the shift out of cash into stocks and commodities.

Major business indicators continued to show a leveling off in the decline from the recovery peaks last spring and summer. Many observers took this as a hint business was "scraping bottom." The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity, moving sidewise for several weeks, dipped to 68.8 compared with 69.3 the week before and 104.1 in the comparable 1937 period.

The main depressants in the business index were a setback in steel production, after the modest seasonal bulge in March, and in railroad loadings. The important automobile industry, moreover, still limped along at a much reduced stride and consumers' goods industries failed to show the hoped-for vigorous leadership for a definite turn out of the present depths.

How potent a tonic business could expect from Washington in way of more billions for public works and business loans was obscured by uncertainty as to just what course President Roosevelt would authorize.

Some cold water was thrown on spending ideas in speculative circles by the President's statement, at his press conference yesterday, he had not made a decision on additional works expenditures.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY AGAIN TURNS EASIER

Two Consecutive Weekly Advances Had Been Shown by Index.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Industrial activity eased slightly this week, operations in several important lines dropping to new lows for the year or longer.

The seasonally adjusted Associated Press Index, based on latest available statistics, slumped to 68.8 per cent of the 1929-30 average, following two consecutive weekly advances. This compared with 69.3 a week ago and 104.1 last year.

Automobile production, electric power output and total freight carloadings dipped into new low ground for the current recession, the last to the lowest level since May, 1933. Not a single component of the index gained on the week.

The index was within a fraction of the year's low touched early in March.

Principal components show the following changes from last year at current levels: Steel mill activity, off 64 per cent; automobile output, down 40 per cent; cotton manufacturing 35 per cent; residential building 36 per cent; freight loadings 28 per cent; electric power production 11 per cent.

The composite index was one-third behind last year. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on latest data and 1929-30 as 100 compared, as follows:

NON-FERROUS METALS STEADY AS WEEK ENDS

Irregularity Marks Earlier Period—Zinc Cut by Some Interest.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Non-ferrous metals steadied as the week ended, following an earlier period of irregularity. The late improvement was apparently based on reports of an administration spending program.

Zinc moved contrary to the general trend with some producers lowering the East St. Louis prices $5 a ton to 4 cents a pound, the lowest level since 1935. Buyers still held off pending developments in the ore situation.

Domestic copper held unchanged at 10 cents a pound, but export advanced slightly, reflecting steadiness at London, where German and Russian interests were buyers. Independent fabricators bought nearby supplies in the local market, and much interest revolved around reports Czechoslovakia was looking for a sizeable amount in the American market.

Tin followed the trend at London and ended with spot net ¼ cent lower at 38¾ cents a pound.

Lead was unchanged at 4.50@4.55 cents a pound, New York. Business was unusually slow, but producers maintained prices on the belief consumption is holding up well and consumers still have some April commitments to be covered.

Steel ingot output dropped 3 points to 32½ per cent of national capacity, and scrap prices touched the lowest level of 1937.

Antimony continued to be a slow affair, with the Chinese prices unchanged at 15.75 cents a pound.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, April 9.—Wheat futures reacted from the best today to close ⅜d higher to ¼d lower. Opening lower, prices rallied as much as 1⅜ to 1¾ net higher on continued buying by English millers. Week-end profit taking was largely responsible for the late decline.

In a quiet cotton market, scattered buying and trade calling offset Bombay straddle reversing and hedging against outside growths. Last prices were 1 to 2 points net higher.

London and Paris markets are closed on Saturday.

Commodity Prices Sink to Lowest Levels in Four Years During Week

Weighted Index of 35 Important Wholesale Staples Dips to 68.16 Per Cent—96.08 Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Commodity prices sank to the lowest levels in four years this week, despite a substanaial rally in the stock and bond market.

Demand continued light in all groups except livestock, which spurted as offerings in the principal centers declined further.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staples dipped to 68.16 per cent of the 1926 average from 68.54 last week and 96.08 a year ago.

Sliding prices outweighed advances three to one among commodities in the index; six upturns being offset by 18 declines. The remainder were unchanged.

New Lows for 2 Years.

New lows for the past two years or more were recorded by every major group except the slightly buoyant livestock. In the last-named group, smart upswings in cattle and lambs set the pace, while hogs fell back modestly.

Steel scrap was an outstanding performer after a long period of relative inactivity.

Quotations broke heavily in both Chicago and Pittsburgh, with the major steel companies reported out of the market because of large iron ore inventories to be worked off.

Other industrial raw materials felt the pressure of rising inventories and the low rate of operations. Rubber, bituminous coal, turpentine, burlap, tin and zinc also receded.

With wool and cotton cloth weak, textiles gave ground despite a small upturn in silk.

Products of the farm, with the exception of wheat, were under pressure. Corn, oats and cotton eased fractionally, while rye broke almost 5 cents a bushel to less than 80 cents a bushel.

Table necessities tumbled from last week's level. Sugar, cocoa, flour and butter concurred in the setback, while eggs and lard moved up moderately.

LEADING EUROPEAN CURRENCIES STEADY

Little Change in Rates for Week Despite Financial Difficulties in France.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Leading European currencies ended the past week with little net change, despite the financial difficulties of France, which culminated in the resignation of Premier Leon Blum and his Cabinet.

With Hitler busy readjusting Austria's governmental machinery, tension arising from fear Germany might immediately start Nazification of Czechoslovakia subsided, and most currencies turned calm.

The week opened with a sharp rise in the franc Monday. The pound also was higher and continental currencies generally advanced.

Later the franc tended to decline, with other currencies generally also continuing to ease. The week-end found sterling, the franc and the belga only a shade under last Saturday's final quotations, with the Netherlands guilder and Swiss franc showing small gains.

The narrow range in which the franc moved, despite internal French Government turmoil, was attributed to ceaseless support of the official French control fund.

While fear of international disputes, and threat of war lessened, particularly in the Central Europe theater, gold continued to pour into the United States.

Engagements of gold abroad for shipment here for the week up to Friday totaled $12,900,000, of which $7,100,000 was engaged in England and $5,800,000 in Japan.

The week's engagements, however, were substantially under the $19,839,000 for the preceding week.

Altogether, since the middle of last month, $62,900,000 of gold has been engaged for shipment here, of which $28,400,000 was engaged in England, the figures excluding gold taken by the stabilization fund.

The $5,800,000 engagement in Japan lifted to $25,000,000 the amount of Japanese gold earmarked for transport to this country this year.

The French franc edged forward a trifle today as foreign exchange dealers studied reports from Paris promising quick formation of a more stable Government. Elsewhere movements in terms of the dollar were narrow.

The franc gained .01½ of a cent. Sterling and Holland guilders were unchanged while the belga and Swiss franc each lost .01 of a cent.

The Federal Reserve Bank reported gold engaged for shipment here included $5,400,000 in England.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Foreign exchange closing rates follow: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain—Demand, 4.96¼; cables, 4.96¼; 60-day bills, 4.95¾. France—Demand, 3.07½; cables, 3.07½. Italy—Demand, 5.26½; cables, 5.26½.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Raw sugar was easier today. Following sales of about 150,000 bags of Cubas and duty-frees yesterday at from 2.86 to 2.90, there was an additional sale of 27,000 bags of Philippines afloat today at 2.86 to a local refiner, which establishes the spot price at that level.

Futures were irregular at the outset but developed a little steadier tone on scattered covering and buying by trade and commission houses. May No. 4 sold from .89 to .90 and closed at .89½, while Sept., 1939, sold off to 1.08 and closed at 1.08½, with the list ⅛ to 1½ lower. Sales, 1750 tons.

Refined was unchanged at 4.50 for fine granulated although the new refiner, who had withdrawn for a week, reopened the market at the usual 10-cent difference, or 4.40.

Sugar futures No. 3 closed unchanged to 2 higher. Sales, 11,150 tons.

COTTON RISES WITH STOCKS, BETTER COTTON GOODS SALES

Today's weather details showed further rains from the Mississippi River eastward with rainfall ranging from 1 to 4 inches at number of Eastern belt points.

WHEAT PRICE IN CENT RANGE IN A QUIET MARKET

Moderate Buying Is Stimulated Partly by Strength in Securities and by Light Buying Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Wheat prices fluctuated within a 1-cent range in a quiet market today and wound up practically unchanged.

The market was steadied by moderate buying stimulated partly by strength in securities and reports of further light purchasing of importers in international trade. Profit-taking as a result of yesterday's sharp upturn accounted for much of the selling. A forecast of warmer weather in the Southwest and reports of welcome precipitation throughout much of the grain belt weakened July and September contracts, which represent new crop wheat.

Wheat closed ⅛ higher to ⅛ lower, compared with yesterday's finish, May 84⅞@85c, July 81½@⅝c, September 82¼@⅜c; corn unchanged to ⅛ off, May 60⅝c, July 61¾c, September 62¼c; oats ⅛ off to ¼ up, May 28⅜c; Rye ⅝ to 1 down, May 60c; lard unchanged to 2 points up.

Chicago wheat advanced as much as ⅝ cent at the opening but then settled back and at times was as much as ⅝ lower. Liverpool wheat rallied to gains of more than a cent on reports of further purchases of 1,500,000 bushels by the United Kingdom from Australia and an increase of 6 cents in Australian offering prices, but the market reacted and closed ⅝ off to ⅜ up.

Domestic exporters reported a little business in wheat overnight but there was no follow-up to yesterday's huge European purchases in the international market. Nothing was heard of corn business as exporters either lifted quotas or did not offer because of the small Argentine crop estimate. Private cables hinted England may be in the market for hard winter wheat next week. A litle export business in soft Pacific Coast white wheat and some Gulf hard winters was confirmed.

Reports of below freezing temperatures recently at many points southwest caused traders to await more definite news of crop experience the past few days. In many sections additional moisture was received.

The corn market showed no response to an official estimate putting probable corn production of Argentina at 177,165,000 bushels, which some local experts said was too low. Drouth and locusts were blamed for the poor outlook indicating the crop may be less than half that of last year and the smallest since 1922.

Rye displayed independent weakness with losses of around a cent attributed largely to good crop prospects.

Provisions were unchanged.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 9.—May wheat opened at 84½c and later sold at 84¼c, with the closing sale at 84⅜c, down ⅛c from yesterday. July wheat was offered at 81¾c at the close and May corn at 60½c.

Wheat at Liverpool closed ¼@⅜d higher after opening ⅝@¾d lower.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅜@⅝c higher and later was ⅜c lower to ⅛c higher. The close was ¼c higher to 1⅛c lower.

Argentine wheat began ¾@⅞c up and corn ⅝c better. The close was ⅝@1⅛c higher for wheat and ¾@1c up for corn.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady to ½c lower. A large part of the supply ran to low grades. Demand was fair. Corn was unchanged to ½c lower. Demand was fairly active, but with buyers and sellers apart little grain was sold. Premiums were unchanged to ½c over the preceding day's levels. Oats were unchanged. Demand was good, with mill, elevator and outside order buyers showing the interest.

COMMODITY MARKETS

NEW YORK, April 9.—Buying forces were again in the saddle in most commodity markets today. Defeat of the administration reorganization bill was cited as a factor in a general extension of Friday's buoyancy.

Raw sugar continued to decline. The world contract ended irregularly lower.

Copper futures at New York advanced moderately in wake of higher unofficial quotations abroad and reports of Czechoslovak inquiry for sizable export tonnage of the red metal. Tin gained around 1-3 of a cent and lead rose 9 to 19 points.

Sharing the general upturn at New York were hides, rubber, cocoa, Rio and Santos coffee, wool tops and cottonseed oil.

The Associated Press index of 35 weighted wholesale commodity prices, with 1926 taken as 100, rose to 68.28 from 68.16 on Friday.

LOW VISCOSITY LACQUERS, used for finishing Hudson cars because of their ability to withstand all sorts of weather and temperature conditions, are tested continuously by exposure of samples out of doors. For an accelerated weather test, the Hudson factory uses an artificial light which concentrates ultra violet rays until 300 hours in the machine is equivalent to a year's exposure out of doors.

UP AND DOWN MOVEMENTS of wheels and steering tie rods do not affect the steering gear in the 1938 Chrysler cars because there is no direct thrust on the pitman arm. Individual steering tie rods run from the steering gear pitman arm to each front wheel. On the Chrysler Custom Imperial model, the individual tie rods run from each wheel to an intermediate steering gear, which is connected by a cross drag link, with compensating springs to the steering gear pitman arm.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 9.—Evidence that acute poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) can be treated by injection of a hypotonic salt solution into the blood stream has been found in a series of experiments, first on monkeys and later on human beings, by Dr. George M. Retan of the College of Medicine, Syracuse University. The experiments were started in 1935.

"This hypotonic salt solution (low salt content) has been used successfully in the treatment of acute poliomyelitis, acuted encephalitis, (sleeping sickness) and syphilis of the central nervous system. Future experience may also show that it may be of advantage for treatment of streptocccus and meininfococcus meningitis," Dr. Retan said.

The Youthful TENNIS STAR Married His COACH'S WIFE

Taught by Mercer Beasley and Brought Up at the Beasley Home, Frankie Parker, No. 3 Player in the United States, Followed Mrs. Beasley to Reno After Her Divorce.

RENO, Nevada.

A TANNED, handsome youth and a matronly looking woman were married by District Judge Thomas F. Moran here the other day. The bridegroom, according to the marriage license, was Franciszek A. Pajowski of Los Angeles, the ide, Mrs. Katherine Audrey Beasley of no—both "over 21." After the ceremony, y boarded a train for California.

In such decorous, unspectacular fashion me to a climax one of the strangest of mestic triangles. For Franciszek A. Pa- wski is better known as Frankie Parker; der the latter name he has achieved the ting of No. 3 in American lawn tennis, d had the distinction, last summer at imbledon, of winning the match which inched possession of the Davis Cup for e United States. His bride is the divorced ife of Mercer Beasley, tennis coach. And ercer Beasley is the man who guided ankie Parker to the heights of interna- onal tennis.

Beasley took Frankie under his wing hen the boy was 11 years old, a fatherless rchin earning a little money by shagging nnis balls at a club. The coach made the d a member of his household, sent him to famous Eastern preparatory school, de- loped him into a tennis player of Davis up team caliber. Both Mr. and Mrs. Beas- y treated the boy practically as a son, even ught once to adopt him.

And now Mrs. Beasley has become the ife of the lad she helped to rear; their arriage took place three days after she tained a divorce from Frankie's mentor. She is 40 years old, her new husband, 22. She has a daughter 21 years old. She was first married the year before Frankie was born.

It was in Milwaukee, more than 10 years ago, that the lives of these three persons came together. Beasley was tennis professional for the Milwaukee Town Club. Among the boys who retrieved balls for the players he noticed little Frankie Pajowski. The boy was quick and bright, well coordinated and sharp-eyed. It was apparent that he loved tennis. And he was a likable youngster. Beasley saw in him the makings of a crack tennis player; with opportunity —sound instruction, diligent practice, proper care of health and general guidance —there was no telling how far he might go in the sport. Beasley presently was entertaining one of those dreams common to coaches—of producing a champion, showing the world something superlative as an example of his own handiwork.

WITH the consent of Frankie's mother, Mrs. Anna Pajowski—the boy's father had died when he was a baby—and the eager co-operation of the lad himself, Beasley undertook the development of Frankie. He took the boy into his home. The Beasleys had two children of their own, Katherine, now 21, and James, now 14, but a place was made for the coach's pupil. He was fed, clothed and sheltered, his schooling, recreation and general welfare were looked after. Beasley spent long hours teaching him how to play tennis—how to play tennis, that is, as it should be played. Beginning with fundamentals, he built his pupil's entire game. Mrs. Beasley had the special job of feeding the youngster properly so that he would be strong and healthy.

Beasley became tennis coach at Princeton University and Lawrenceville Academy, and Frankie was placed in school at Lawrenceville, the preparatory school whose name was made familiar throughout America by Owen Johnson's stories of young Stover, the Tennessee Shad and their fellows. Under this arrangement, Beasley could continue his personal supervision of Frankie's tennis development.

Early in his teens Frank began tournament play. By this time Franciszek had been discarded for Frank or Frankie, and Pajowksi for Parker. When he was 15 he won the national Boys' Singles championship. When he was 16 he won the national Junior Singles, and the men's singles of the Western Lawn Tennis Association. The next year—in 1933—he landed in the first 10 of American tennis, being ranked No. 8, after he had won the national Clay Court title.

In September of 1933 Beasley wanted to adopt his protege, pointing out that the boy lived with the Beasleys and was "treated as our son." He thought it would be best if he had legal authority to guide Frank's career. But Mrs. Anna Pajowski objected and the proposal was abandoned.

Beasley was proud of his pupil—and realized, of course, that Frank's progress wasn't at all harmful to his own prestige as a coach. That prestige was already considerable. Ellsworth Vines, then national champion, had been a pupil of his; so had those fine players, Wilmer Allison and Clifford Sutter. He had co-authored a book setting forth his system of instruction. He had originated a stroke known as the overhead drive. A good many people considered him the best tennis teacher in the country. But Beasley had a special interest in young Parker—in addition to the personal regard naturally resulting from their close association—as a player who had been developed by him from the beginning of the lad's tennis career.

Beasley's book, incidentally, was dedicated: "To my wife Audrey who coaches the coach." It contained this mention of his protege: "Frank Parker, Junior Champion of the United States, possesses the most perfect backhand of any player. From the standpoint of accuracy plus speed there is none that can compare with it."

Frank, on his part, apparently was amenable to his coach's guidance. An interviewer who approached him at a tournament in 1935 had to get Beasley's approval before the young tennis star would talk with him. The interviewer wrote that "Frank is pretty much in awe of his coach, who is also something of a father to him." Frank, then 19 and a student at Lawrenceville, was said to be uninterested apparently in the girls who tried to lionize him at tournaments. For a change of entertainment from tennis playing he liked to drive an automobile. His national ranking that year was No. 7.

In 1936, after winning the Longwood Bowl and the No. 1 place in the Western Association and the Middle States Association and losing to Donald Budge in the semifinal round of the national championship, Parker was ranked No. 2 among American singles players, Budge getting the first position.

The following winter—that of 1936-7—Frank was in Bermuda with the Beasley family; Beasley has been spending the winters lately as coach at the Bermuda Lawn Tennis Club. That winter, according to a recent disclosure, something occurred which must have caused a change in the attitude of Parker and Beasley toward each other. But the public heard nothing of it. Outwardly things went on as before, Frank bent on winning new tennis laurels, his teacher training and directing him.

FRANK began his 1937 campaign by winning the national indoor singles championship and pairing with Gregory S. Mangin to win the doubles. He was selected for the United States Davis Cup team. In competition with Japan, he defeated the Japanese singles champion, Jiro Yamagishi. After the United States team had beaten Australia and Germany, it found itself matched in the finals against England's netsters. If the United States triumphed in the match, the Davis Cup would come to this country for the first time in 10 years.

In the first singles matches, the redoubtable Bunny Austin, the English team's No. 1 man, defeated Parker, and Budge, No. 1 for the United States, beat Charles Hare. There was nothing surprising in these results. But there was surprise at the terrific battle which Hare gave Budge; it was not only surprising but disquieting to American supporters. Victory of Budge and Mako in the doubles did not dispel the uneasiness. The United States still needed another victory to win the cup. If Hare could extend Budge apparently to the limit, what would he do to the 21-year-old Parker, considered less formidable than Budge? And if Hare won that match, would Budge, who had borne the brunt of the grueling Davis Cup competition, be able to defeat Austin when under the additional strain of knowing that the match was the crucial one?

A short time after Parker and Hare faced each other on the center court at Wimbledon it became apparent that the first question would be answered in such a way that there would be no place for the second. Frankie had Hare's measure. He smothered the Englishman's brilliance and power with masterly accuracy and precision. Accuracy is the core of the Beasley coaching system. That day at Wimbledon Frankie Parker demonstrated impressively what his years of training under Mercer Beasley had done for him. He beat Hare in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2. That gave the United States the third victory which decided guardianship of the cup. The victory which Budge then scored over Austin was gratifying but superfluous. On the strength of this performance and the rest of his play during last season Parker was ranked No. 3 among American single players.

A break between the tennis star and his teacher and counselor was foreshadowed in January of this year, when Mrs. Beasley went to Reno, after a visit with Frank's mother in Milwaukee. Frank also visited his mother, leaving January 28 for Los Angeles. He said he was going to get in a lot of winter practice in California and try for the Davis Cup team again. He said he was being financed by a loan from a Milwaukee friend, and that he expected to get a job soon and repay it.

On January 30, as Beasley was about to depart from Bermuda, he told the newspapers that his wife had gone to Reno for a divorce. "The action is being brought by Mrs. Beasley," he said, "and there is no co-respondent. I'm not going to get sore at anyone." Of Parker he said: "I took him into my home and he lived with me as if he were my own son. But I never was his legal guardian. He's on his own now and I wish him luck."

MRS. BEASLEY got her divorce in Carson City, Nevada, March 14. She charged cruelty. A property settlement and provision for custody of the Beasley's minor child, James, was made out of court. Three days after the divorce she and Parker were married in Reno. They took a cottage in Beverly Hills, California, for their honeymoon.

Beasley was questioned in Bermuda about his view of the turn which fate had given to his affairs. He disclosed, it was reported, that he first learned of a romantic attachment between his wife and his protege in February of 1937; that Mrs. Beasley and Frank came to him then—they were all in Bermuda—and told him they were in love with each other, and had been for about three years. He indicated that he did nothing about it—possibly thinking the best course was to wait and see what time would do. He was quoted as saying that he felt no antagonism toward the pair; that they both were "swell people" and he hoped they would be happy. But he had asked for a leave of absence from Princeton and Lawrenceville because of his state of mind.

While for the public generally the Beasley-Parker affair is only of temporary interest, the world of sport is likely to keep it longer in mind. Tennis enthusiasts particularly will be eager to see what happens to Frank Parker's tennis career since he has exchanged Beasley's guidance for that of his wife. They will remember that the man who brought him along for 10 years has said that Frankie is on his own now.

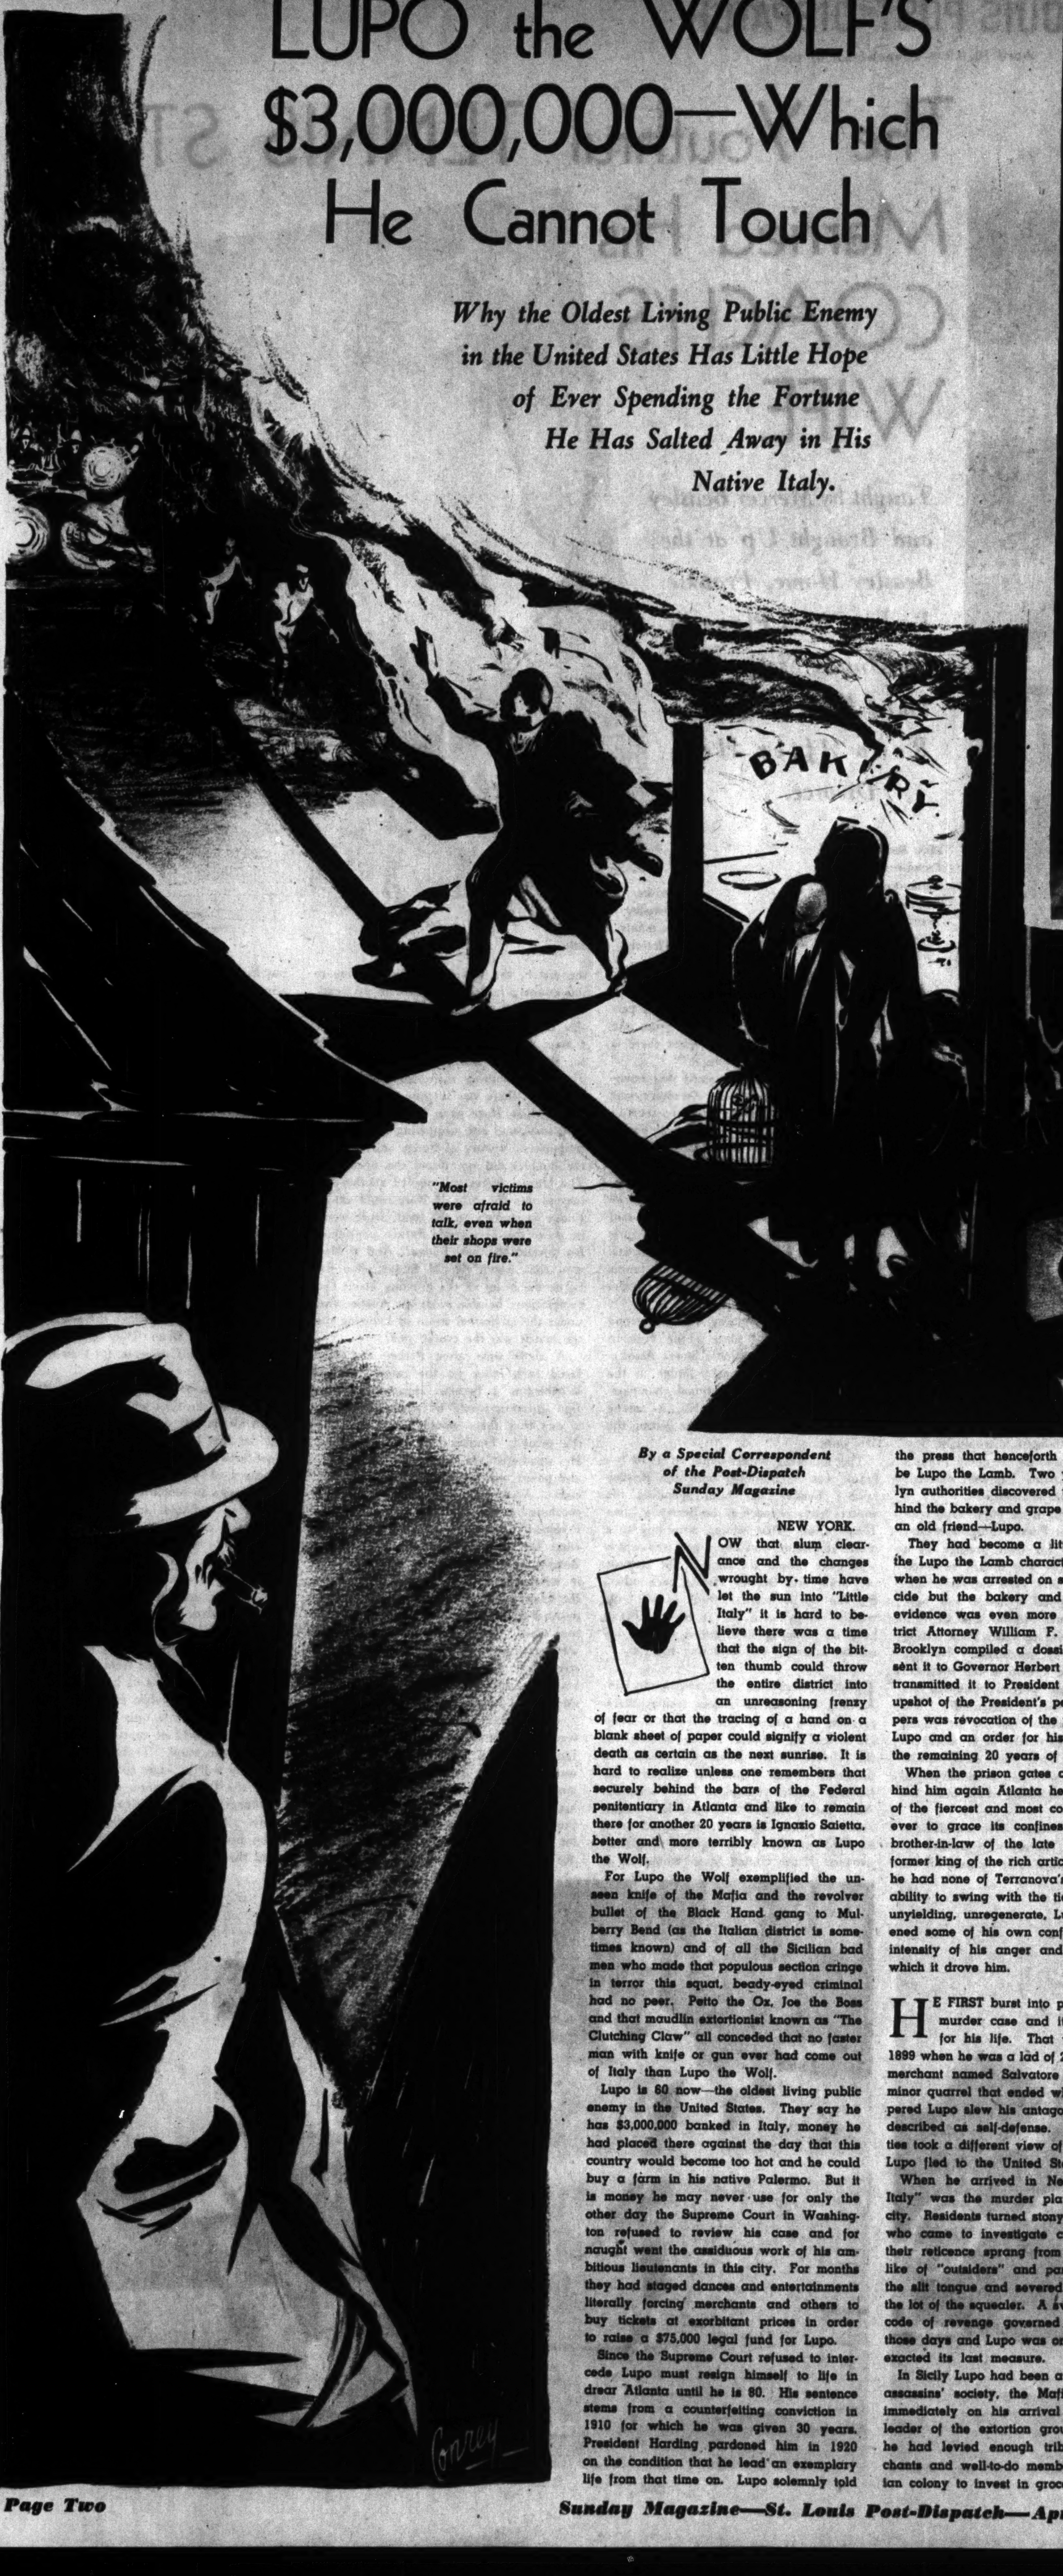
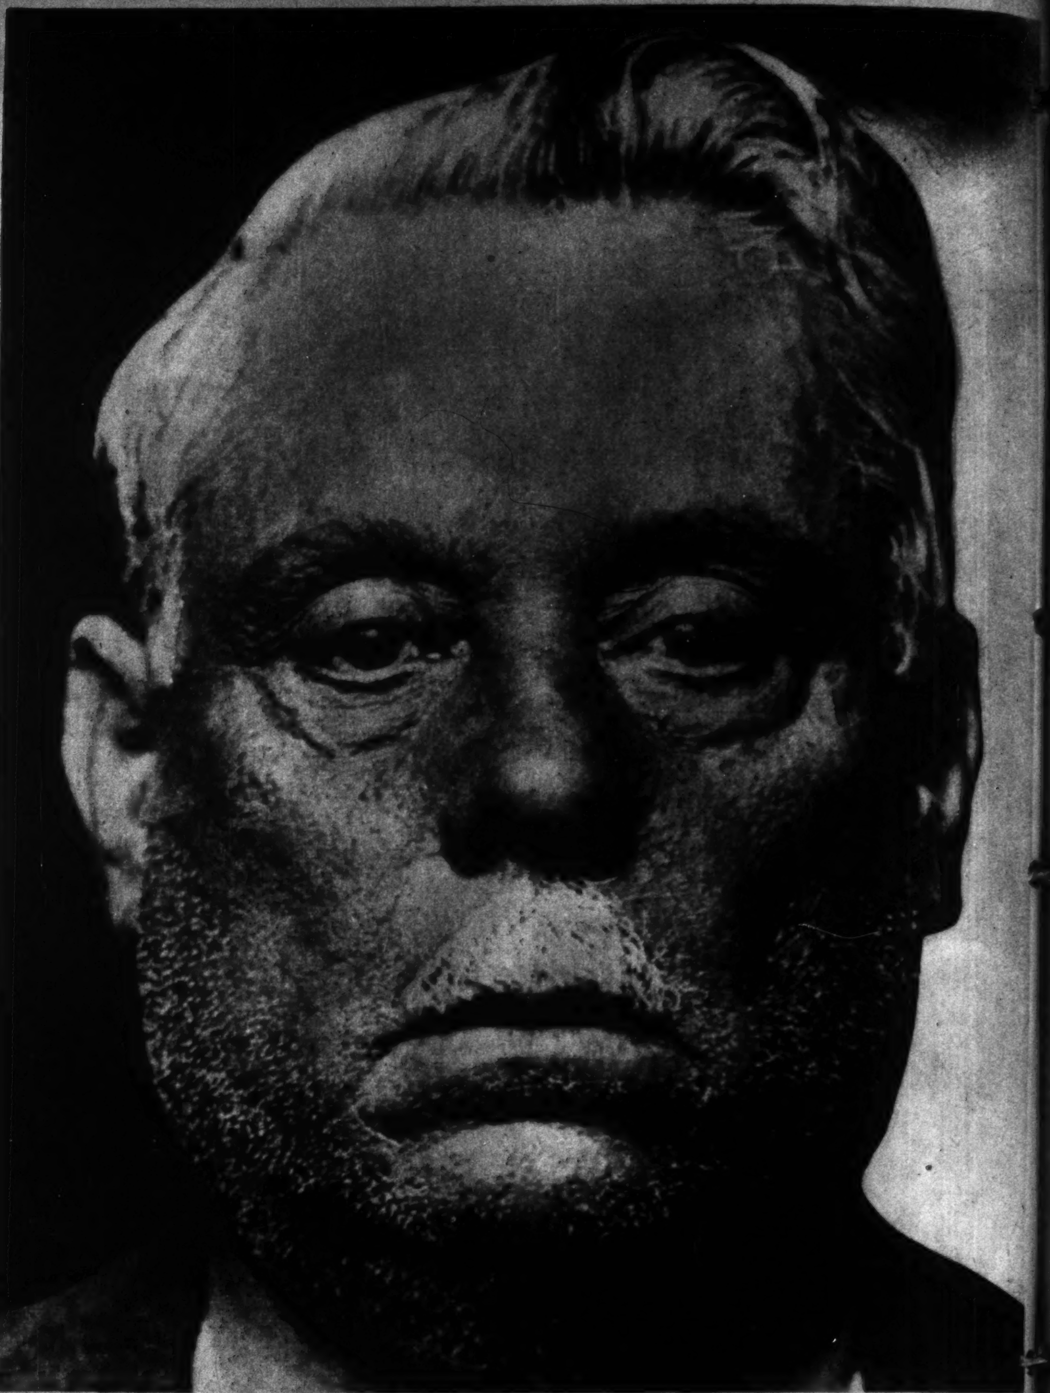
LUPO the WOLF'S $3,000,000—Which He Cannot Touch

Why the Oldest Living Public Enemy in the United States Has Little Hope of Ever Spending the Fortune He Has Salted Away in His Native Italy.



"Most victims were afraid to talk, even when their shops were set on fire."



Ignazio Saietta, known as Lupo, the Wolf.

NEW YORK.

NOW that slum clearance and the changes wrought by time have let the sun into "Little Italy" it is hard to believe there was a time that the sign of the bitten thumb could throw the entire district into an unreasoning frenzy of fear or that the tracing of a hand on a blank sheet of paper could signify a violent death as certain as the next sunrise. It is hard to realize unless one remembers that securely behind the bars of the Federal penitentiary in Atlanta and like to remain there for another 20 years is Ignazio Saietta, better and more terribly known as Lupo the Wolf.

For Lupo the Wolf exemplified the unseen knife of the Mafia and the revolver bullet of the Black Hand gang to Mulberry Bend (as the Italian district is sometimes known) and of all the Sicilian bad men who made that populous section cringe in terror this squat, beady-eyed criminal had no peer. Petto the Ox, Joe the Boss and that maudlin extortionist known as "The Clutching Claw" all conceded that no faster man with knife or gun ever had come out of Italy than Lupo the Wolf.

Lupo is 60 now—the oldest living public enemy in the United States. They say he has $3,000,000 banked in Italy, money he had placed there against the day that this country would become too hot and he could buy a farm in his native Palermo. But it is money he may never use for only the other day the Supreme Court in Washington refused to review his case and for naught went the assiduous work of his ambitious lieutenants in this city. For months they had staged dances and entertainments literally forcing merchants and others to buy tickets at exorbitant prices in order to raise a $75,000 legal fund for Lupo.

Since the Supreme Court refused to intercede Lupo must resign himself to life in drear Atlanta until he is 80. His sentence stems from a counterfeiting conviction in 1910 for which he was given 30 years. President Harding pardoned him in 1920 on the condition that he lead an exemplary life from that time on. Lupo solemnly told the press that henceforth his name would be Lupo the Lamb. Two years ago Brooklyn authorities discovered that the man behind the bakery and grape wine racket was an old friend—Lupo.

They had become a little suspicious of the Lupo the Lamb characterization in 1931 when he was arrested on suspicion of homicide but the bakery and grape extortion evidence was even more disturbing. District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Brooklyn compiled a dossier on Lupo and sent it to Governor Herbert H. Lehman, who transmitted it to President Roosevelt. The upshot of the President's perusal of the papers was revocation of the pardon extended Lupo and an order for his arrest to serve the remaining 20 years of his sentence.

When the prison gates clanged shut behind him again Atlanta held within it one of the fiercest and most colorful characters ever to grace its confines. Lupo was a brother-in-law of the late Ciro Terranova, former king of the rich artichoke racket, but he had none of Terranova's blandness and ability to swing with the tide. Implacable, unyielding, unregenerate, Lupo often frightened some of his own confederates by the intensity of his anger and the lengths to which it drove him.

HE FIRST burst into public view in a murder case and it set the tempo for his life. That was in Italy in 1899 when he was a lad of 22. There was a merchant named Salvatore Morello and a minor quarrel that ended when the hot-tempered Lupo slew his antagonist in what he described as self-defense. Italian authorities took a different view of the matter and Lupo fled to the United States.

When he arrived in New York "Little Italy" was the murder playground of the city. Residents turned stony faces to police who came to investigate crimes. Part of their reticence sprang from a natural dislike of "outsiders" and part from fear of the slit tongue and severed ears that was the lot of the squealer. A swift and terrible code of revenge governed Little Italy in those days and Lupo was one of those who exacted its last measure.

In Sicily Lupo had been a member of the assassins' society, the Mafia, and almost immediately on his arrival he became a leader of the extortion group here. Soon he had levied enough tribute from merchants and well-to-do members of the Italian colony to invest in grocery stores, and when he became an important importer of olive oil and Italian lemons he married Salvatrice Terranova, sister of Ciro.

This was almost like uniting two royal families for it vastly extended Lupo's power. He organized a counterfeiting gang which took a lonely house near Highland, New York, for their operations. Giuseppe Morello, one of the Terranova brothers (the name Morello came from a second marriage), was an important member of the gang and the counterfeiting group. Officials sometimes referred to it as the Lupo-Morello gang, and William J. Flynn, chief of the Secret Service, described it as the "most desperate band of criminals in the world."

THAT was no idle hyperbole. In 1903 Giuseppe de Primo was caught passing counterfeit money and was sent to Sing Sing. He told his brother-in-law, Benedetto Madonia of Buffalo, to collect $10,000 from Lupo, Vito di Luca and Petto the Ox. A few days later Madonia's body was found in a barrel in front of a tenement. He had been stabbed 18 times. His head was almost severed. The city's famed chief of the Italian squad, Joseph Petrosino, was assigned to the case and he arrested the Wolf, Morello and six others. Although it was proved that a pawn ticket for Madonia's watch was found on Petto all of the defendants were acquitted.

The inquiry served to throw the spotlight on the activities of the Mafia terrorists, but did not curb their activities. On the loose again they spread fear once more among Italian shopkeepers in New York. Lieutenant Petrosino's investigation into their machinations took him to Palermo, where their spies found him and shot him to death on March 14, 1909.

In 1906 the Wolf was questioned in contion with the abduction for $20,000 ransom of Tony Bozzuffi, East Side banker's son. The boy failed, however to identify Lupo. In 1908 Lupo made the headlines in a different way. The day after he had purchased $100,000 in grocers' supplies on credit he disappeared leaving only $1000 in assets. There was a sudden disappearance of several other Italian grocers who were bankrupt. One of them later said that he had gone bankrupt because he had been required to pay Lupo $10,000 under threats of death. About $500,000 was lost to creditors in this series of bankruptcies. Lupo was arrested for extortion a year later but he was released.

His downfall came in 1909 out of a building corporation which he organized with one of the Morellos to sell shares to newly arrived immigrants from Italy. In his ingenious mind there came a plan to pay high dividends (with counterfeit money) and thus draw other investors into the building corporation. The house at Highland was outfitted with an up-to-date printing plant and expert engravers designed the plates, but police pushed into the house one day and took Lupo off to jail in spite of his arsenal of repeating rifles.

That was when he got the 30-year sentence. After his release on the Presidential pardon—one that some newspapers termed unbelievable good luck for the Sicilian—Lupo was persuaded to lay low by the powerful forces which had helped obtain his freedom. He kept out of sight during the prohibition era which probably explains why he is alive today for many of his contemporaries went to a leaden rest in the gun battles of those hectic days. But during this "retirement" underworld sources reported that he banked $3,000,000 in Italy.

In 1931 Roger Consiglio, one of the racketeers in the $2,000,000 a year grape wine racket, was waiting for a tire to be changed on his car when a squat little man with a mane of gray hair passed by. There were several shots and Consiglio fell over dead. Lupo was arrested and charged with the slaying but freed for lack of evidence.

Leading up to the Consiglio liquidation was one of the strangest events in underworld history—the dinner to Magistrate Albert Vitale in the Bronx on December 7, 1929. As a result of events just before and just after the affair Vitale resigned, Joe (the Baker) Catania was murdered, Frankie Uale, the Brooklyn gang leader, was taken for a ride and Lupo became the boss of Brooklyn. So affluent did he grow that he built a mansion on ground given him by his brother-in-law, Ciro Terranova.

The real purpose of the dinner was to attract to New York a Chicago gunman who held a contract for the murder of Uale (also known as Yale) and of Frankie Marlow, Broadway racketeer. Terranova allegedly signed the contract which called for $20,000 for the double murder. Actually he paid only $2000 of the contracted price and after the murders were committed refused to pay any more. The man who held the contract threatened to turn it over to the New York police. Terranova then thought up the dinner scheme, told the man to bring the contract to the dinner and arranged for a fake hold-up.

THE contract was part of the loot. The purpose of the double murders, it was understood, was to shake Uale irrevocably loose from his hold on the lucrative rackets in the Coney Island-Bath Beach sections of Brooklyn. The police believe that the man who did the killings was not Al Capone, as has been rumored for years, but Fred (Killer) Burke, the pale-eyed perpetrator of the St. Valentine's Day massacre in Chicago. Catania's slaying had led to reports he had been the holdup man.

Thus up to 1936 Lupo and Ciro were the last two of the original Mafia band of the turn of the century. Ciro died prosaically in bed a few weeks ago from a complication of ailments. They said he was broke when he died but Ciro was no more the man to confide his affairs than was Lupo.

The beginning of the end for Lupo really came in 1935. He and his son, Rocco, began lining up Italian bakers in Brooklyn and those who refused were subjected to beatings and stink-bombings. Most of the bakers were afraid to speak even when their shops were set on fire and their wagons were wrecked, but Mrs. Rose Vitale was different. Or least she made definite charges before she tried to withdraw them. District Attorney Geoghan threw the whole weight of his office into the investigation and discovered that the Presidential pardon of 1920 was conditional. And, further, that Lupo had been arrested at a "gunman's dinner" in 1923. This item alone was enough to send him back to jail.

Governor Lehman wrote the President that he knew they agreed that it was "disgraceful that men of the type of Ignazio Lupo are permitted to carry on their pernicious activities for years and years . . ." and urged revocation of the commutation. The President did so with a stroke of his pen.

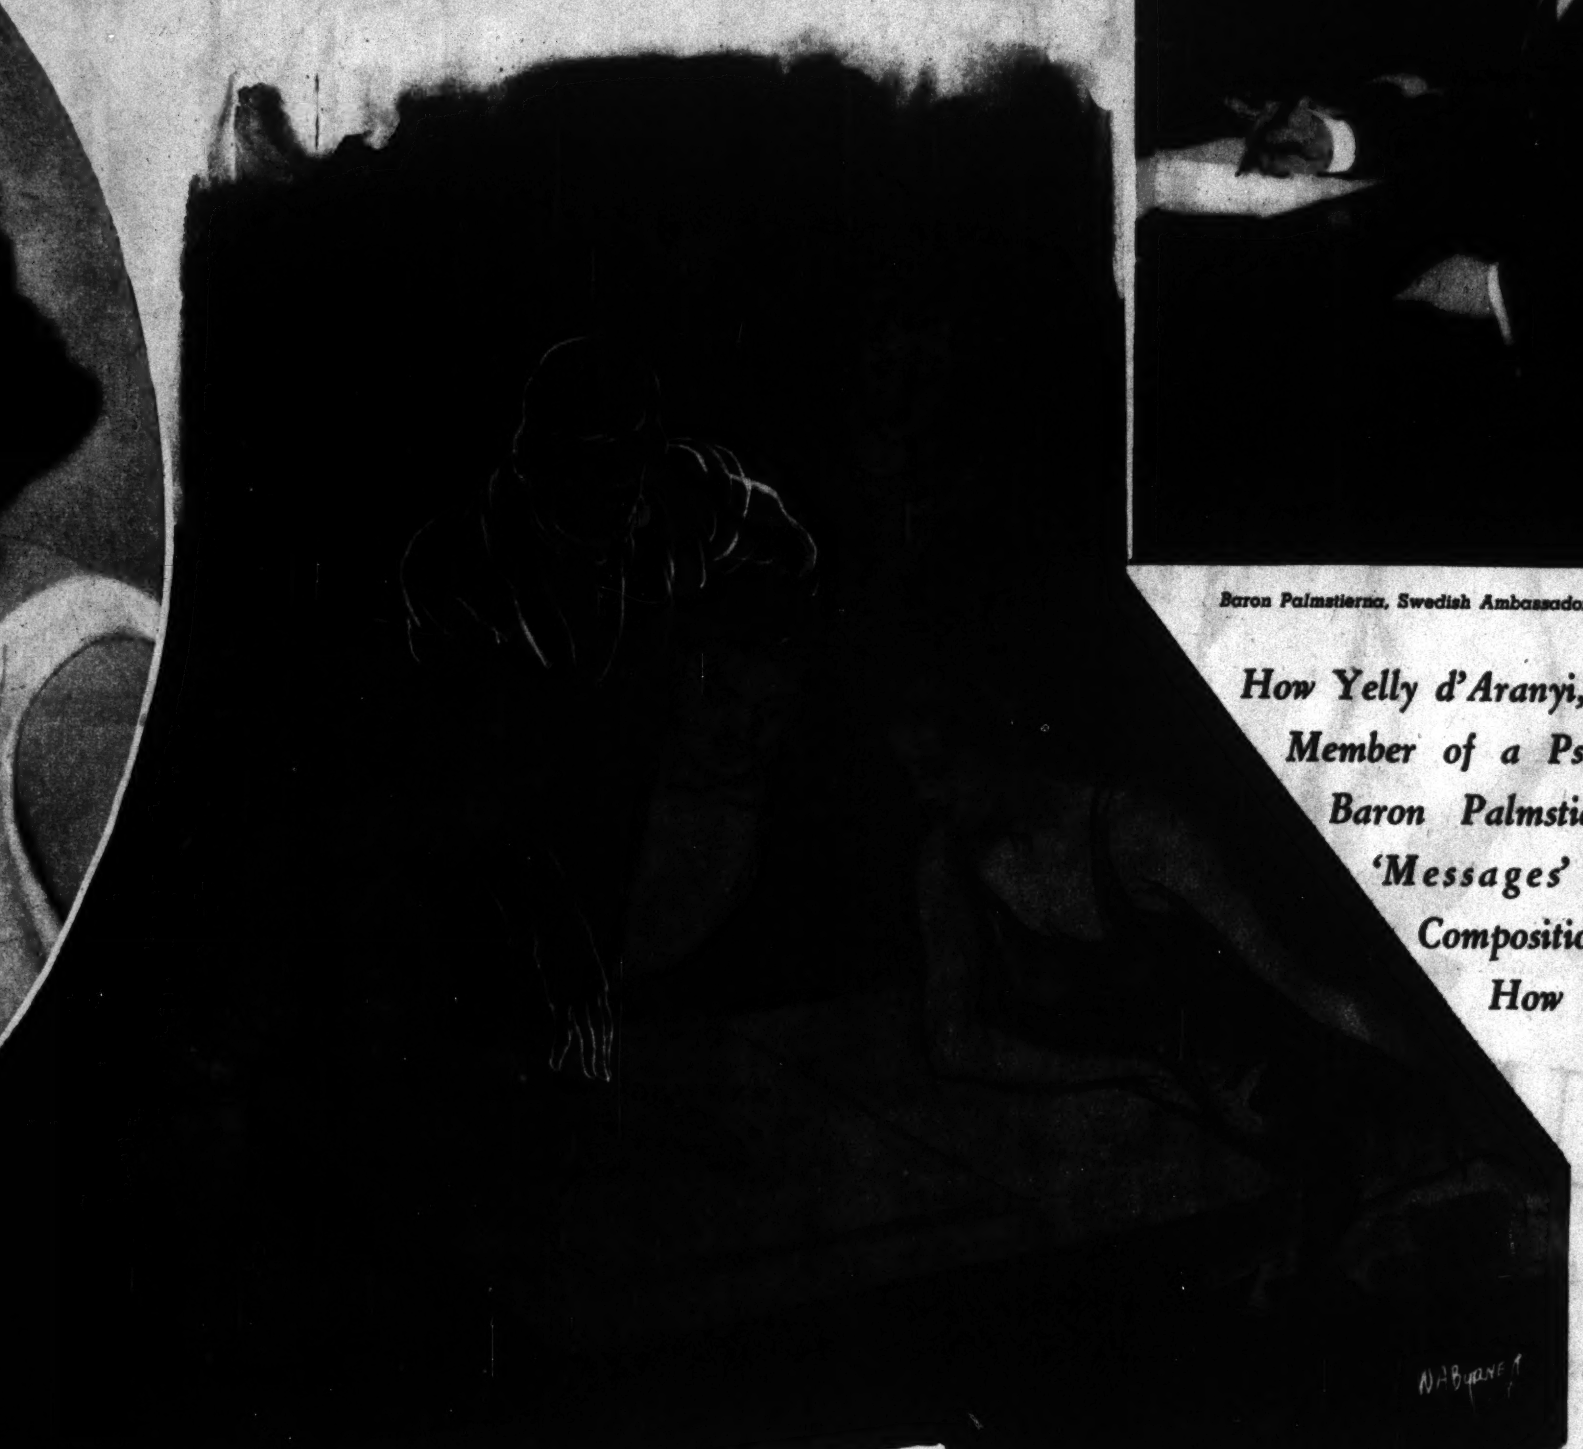
And in New York detectives hustled the gray little man with the fat sullen face to headquarters where he raised his eyes to Heaven and cried out in Italian:

"My God, have I lost my power? Have I become just a punk?"

The answer, Lupo, seems to be: Yes.

laims OUIJA BOARD Led Her to SCHUMANN'S 'LOST CONCERTO'

Yelly d'Aranyi.



Baron Palmstierna, Swedish Ambassador to England, in his office at the Embassy.

How Yelly d'Aranyi, Hungarian Violinist and Member of a Psychic Group Headed by Baron Palmstierna, Received Insistent 'Messages' to Locate Schumann's Composition and Instructions on How it Should Be Played.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

ALTHOUGH Professor George Schünemann, head of the Music Department of the Prussian State Library at Berlin, has been familiar for 31 years with the so-called "lost" Schumann concerto, which was played for the first time last November in Germany, the claim has been advanced for a Hungarian violinist, Miss Yelly d'Aranyi, that she "discovered" the existence of the "lost" concerto in an interview with Robert Schumann's ghost by means of a ouija board. She is a grandniece of the Hungarian composer, Joseph Joachim, to whom Schumann gave his concerto in 1853 shortly before his death. Joachim stipulated in his will that the concerto was not to be played until the centenary of Schumann's death.

But the story told by Baron Erik Palmstierna, Swedish Minister to Great Britain, in his book, "Horizons of Immortality," just published by Coward-McCann, indicates that Yelly d'Aranyi ought to be credited with bringing forth the "lost" work from the archives of the State Library where it was placed in 1907 after Joachim died.

Miss d'Aranyi, according to the book, was an excellent hand with a ouija board. Being "spiritually sensitive," she was able to convey the "incoming flow of wave-vibrations" that caused the pointer to spell out the "message." She was one of a group that met in various London homes to receive messages "for one reason or other or no reason." None of the group was a "spiritualist."

One day in March, 1933, a "spirit" sender of the ouija board messages declared that he was anxious that the receiver, Miss Yelly d'Aranyi, should try to find and ultimately play a posthumous work of his own for the violin. He was asked for his name and the answer came: Robert Schumann. This convinced the circle of ouija board fans that they were in touch with none other than the great German musical composer.

Miss Yelly d'Aranyi, according to the account given by Baron Palmstierna, knew nothing of any posthumous work of Schumann's and was skeptical as to the truth of the message. She concluded that the message referred to the "Fantasia" by Schumann, which is rarely played. But no sooner had she asked this question than the sender shot back: "No, we mean an unpublished work."

The "medium" then asked if the work was a good one. The reply was to the effect that it was not one of the best, but that he was very anxious that she should play it. It was for violin and piano and probably in D major, the sender continued.

According to the author, inquiries in London among musicians showed that they had not heard of such a piece. The ouija board fans were baffled. They remained in this state for two weeks and then during another session of ouija board tickling they received the following message: "Robert Schumann. Remember what I asked you. Tell Tovey. Museum Weimar."

This spiritualistic telegram, according to the Baron, caused Yelly d'Aranyi to write to Professor Sir Donald Tovey in Edinburgh to ascertain what he might know about such a work. The professor, according to the Swedish Minister, replied that he thought a concerto of that description had been written, but that he could neither give any details nor inform Yelly d'Aranyi and her friends where the work might be found—or even whether or not it had been destroyed. He did point out, the Minister adds, that the work was mentioned in Moser's Life of Joachim. Nothing more transpired until May 30, 1933.

On that date the devotees of the glass rod and the alphabetical board waxed tremulous on receipt of a message from Schumann that entreated them to "please do something about that piece." A few days later the glass rod most fortunately got them in touch with the spirit of Joachim with the following long-distance tete-a-tete.

"CAN you help us find the Schumann concerto?"

"It ought to be in the Hochschule Museum, but I cannot recollect for certain."

"Why did Schumann say Weimar?"

"He showed it to me there. My dear kind (child), we do not know everything."

Then another interval that lasted until July 9. It ended with receiving of the following message: "Robert Schumann is so keen for you to get that piece of music. Ask someone who might be going to Berlin."

"We sent a message to the Hochschule für Musik. Was it of no avail?"

"The man is on holiday. . . . Only a person who is a real friend of yours can be trusted."

"Was it Schumann who spoke?"

"It was I myself. Tomorrow we will all come. Please play for us with feeling."

Right after this interchange, Baron Palmstierna left London for a visit in Sweden, and Yelly d'Aranyi's sister, Mrs. Alexander Fachiri, also a violinist and a member of the ouija group, went to Scotland for a visit. Mrs. Fachiri had been in Scotland only a few days when her glass rod slid about the board until it had transmitted the following request:

"Remember to write to Palmstierna to go and look up in Berlin the work of Schumann. He is so anxious for you to find it."

"Can you not help to find it?"

"We do not know where it is. There are several places where it may be. Do not think that we know everything."

"If we can find it, can it be had for performance?"

"You must insist. All succeed who have perseverance."

But Mrs. Fachiri forgot to write to Baron Palmstierna. Nevertheless, the spirits were not to be foiled, for the Baron, instead of returning to England by the North Sea route as usual, decided to pass through Berlin. And then, not until he got into Berlin, did the thought strike him that he might just as well make inquiry there about the Schumann concerto. As the Baron tells it in the third person:

". . . The author found that the director of the Hochschule für Musik was ill and that only a young secretary was at hand. In the library he found a portfolio labeled "Robert Schumann," but no work by Schumann was in it, only works by Spohr and Tartini. . . . A visitor who arrived just as the author was leaving, . . . advised a visit to the archives of the Preussische Staatsbibliothek.

"Going there, the Baron found an official who knew about such a work and, though making great difficulties, was at last persuaded to show it. It was not for the public, he stated, but he would make an exception."

The Baron looked at it. He had no ouija board with him at the time, but he didn't need the spirits to tell him that this was the work he had been seeking. But his own spirits fell, for the official told him that "the daughter of Schumann, living in Switzerland, had forbidden the publication of the work and that the documents of the deposit would probably indicate that this condition was attached to the concerto."

More could not be done, the author comments, so a telegram was sent to the sisters in England telling them of what had occurred. They, according to the Baron, transmitted the news via ouija board to the spirits and promptly received "a message of rejoicing from the invisible ones who had watched our endeavors." They were pleased that the concerto had been located. Then, for several weeks, messages of congratulations continued. Patience was advised. Everything would come out all right in the end.

And sure enough, in November of 1933, a certain Herr Strecker of Scott & Sons, Mainz, arrived in London. Yelly d'Arnayi grabbed her trusty ouija board and asked if Herr Strecker might not be the man to get the concerto released.' The spirit world's answer showed that Yelly had been quite astute.

"Why did we not tell you that Strecker is the man? . . . First ask him how much he knows about it and then tell him where the concerto is. . . . Schumann is overjoyed. . . . When you receive the photographs, Schumann will instruct you how to arrange the piece."

Yelly d'Aranyi performing.

STRECKER did not know that the State Library had the concerto. He was willing to start to work. Two weeks later word came from Berlin that the concerto which Schumann had left to Joachim was not to be released until the ,centenary of Schumann's death. This was stated in Joachim's will, the information went on, and the Joachim heirs were unwilling to break the stipulations.

The Baron, Yelly d'Aranyi, Mrs. Fachiri and their friends were quite unhappy. It seemed that all they could do was wait 22 years to hear the concerto. And then the little glass rod fell to work on the ouija board in a merry manner.

"So you are in despair about Schumann," the spirits observed. "He wishes to tell you to be persistent and victory shall be yours. . . . Inquire about the view of his daughter and possibly buy the manuscript and so secure it. . . . We should love you to tell that it is from above it is asked to get that piece of music and that it is Robert Schumann's wish that Yelly d'Aranyi should arrange it and give the first performance. But will they believe us? . . ."

Several months later a message came from the spirits to the effect that the Baron and his friends should get in touch with a certain "Herr W.," a German musician, who toured England twice a year. Herr W. was contacted. A few weeks later he wrote back from Berlin that Joachim's son, Johannes, remained firm in his belief that the terms of the will should be adhered to. The spirit world, however, was determined. The next message showed that.

"You must insist for the work of Schumann . . ."

So Herr Johannes Joachim was approached through his sister, who was living in Oxford, and in September, 1934, according to the Baron, he gave permission for Yelly d'Aranyi to get a copy of the concerto with the provision it was not to be played in public. But the State Library would not grant the request despite his letter.

Finally, in November, 1936, the glass rod told the group that now was the time to act. Schumann wanted something done at once. And just about then, their old friend, Herr Strecker, chanced to meet an official who had newly been appointed to the State Library in Berlin. This official informed Strecker that the decision on the concerto had been altered. According to the Baron: "It was going to be published, but Strecker was also told that a German violinist had been promised the right of a first performance. Herr Strecker stated that he was under a moral obligation to Yelly d'Aranyi and was ultimately successful in securing for her the first English performance. We knew nothing about all this until February 12, 1937. He declared that but for all the foregoing efforts to bring the Schumann concerto to light, it would certainly have remained buried in the vaults of the Staatsbibliothek for a long period."

THERE were still difficulties, and it was in the spring of 1937 that Yelly d'Aranyi got the photographic reproductions of the concerto. She started practicing the concerto that August while staying with friends in Scotland. She soon found that the arrangement was not to her taste and that it was difficult to decide what interpretation should be given to the work. Therefore, she and her sister, Mrs. Fachiri, fell back upon their ouija board.

Starting out with the remark that "We see friend Yelly gets upset about things . . ." the spirit world, in composer's language, helped her accomplish the necessary revision.

". . . You can take out some of the notes providing the harmony does not suffer . . . use your own judgment about the bowing and often broaden the tone. . . . Do not play the notes four-time but divide them like Bach does. . . . Continuous triplets become monotonous. . . . We were going to suggest higher register and if possible an arpeggio back to the theme. . . ."

Jelly, who had played the first movement of the original version to Sir Donald Tovey in the summer of 1937, played it to him again that fall after she had made the revisions. The Baron states:

"After the first movement was over, the piano part of which Sir Donald had played, he jumped up and said, 'Who did this? It is excellent. It is altogether Schumannesque.' Miss d'A. now told him about the alterations. . . . Sir Donald asked to be shown the messages and, after having studied them, said that he was convinced this could not have come from Miss d'Aranyi's mind. The messages were characteristically a composer's language. Sir Donald, being a composer himself, said he could see more in them than Miss d'A. herself, who was not a composer nor even well versed in harmony or counterpoint."

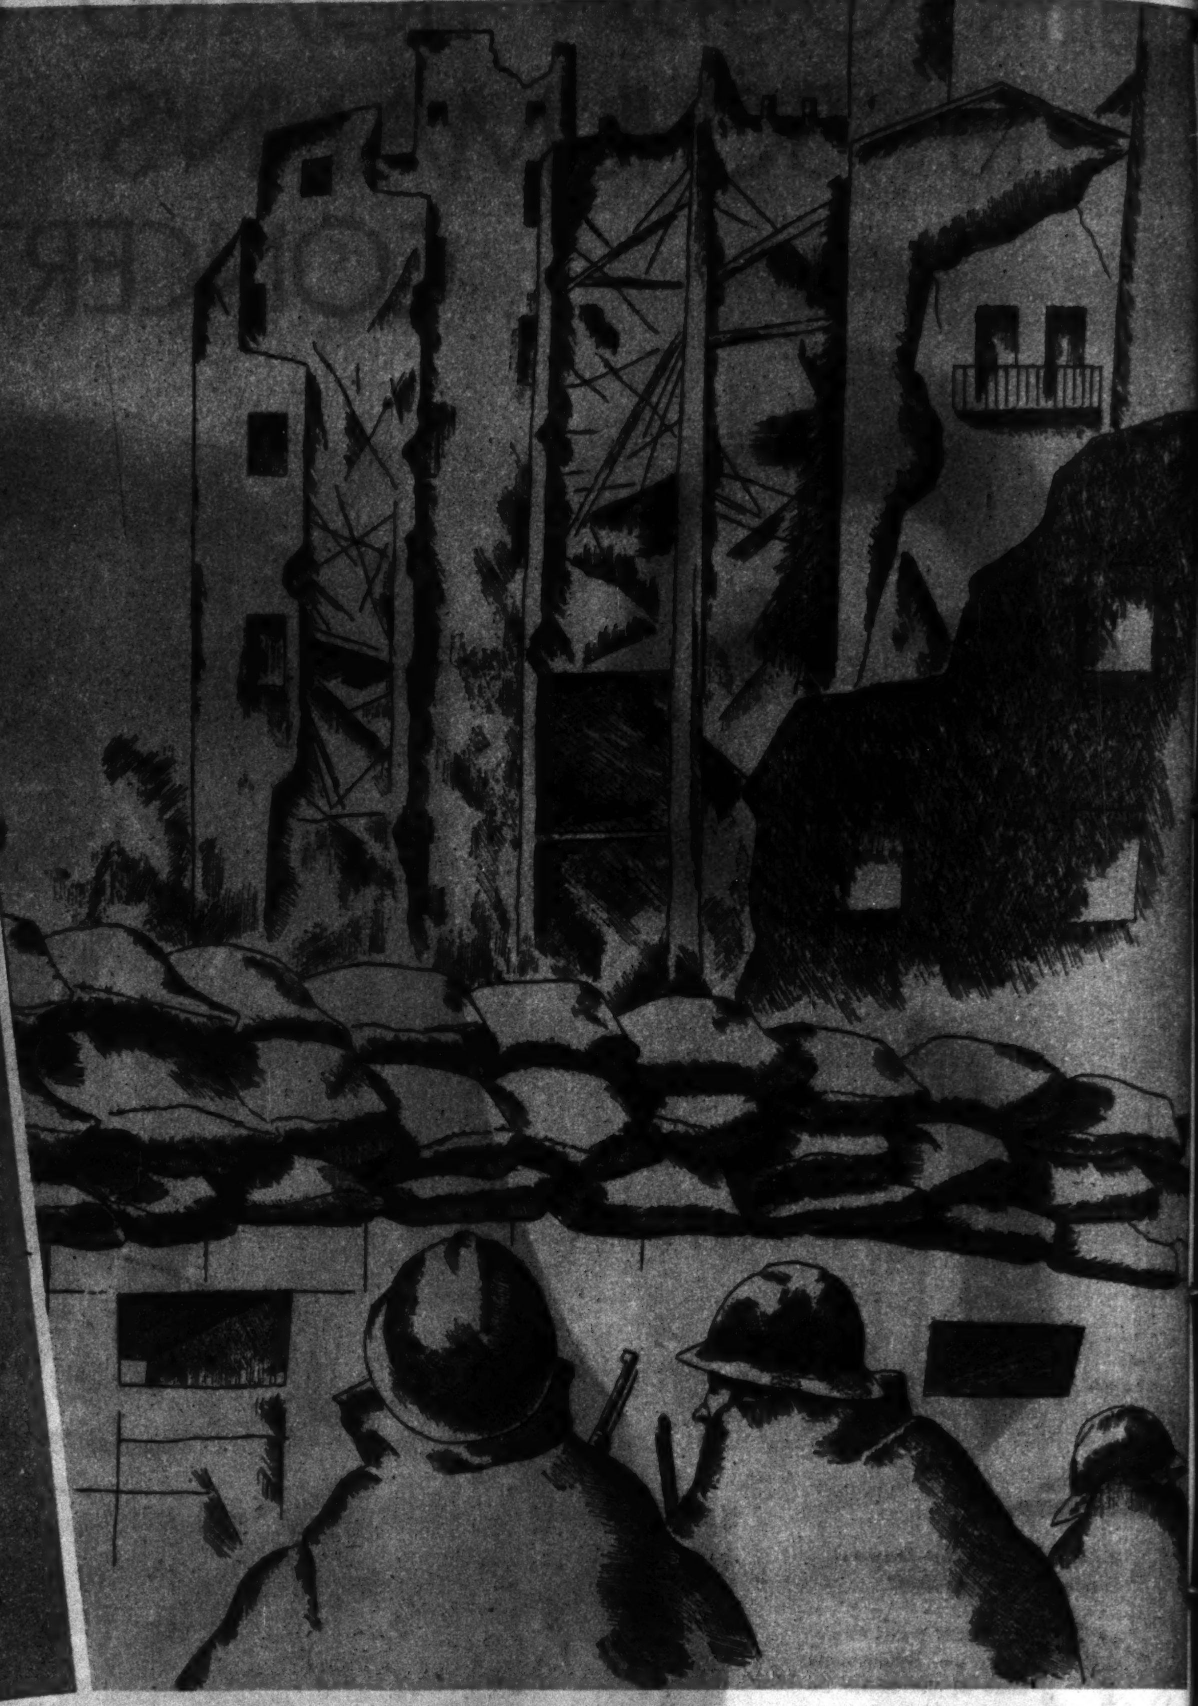
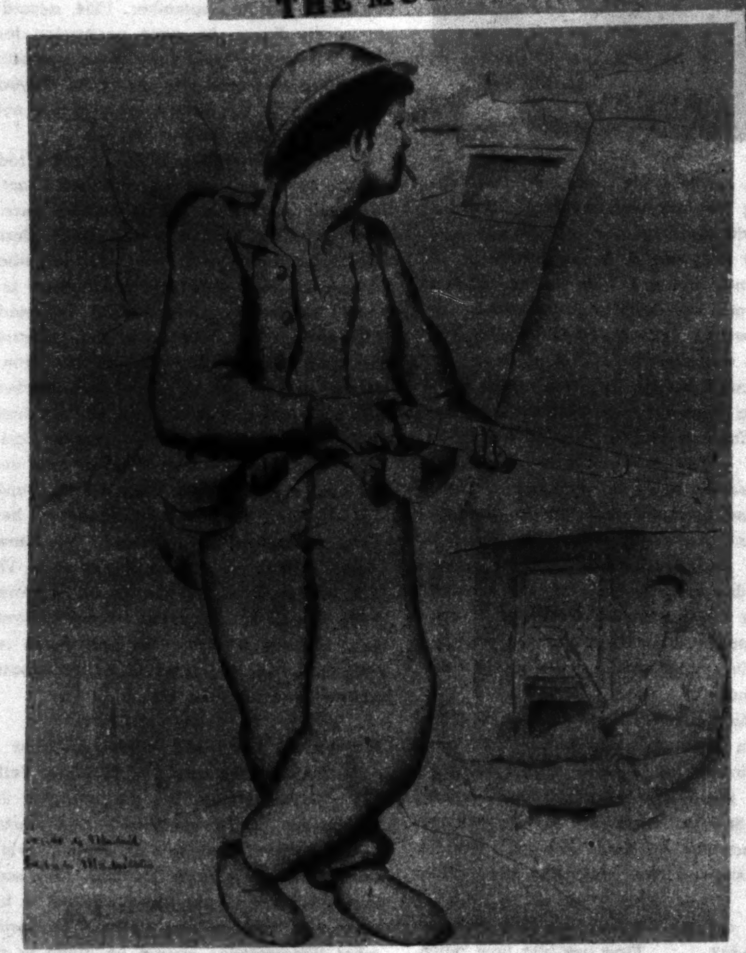
QUINTANILLA

AN EXHIBITION OF DRAWINGS OF THE WAR IN SPAIN

THE MUSEUM OF MODERN ART · NEW YORK · MARCH · 1938





Soldier of Madrid.

ALFRED H. BARR JR., director of the Museum of Modern Art, announces in the catalogue for the exhibition of drawings made in 1937 by the Spanish artist, Luis Quintanilla, that "although the artist has been a participant in the Spanish Civil War he wishes these drawings to be considered as objective works of art, not as partisan documents. It is entirely in accordance with this intention that the museum places them on exhibition."

Ernest Hemingway, a friend of the artist, wrote the following notes for the exhibit:

"A year ago today we were together and I asked Luis how his studio was and if the pictures were safe.

" 'Oh it's all gone,' he said, without bitterness, explaining that a bomb had gutted the building.

" 'And the big frescoes in University City and the Casa del Pueblo?'

" 'Finished,' he said, 'all smashed.'

" 'What about the frescoes for the monuments to Pablo Iglesias?'

" 'Destroyed,' he said. 'No, Ernesto, let's not talk about it. When a man loses all his life's work, everything that he has done in all his working life, it is much better not to talk about it.'

"These paintings that were destroyed by the bomb, and these frescoes that were smashed by artillery fire and chipped away by machine gun bullets were great Spanish works of art. Luis Quintanilla, who painted them, was not only a great artist but a great man. When the Republic that he loved and believed in was attacked by the Fascists, he led the attack on the Montana Barracks that saved Madrid for the Government. Later, studying military books at night while he commanded troops in the day time, he fought in the pines and the grey rocks of the Guadarrama; on the yellow plain of the Tagus; in the streets of Toledo, and back to the suburbs of Madrid where men with rifles, hand grenades, and bundled sticks of dynamite faced tanks, artillery, and planes, and died so that their country might be free.

"Because great painters are scarcer than good soldiers, the Spanish Government ordered Quintanilla out of the army after the Fascists were stopped outside Madrid. He worked on various diplomatic missions, and then returned to the front to make these drawings. The drawings are of war. They are to be looked at; not written about in a catalogue.

"There is much to say about Quintanilla and no space to say it, but the drawings say all they need to say themselves."

(LAZARO CARDENAS KAETHE KOLLWITZ)

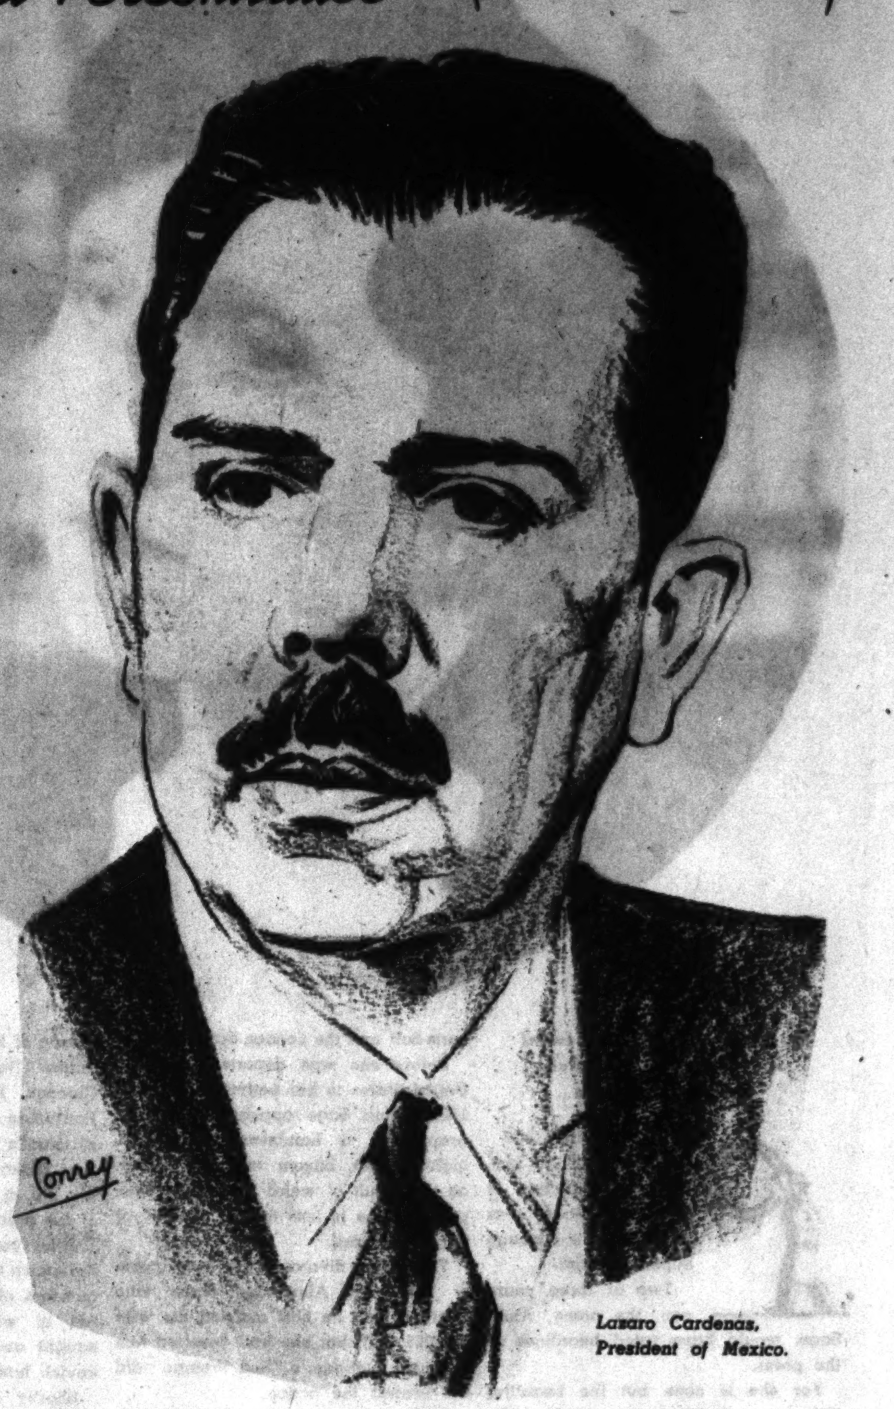
Shares in the Struggle of the Masses



Lazaro Cardenas, President of Mexico.

A RURAL Mexican official had been killed. "They are cleaning up," said a teacher of the revolution. "There is much to be done. Some of the ejidatarios—the communal farmers — grow impatient, and sometimes they clean up with revolvers." "And generally, perhaps, they are right, but sometimes they make a mistake?"

"When a Mexican politician is shot," said the philosopher, "it is never a mistake."

And if Lazaro Cardenas, President and to all appearances tops politician of all Mexico, is not afraid of being shot—as he notoriously is not—it may be because he knows he belongs outside that category. True, his admirers credit him with a certain professional adroitness. Everything he does seems indeed to make him more loved by the mass, more hated by the minority with its death grip on the spoils of four centuries.

But there is rich precedent for considering that this can become political error. At least it need not necessarily be evidence of acumen. It might be merely the play of a coincidence: That the President wants the same things the peons want; that he belongs to the masses, and that he is no "traitor to his class."

And there is positive indication that he's no politician. When he goes among the people—giving the local garrison the jitters—he takes a secretary with an extraordinary function: He wants a record of his promises.

In 1920 the merchants of Vera Cruz lent him 20,000 pesos to help Obregon and Calles. He paid it back. Fifteen years later, inaugurated as the first Mexican President regularly elected to full term since Calles in 1924, he began carrying forward the revolution theoretically consummated in the Constitution of 1917, but actually only promised.

For three years, half his term, his steps to that end—land restoration, health, education—have been of comparatively mild interest outside Mexico, though they entailed expropriation of 25,000,000 acres from landed estates, some of foreign ownership. But now, at the halfway mark, locking horns with really big money, and foreign money, in the expropriation of the oil industry, variously tagged everything from "Fascist" to "Communist," his works and himself have become of international moment.

In the first place, he would repudiate any label except "Mexican." There is some ground for the assertion that he would not understand them. He is congenitally immune to catchwords. There are numerous anecdotes of interviewers who, asking if he believes in this or that doctrine, are met with the question, "What does that mean?"

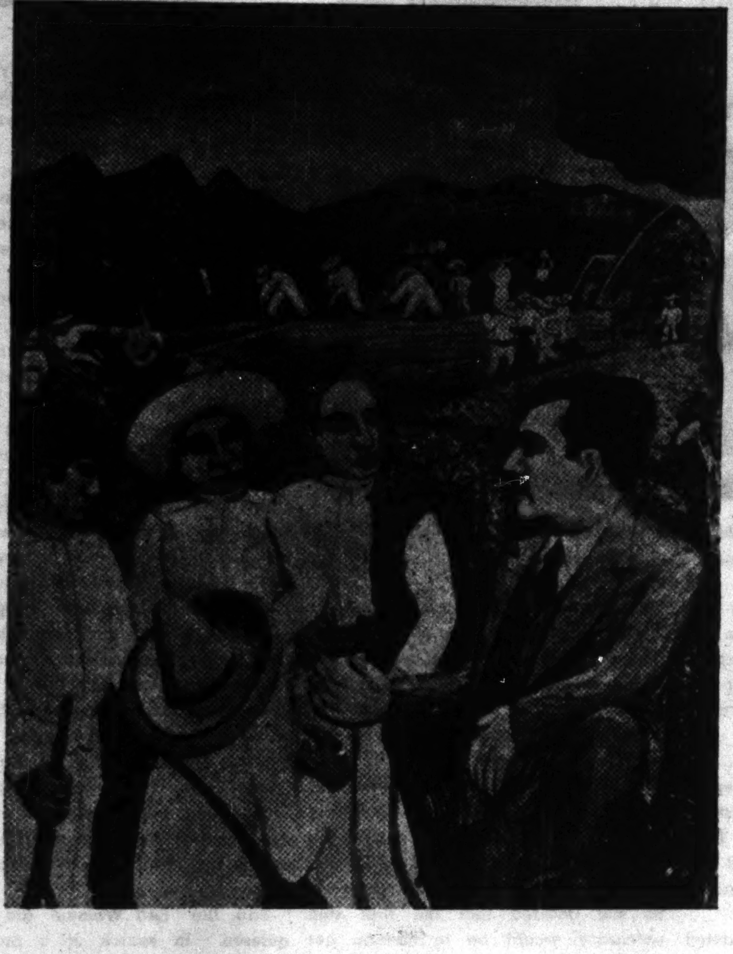
Abstractions are out of his line. Face him with a fact, or a person—he can deal with that. It may be a matter of origin and early training. He comes of a people so tough that even the Aztecs, sweeping down from the north and subjugating the Valley of Mexico in a few generations, never conquered them.

Cardenas was born May 21, 1895, in Jiquilpan, on Lake Chapala in Michoacan. His father, a Tarascan Indian, died when he was 11 and he quit school to help support his family. He worked for the postmaster, for a tax collector and finally a printer, in whose shop he developed a taste for reading. Victor Hugo fascinated him; he read "Les Miserables" half a dozen times before he was 16. The point may be of significance in what Frank Tannenbaum calls his "almost mystic sense of the value of the individual"—the fact that, just as doctrines have little reality for him, human beings have a reality particularly rare in the mind of one who deals with them in the mass.

At 18 he took up arms against De la Huerta after the fall of Madero. He was twice wounded, once captured and, the story goes, showed a cold indifference of the firing squad that shocked even his captors. In seven years, as popular government arose from turmoil, he rose to the highest rank in the Mexican army, and for eight years was commanding general in various states. Even after he became Governor of Michoacan in 1928, he took time out to put down the Escobar rebellion.

As the army functions in Mexico, military service worked to reinforce rather than dissolve his bonds to what American politicians call the "plain people." For years his duties took him to out of the way garrisons which not merely mingle but work and plan with the villagers on the homely problems that, on a national scale, comprise a great part of the task facing Cardenas today.

Schools were one of them—along with matters of paving, sanitation and the like—and some unusual educational ventures have grown out of that experience. A direct outcome is the provision of special schools for soldiers' children, a unique problem in Mexico. Their success unquestionably influenced the transformation of an unlovely institution in Mexico City, a vocational school for girls, into a home so attractive that its graduates choose it as the place for their weddings.



Cardenas talks to the people: A polychromed woodcarving by Roberto de la Selva.

SOMETIMES Cardenas combined military duty with a characteristically practical service to a community. As commandant of a garrison in the state of Vera Cruz he caught two men attempting to smuggle arms. The firing squad was in order. But San Jeronimo was building a hospital.

"You are sentenced," said General Cardenas, "to pay for 30 carloads of brick and 15 of cement."

To his self-effacement was due the fact that, although he had served as Minister of War, Minister of the Interior and President of the all-powerful National Revolutionary Party—the submergence of which in a "popular front" was suggested by Cardenas himself last December—he was comparatively unknown outside Mexico until he became President by a vote estimated at 60 to one. He shies away from the personal pronoun. In writing he refers to himself as "the undersigned." He never wears evening dress. He refused to live in Chapultepec Palace, but moved to a modest home in the outskirts of Mexico and turned over the historic showplace to the people, to whom, he explained, it rightfully belonged.

But a great part of the time he is further away than even his suburban home, at his summer place on Lake Patzcuaro—named for a Tarascan princess, Quinta Erendira—or, more likely, on one of his interminable explorations of the villages and the villagers' needs. He travels as far as he can by train or automobile; goes on by horse or burro, or on foot; an innocently announced "ride to the next village" is likely to keep his groaning companions on the trail in the mountains for 16 hours at a stretch.

There is a story that a foreigner, an accomplished horseman, went with him and returned to a hospital. Cardenas never seems to wear out. He has a theory that a man is a little like a race horse; he gets years of care, and then when the time comes for him to perform, he must. If it uses him up, that doesn't matter.

But his endurance on the trail is nothing to his endurance in the plaza—or on the floor of a thatched hut, for he holds his "hearings" where the people will come. They come in hundreds and for hours, and they are not brief. But he never cuts them off, never even interrupts except with a question, which, as he knows, means for most of them just a fresh start.

When Professor Tannenbaum, who took such a journey (and lived to tell about it), remarked that he taxed himself, he said, "Por Dios, these people need so much. At least patience I have to give them."

Sometimes he holds court, hears both sides and gives his decision on the spot. A Mexican Indian will trudge 30 miles to market, heavily burdened; they come as far to see their President—with burdens as heavy and centuries old—and he hears them out. Very often their burdens have nothing to do with any presidential function, but they help him know his people. And a secretary—not a bodyguard—is at his elbow.

Cardenas spent a solid year at this before his election. It may have been campaigning. But it seems that he kept notes on his promises.

ELLWOOD DOUGLASS.

Imprisoned at Home; Her Pictures Suppressed by Hitler

IN 1897, a woman artist of Germany, practically unknown outside her native land and unheralded until then within its borders, was awarded a gold medal for her striking cycle of etchings inspired by Gerhart Hauptmann's classic play, "The Weavers," only to have the presentation of the medal vetoed by order of the Kaiser.

Nine years later, this same artist's poignant poster of a working woman, sick from exhaustion and undernourishment, made by her for the Home Industries Exposition in Germany, was suppressed by order of the Kaiserin.

In 1912, the police forbade the display anywhere of a forceful poster in which the artist advocated the opening of playgrounds for children.

And today, this woman artist, whose two sons fought in the World War, who has devoted her long life to portraying the sufferings of women and children through hunger, war and injustice in the factory, who is now in her seventy-first year and whose sight is failing, lives in Berlin, closely guarded in her home, her work suppressed, her abilities deliberately ignored, forbidden to go outside her native land and isolated within it.

Why has Germany been so afraid to present works of Kaethe Kollwitz, who has been called, by those who have been privileged to see her work, the greatest living woman artist of our time?

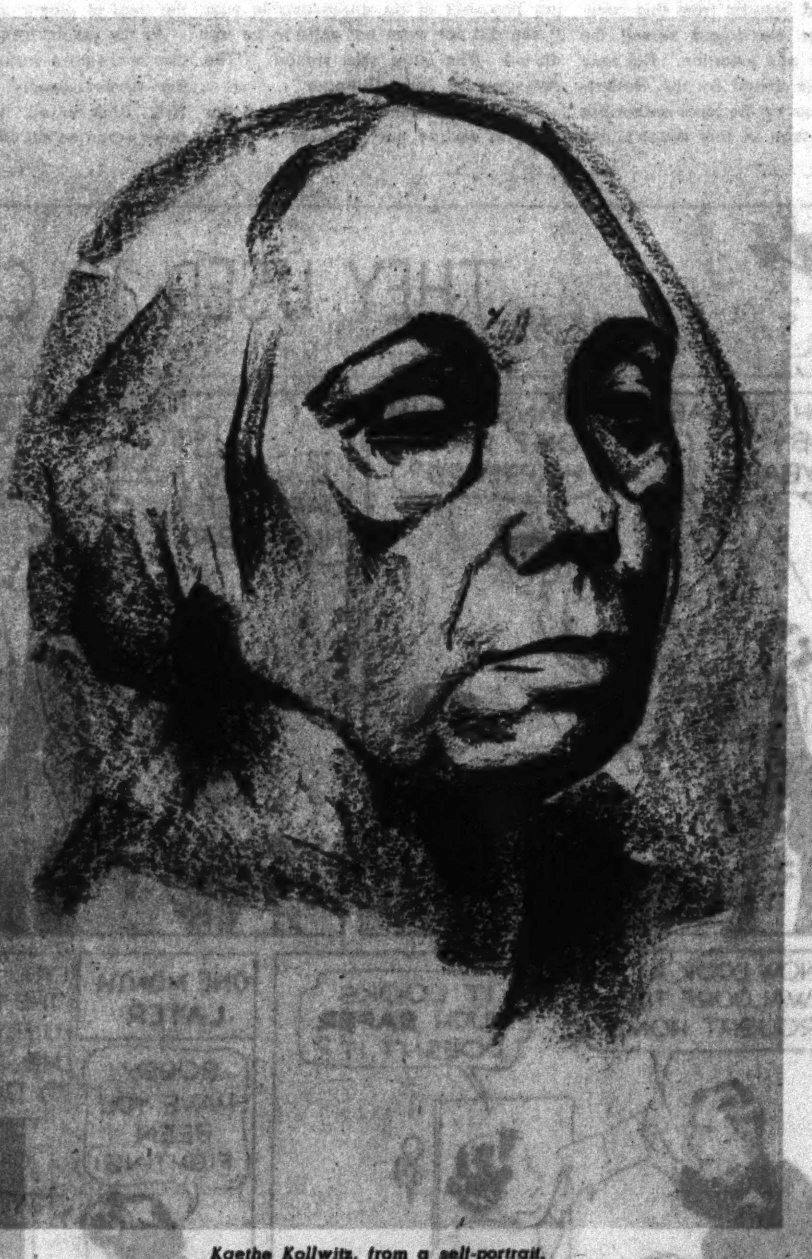
Why have both the Hitler regime and the reign of the Kaiser been unanimous in trying to prevent the public from seeing the etchings, the lithographs and the wood block prints of this artist?

Why is the name of Kaethe Kollwitz known by only a handful of people in this country and ignored in every history of art?

To some lovers and critics of art who have seen the work of Kaethe Kollwitz, she is not only the greatest woman artist of modern times, but should be placed on a par with such socially-conscious artists as the French Daumier and the Spanish Goya. To others, who have studied her portrayals of the overworked, the underprivileged, and the harassed mothers and children of the world, she is a neglected Rembrandt, who, like the immortal Dutchman, drew her own features every year; for in them as well as in her other subjects she found reflected the misery and the suffering of the world.

To Romain Rolland, for instance, the work of Kaethe Kollwitz, when he saw it some years ago, was "the greatest poem of this age in Germany, a poem reflecting the trials and suffering of humble and simple folk. This woman with her great heart has taken the people into her mothering arms with somber and tender pity. She is the voice of the silence of the sacrificed."

And it was because she was this voice that the Kaiser suppressed the honors to her; for, in his way of thinking, Kaethe Kollwitz signified "the art of the gutter." Today Hitler apparently feels the same way, for he does not permit her works to be displayed, and when he came to power five years ago, she lost her position in the Prussian Academy.



Kaethe Kollwitz, from a self-portrait.

HER life is an epic in itself. Born on July 8, 1867, as Kaethe Schmidt, the daughter of educated and comfortable middle-class parents, she began to understand the social problems of the era at an early age. Although she herself had plenty to eat and a good home, she soon found out that 72 per cent of the population in her native city, Königsberg, lived on an average income of $75 a year. She realised, when she was still a child, that poverty was not the fault of the poor who suffered from it, but rather was the result of a social system which produced inequalities of income.

Naturally, these thoughts did not come to the young Kaethe Schmidt out of a vacuum. They were the result of home environment. Her grandfather, Dr. Julius Rapp, first pastor of the Free Church of Königsberg, exerted a great influence on her way of thinking because he himself was a great humanitarian who wanted to lessen the suffering of his people; he was what was known in Germany as a "religios Mensch" and he constantly talked about how to alleviate human misery.

Young Kaethe's father, as well as her grandfather, exerted an influence on her future thinking as well as her future works of art. Himself a lawyer, her father abandoned his law after he was inspired by the revolution of 1848 and allied himself permanently with the working class by becoming a master mason. Those were the days of Marx, Engels and La Salle; economic theories were a matter of discussion at every meal; and Kaethe imbibed social consciousness with bread and butter. Her brother Karl, too was fed on the same food; years later he became editor of the now suppressed "Vorwarts," the once large Socialist daily in Berlin.

Kaethe Schmidt began her art education at the age of 13; her brother, at the time, was studying literature and political economy and it was he who introduced her at an early age to the philosophy of Goethe and the works of Emile Zola, Henrik Ibsen, Leo Tolstoy, and Maxim Gorki. When she was 17, Kaethe Schmidt left Königsberg for Berlin to study engraving under Stauffer Bern, a well-known artist and teacher. Four years later, she went to Munich to study further; there she was influenced by the works of Hogarth which she studied.

In 1891, Kaethe Schmidt married Dr. Karl Kollwitz, who had been a boyhood friend of her brother and who was a physician in a working class neighborhood in Berlin. From the people she met in her husband's clinic, and from the tales of frustration and bitterness she heard from them, this daughter of the middle-class realized the depths of economic misery and knew then that for all her life it would be her mission to portray injustice with her skill and try to show to an indifferent world the social wrongs which she saw every day about her.

She did powerful etchings and lithographs of scenes from the French Revolution, which she had read about and talked about with her friends and her family; she portrayed with her great skill in draughtsmanship the sweat shop conditions, the misery and the unrest of the hand-loom weavers in Silesia, conditions which were brought about by the introduction of the modern power loom in 1848; she finished a cycle of etchings inspired by Hauptmann's play, "The Weavers." For "The Weavers" etchings, she was awarded a gold medal, which the Kaiser vetoed. But a year later, in 1898, she was given a gold medal for this same series in Dresden.

A few years later, after the Kaiserin had followed in the footsteps of Kaiser William II by suppressing a poster which Kaethe Kollwitz made for the Home Industries Exposition, since it showed the working woman in too realistic a pose, exhausted and discouraged, she did win recognition by the grant of the Villa Romana prize, which won for her a year's study in Italy.

With the outbreak of the World War, Kaethe Kollwitz experienced great personal suffering as well as a feeling of outrage for the millions of men in arms as well as civilians who were killed and injured. Both her sons went to fight; one of them, Peter, never returned, for he was killed. And the war monument which Kaethe Kollwitz molded out of plaster was never exhibited, for it, too, was considered not fit for public view.

However, the fiftieth birthday of Kaethe Kollwitz was celebrated in Berlin in the midst of the World War with a retrospective exhibit, one of the few times that this great artist really received fitting honor in her native land. After the Armistice, in 1918, she was elected to the Prussian Academy as the first woman in its entire history to receive a similar appointment. Ten years later, under the short-lived liberal regime, she became director of graphic arts at the academy and the same year the Kaethe Kollwitz Schule was founded in her honor.

Unfortunately, she did not enjoy her position long. When she was 66 years of age, Hitler came into power. Kaethe Kollwitz was immediately removed from the faculty of the Prussian Academy. The present regime seems as afraid as was that of Kaiser William II to allow Kaethe Kollwitz to express in her stark black and white wood cuts, her engravings and her etchings, the reactions she feels towards the German scene and the German people.

IN 1935, in a series called "Death," she portrayed starving women and children in the same manner of powerful line and facial and bodily expression which she used in her previous series, which were entitled, "Peasants' War Series," "The Uprising," "Bread," and "War." Today she is not allowed to participate in any affairs; her works are nowhere to be seen in Germany; she dare not leave the country and is practically, from all reports, a prisoner in her own home.

Yet her work has not been destroyed any more than her courage. There are today in this country a group of some 40 etchings and lithographs by Kaethe Kollwitz. They include several self-portraits, several posters which she did for organisations called "Bread! Our Children Are Starving!" "Help Russia," and "Down With War." They show both the power and genius of her art and her social consciousness which made it impossible for her to separate a social message from being an integral part of her work.

Nor is there anything sentimental in the work of this now almost 71-year-old woman. Her "Plough Pullers and Woman," her "In Memoriam Karl Liebknecht," done January 1, 1919, and her clinic sketches done in her husband's office in the slums of Berlin are vigorous and masculine. Her etchings have been called the "epic of the proletariat;" while the Kaiser said Kaethe Kollwitz's art was that of the gutter, art critics are now prophesying that Kaethe Kollwitz will live for years because of her portraits of the working class and its sufferings in war and hunger.

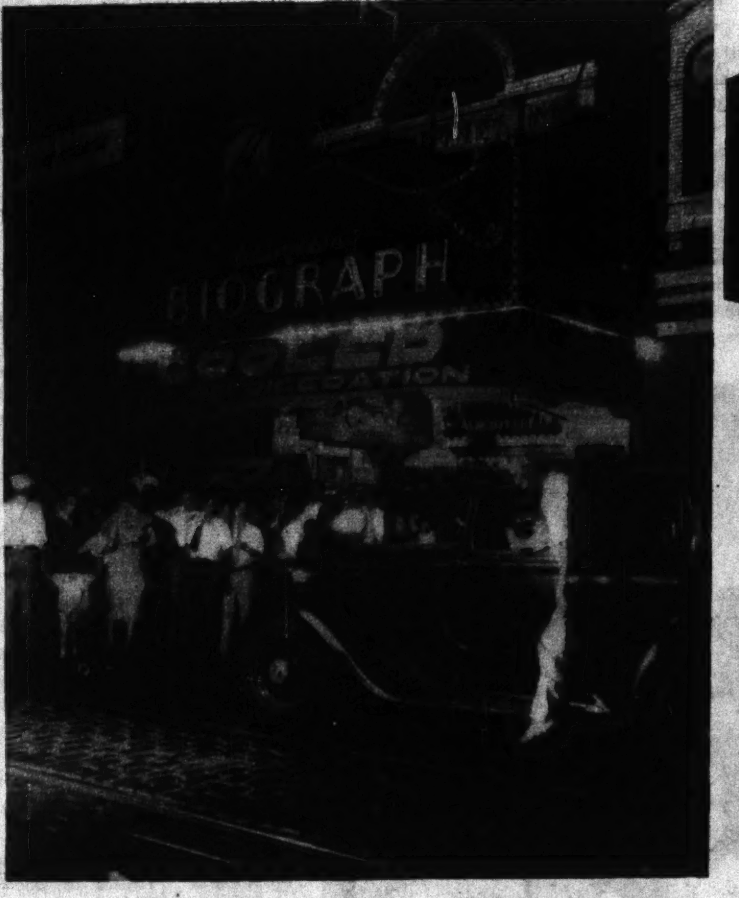
The TRAGIC FLIGHT of Dillinger's 'RED WOMAN'

Victim of Extortion and Kidnaping Threats, Anna Sage Has Changed Her Face by Plastic Surgery and Now Seeks Refuge in a Sanitarium.

Anna Sage in 1935.

John Dillinger



The neighborhood theater in Chicago where Dillinger was shot down by 15 Department of Justice agents.

CHICAGO.

ON FEBRUARY 28 last, the divorce action of Sage vs. Sage was called up in Chicago Superior Court.

Two or three years ago, the name, Anna Sage, would have rated headlines in the press.

For she is none but the beautiful "Woman in Red" who on July 22, 1934, put the finger on John Dillinger, until that night, United States Public Enemy Number 1.

But on the occasion of the recent trial, the newspapers tucked away brief notices in the corner of an inside page.

The plaintiff was Alexander Sage, 42 years of age, an unemployed railroad worker. The defendant who failed to appear before Judge John J. Lupe, was Anna Sage, 45 years old, now hiding in a sanitarium near Cairo, Egypt, according to the following account taken from Paris-Soir and the London Daily Express.

Before she was deported from the United States to her native Rumania in 1936, Anna Sage appeared in photographs as a handsome, wide-eyed, high-cheeked, buxom woman. Today, as the result of weird and tragic happenings, she is less than a shadow of her former self.

The recent divorce action was quickly won by Alexander Sage who charged that he had married his wife in 1929 and that she had deserted him in 1932. Dillinger's "Red Woman" did not contest the action.

When in July, 1934, she decided to "squeal" on the fugitive from justice, Anna Sage believed that riches would be her reward for tipping off the G-men.

So she went and told Sergeant Martin Zarkovich of the East Chicago (Indiana) police that she was going to attend with Dillinger that night, the showing of "Manhattan Melodrama" at the Biograph Theater in Chicago, Illinois. She would, Anna promised, wear a red dress.

Sergeant Zarkovich had a particular reason of his own to get even with Dillinger. During a bank holdup in East Chicago, Dillinger's gang had killed Patrolman William P. O'Malley, the sergeant's life-long friend and partner. And Zarkovich had sworn to lay down his life, if necessary, for the capture of the dreaded killer.

After contacting the "Red Woman," Zarkovich took her to the Chicago headquarters of the G-men. And there the net in which Dillinger was finally caught and killed was woven. Zarkovich had avenged his pal.

Shortly after Dillinger's spectacular capture and death, the Department of Labor started deportation proceedings against her on the grounds of moral turpitude. Anna Sage had been convicted of operating a disorderly house in Gary, Indiana.

In vain she contended that the G-men, at the time of her betrayal, had promised her immunity from deportation.

She sailed on the President Harding on her voyage to Rumania. She claimed that she had collected $5000 representing total awards offered by five states—Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin—for the "tip" that led to Dillinger's capture.

From then on, Anna Sage's life became a trail of misery and sorrow.

Traveling via Paris, Vienna and Budapest, she finally arrived at the little Balkan town of Timisoara, in Western Rumania, until 1918 part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

In Timisoara, she opened a restaurant with the larger part of the money which she had brought from this country. But soon she found herself the target of graft and extortion. Not only were the taxes levied by the Government as well as by the local authorities much higher than in this country, but her reputation had spread quickly and she had to pay for "protection" to the local authorities. Then she attempted to go on the stage in Bucharest for $25 a night—only to have her appearance forbidden by the Home Office.

HER funds shrank. She accepted a position as hostess in a small country inn, not far from Timisoara. There, she tried to shield her identity by passing under her maiden name, Dona Anna Cumpanasi.

By the fall of 1936, she was reunited with her little son, named John, who had been left behind temporarily in the United States. But hardly had the child arrived when the "Red Woman" found herself the target of kidnaping threats: A letter reached her demanding payment of an unreasonable sum if she did not want her child to be abducted. The letter was signed: "The Avengers of John Dillinger."

Deadly frightened, she made up her mind to escape her pursuers.

In March, 1937, she commissioned a Chicago attorney in vain to take steps for having the deportation order in the United States set aside. When she realized that she would be unable to get an American visa, she made up her mind to leave Europe.

But she realized, too, that wherever she went, she would be at the mercy of the underworld which, under the pretext of avenging John Dillinger, would mulct her of her last resources. So she decided that the first step necessary would be to change her identity.

For this purpose, she went to Budapest. There she consulted a plastic surgeon who undertook to perform an unusual operation. Instead of beautifying his patient, the surgeon reversed the goal of plastic surgery.

As the result, Anna Sage was turned into a creature radically different from her former beauty. From the attractive, dark-haired, keen-eyed woman, there emerged an old, ugly drudge, her face pale, her hair completely gray.

To complete the metamorphosis, she had obtained, prior to her leaving Rumania, the official permission to use her maiden name of Cumpanasi.

With a passport issued for that name and bearing a photograph of her new, aged appearance, Anna Sage left Hungary with her child and from Fiume, the Italian port on the Adriatic, she took a steamer for Alexandria, Egypt, from where she traveled to Cairo.

Here, she established herself at a modest, European-owned hotel and intended to begin a new life with the upbringing of her child as her chief goal.

One day, however, while she left the lobby of her hotel, she noticed a familiar face, that of a notorious Timisoara gangster, leader of the gang which had preyed on her in Rumania.

Desperate, Anna Sage groped for new means of obliterating her trail. And finally, she decided to undergo a second facial operation. This time, a Cairo doctor managed to give her face a still more sickly appearance.

When she emerged from the second "facial," the "Red Nemesis" would not have been recognized by anybody. She seemed the typical specimen of a person marked by a swift, deadly disease.

Still, the "Red Woman" did not acquiesce. In search of a permanent haven for refuge, she found out about a sanitarium at the outskirts of the city which was established to house mild cases of insanity brought on by "the Chafar," the madness that befalls Europeans as the result of the desert's terrible heat and privations.

This hospital was strictly guarded and the inmates were completely cut off from the rest of the world by a high wall and by guards that were on duty day and night.

Here, Anna Sage found an asylum and believed herself safe from the designs of her enemies. But while she did find peace from prosecution and extortion, she failed to escape the curiosity of the newspapers.

LAST summer she was traced by a reporter, according to the Paris-Soir, who finally was permitted by the director of the institution to watch through a hedge screening the wide lawn of the sanitarium. And there, the newspaper men made out an old woman who played with a small boy. Now and then, when the child would do some cute trick, a forlorn smile would play over the ugly features of the aged woman.

That smile was all that had remained of the once handsome "Woman in Red," John Dillinger's nemesis.

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

And the Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

A WARM RECEPTION

THE CHARACTERS

BILL BUNNY—A happy little rabbit.

O. HUM—A lazy opossum.

Bill Bunny is once more safely back in dear old Hickory Hollow. My, how the place has changed since last he saw it. The branches of the trees, then bare, are now covered with tender green leaves. Young grass and fragrant flowers cover the ground where he last saw snow. Yes, the Hollow certainly has changed and Bill stops to stare around him.

THE PLAY BEGINS

BILL BUNNY—Gosh, I'm glad I'm home again. Everything is so beautiful and the air is full of the perfume of wild flowers. Hm-m-m-m, they smell good. (Suddenly a different odor floats past Bill's nose.) What's that? Hm-m-m-m. It smells like O. Hum's pipe. I'll bet he's lying under a tree dreaming. I'll find him. Won't he be surprised to see me? (Bill doesn't have to hunt long before he finds the opossum lying among the flowers under a birch tree.) Hello, O. Hum!

O. HUM—Hello yourself-f-f-f-f.

BILL BUNNY—Aren't you glad I'm home?

O. HUM — Have you been away-y-y-y?

BILL BUNNY—I've been away for several weeks. I was visiting the Mighty Presto, the King of magic, and he said, when I left, that any wish I made would come true. (O. Hum sits up and opens his eyes wide.)

O. HUM—Did you say you could have anything you wished for?

BILL BUNNY—Yes. But I have only one month in which to make the wish. (O. Hum puts his hands on Bill's shoulders.)

O. HUM — My very good friend, Bill Bunny, how I have missed you. The Hollow didn't seem the same when you were away. (Bill breaks loose and hops away. O. Hum rushes after him.)

O. HUM—Wait, Bill, let me help you make that wish—wait! (Bill knows O. Hum, and he doesn't need the opossum's help to make his wish—a wish that would do the most good for everyone in the Hollow—so he doesn't wait. He keeps right on hopping.)

Business-Man Artists Who Have Crashed New York's Galleries

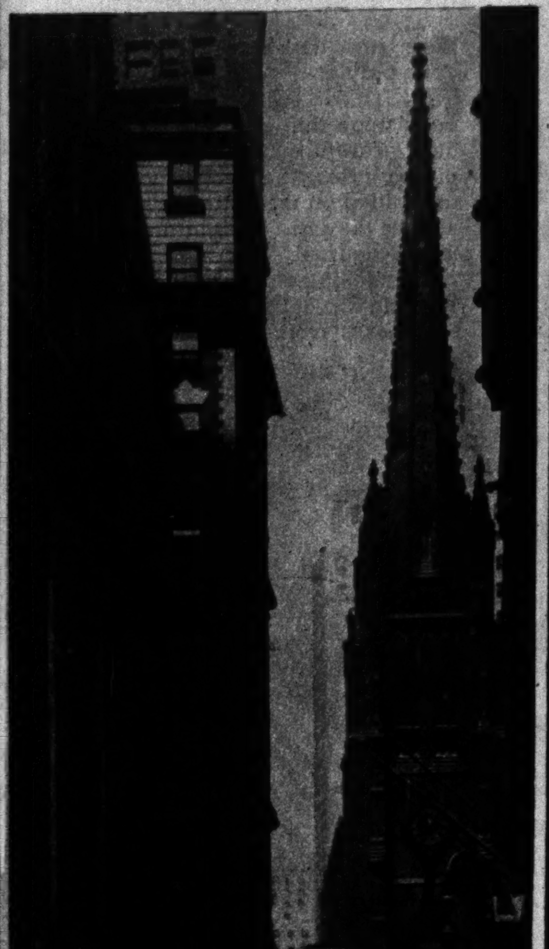
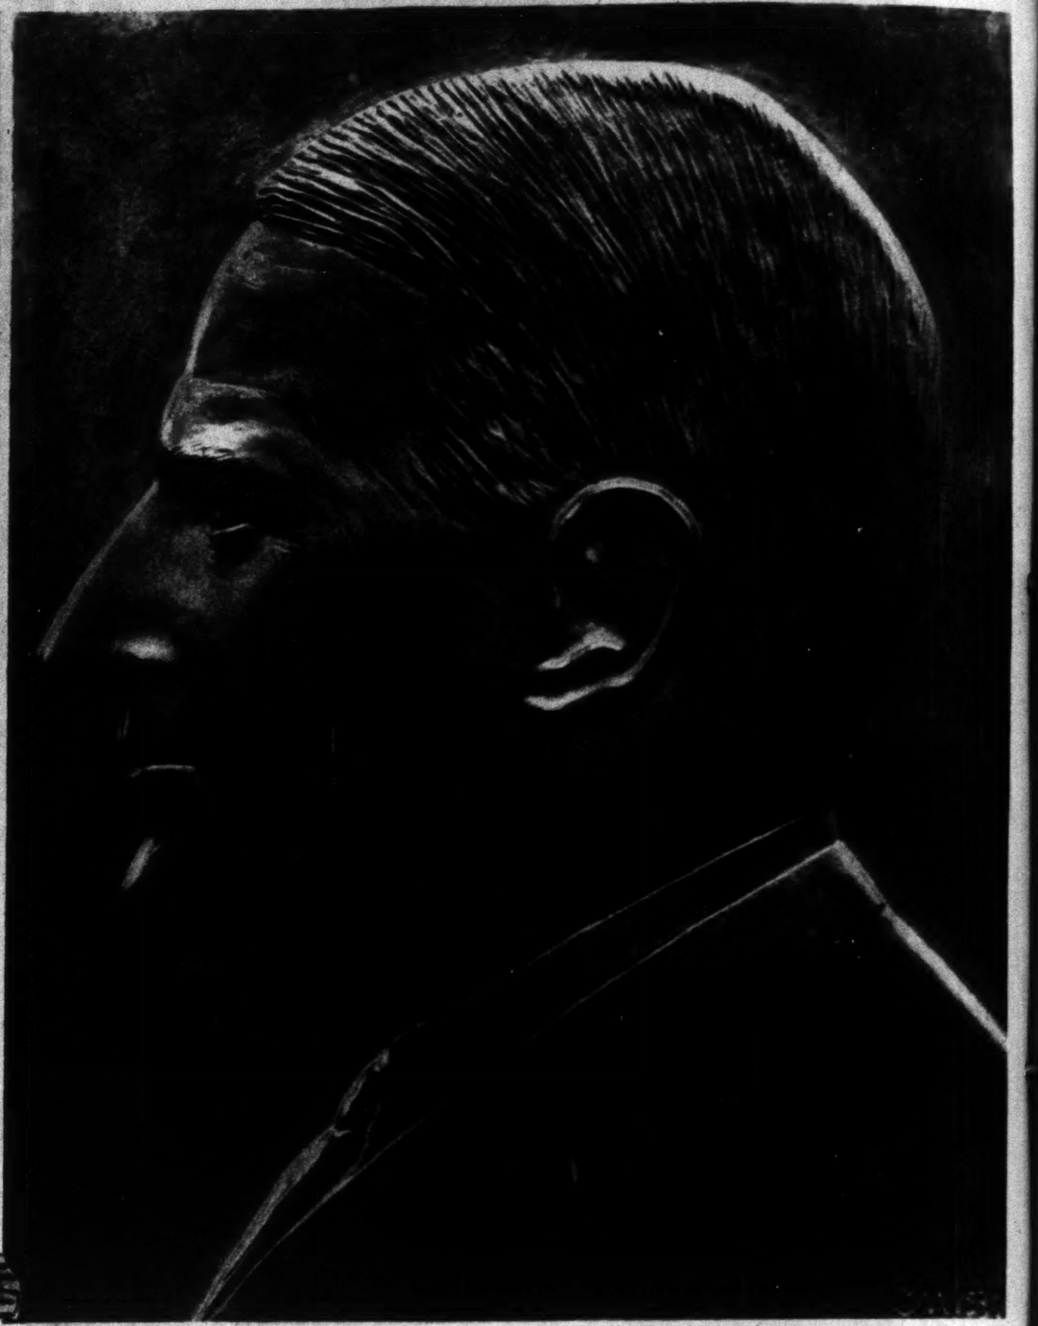
"Mrs. Parker," portrait by H. L. Redman.





"Gerard Swope," bronze bas-relief, by Clark H. Minor.

H. L. Redman.

Clark Minor.

By ROBERT SELL

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

Quite Apart From Their Financial Abilities, Four Executives Have Been Awarded One-Man Shows in the Worldly Art Markets of Manhattan.

NEW YORK.

BUSINESS is business . . . so Herbert L. Redman fought his way up the scale of success from a draper's apprentice to general director of a great department store. Clark H. Minor cut a swath through the electrical industry from a clerkship to president of the International General Electric Company. Theophile Schneider went into the fur industry through necessity and now heads a large concern . . . and all the time the struggle between duty and inclination went on within them.

For Redman, Minor and Schneider are business men because life has decreed as much, but they are artists because they were born that way. When Redman finishes his day's work at Saks, he paints still life and portraits of haunting effectiveness. Schneider can scarcely stay away from his easel, but he must direct the destinies of Balch-Price and Company. Minor plays with clay and sculpts bas-relief heads and full-blown women as a relaxation from the arduous duties of his business existence.

No idle hobby is art with them for each has attained proficiency enough to have exhibited at one-man shows around Fifty-seventh street, probably the most sophisticated art mart in the world. In fact their separate exhibitions were features of the present art season. They were joined by John Swope, son of Gerard Swope, president of General Electric. Young Swope, a motion picture executive, took a series of candid camera shots of such beauty and clarity Carstairs Gallery exhibited them as though they were paintings.

Art critics, impressed by the fact that four business-man exhibitions should come in one season, are of the opinion there are many persons famed in other fields who could qualify for high ranking in the art world if circumstances had bent their lives otherwise. The business man engrossed in making a fortune can give little attention to the creative urge, insistent as it may be. And very often when he does it is in a diffident sort of way as though to paint or sculpt were a confession of weakness in a world in which there is no room for weakness.

Redman, Schneider and Minor—and Swope, too—are among the exceptions. For the first three have attained a pinnacle from which they can ignore the world and what it thinks of their avocations. Swope, of course, is independent through birth and because his hobby is linked with his business.

First the story of the draper's apprentice upon whom the government of France bestowed the ribbon of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor—Redman. There are two stories, the story of his business life and the tale of his artistic career. His business life began as a boy of 14 in Plymouth, England, where he got his first job in a draper's shop. Not long thereafter an old schoolmaster of his set up a printing shop and asked him to work for him. For the next five years he studied the graphic arts and became so proficient that years later in the United States he was able to go into the composing rooms of New York newspapers and set his own advertisements in type.

"And to this day," he said, "I can take a linotype machine apart and put it together again."

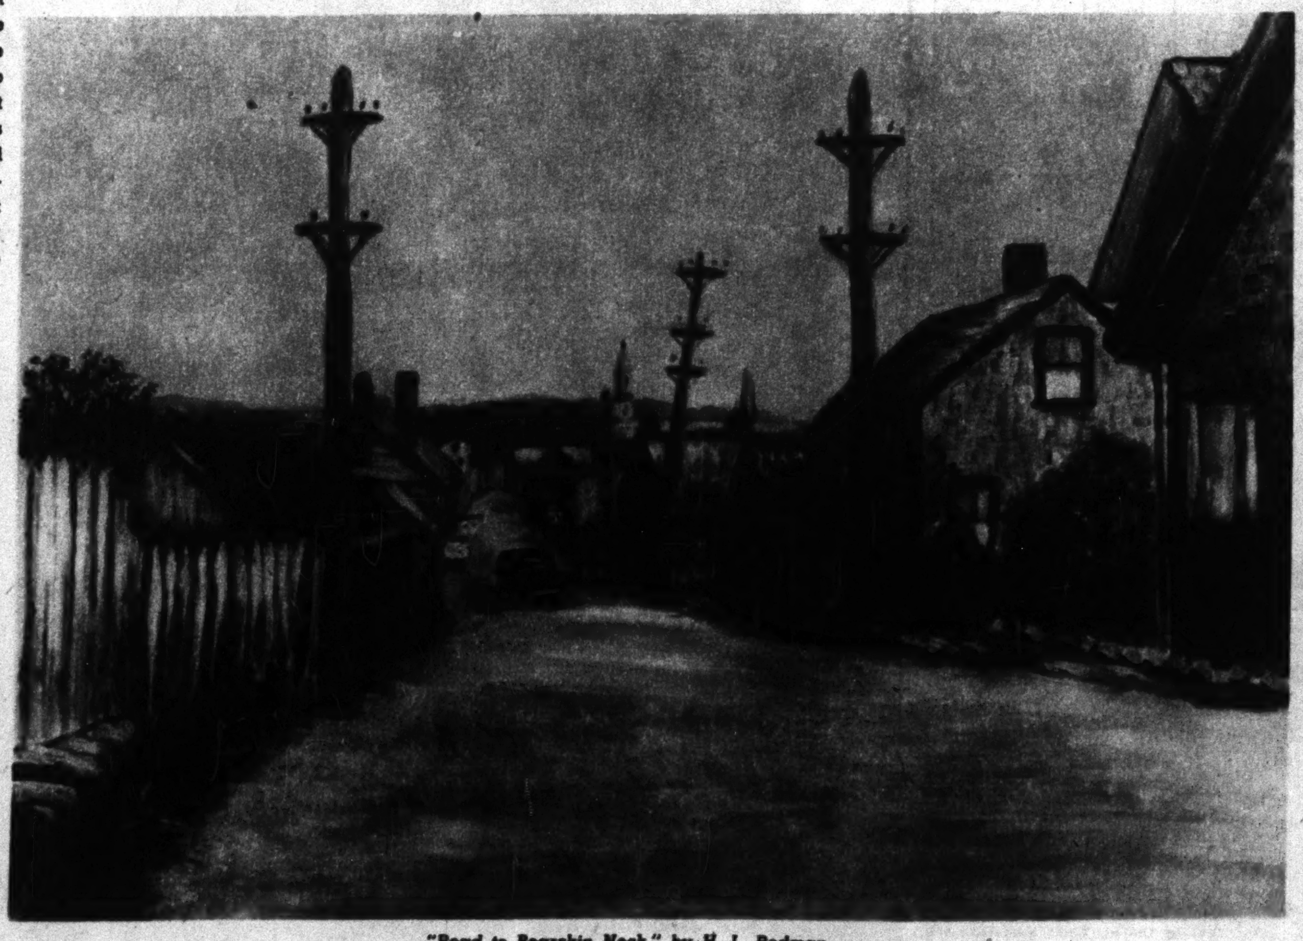
REDMAN learned also to write advertising copy in the print shop and when he was 17 he was composing copy for the leading Plymouth shopkeepers. He came to New York at 20 carrying in his pocket the sum of $100 and a letter to Sylvester Rawling, then music critic for the old New York World.

"I went to see Mr. Rawling," Redman said, "and after I had shown him some of the ads I had written, he said, 'There is always a place for a young fellow like you. Come back tomorrow morning and I will see that you get a job here.'

"But I never went back. Somehow I felt I would rather blaze my own trail."

And blaze it he did. Macy's offered him a job and then Horace Saks asked him to join his rising concern. At first Redman was advertising manager of the Thirty-fourth street store. Then he became vice-president and general merchandise manager of Saks-Fifth Avenue. In March, 1934, he was appointed managing director of Saks-Thirty-fourth street.

The Legion of Honor came along in 1936 possibly because Redman was one of the first to shape retail policies so as to place the products of French art and industry within the reach of great masses of buyers. Redman also used French design in laying out store windows and although his innovations in store interiors were at first sharply criticised by his colleagues his methods are now said to be in use in some form in every large department store in the nation.



"Road to Bearskin Neck," by H. L. Redman.

All this time his hobby was golf; then came an attack of neuritis. He had to give up the game, and his artistic impulses emerged. An artist friend had given him a box of crayons and in casting about for something to replace his beloved golf, Redman took to sketching. He found it a natural release from tension and today his private gallery consists of 60 paintings—an average of 30 a year.

He is self-taught because an artist friend told him instruction might warp his flair.

"Painting opened up a new world for me," Redman said. "I didn't realize there was so much of the world that I didn't know anything about."

HE LIKES character portraits, a beggar or an old woman with a shawl, once had a fellow pose as a bandit. His exhibition at the Montross Galleries consisted of 23 portraits, still lifes and landscapes, including "Pheasant and Coffee Pot," "East Gloucester Lighthouse" and "Old Barn, Jericho." He paints rapidly in a business suit. None of his work is for sale, but he hopes that some day an institution will ask him for a canvas. Then he will feel as he did the day he became managing director of Saks, or the day he got the Legion of Honor.

Clark Minor for a long time hid the fact he did sculpture from all but his family. He called it his "secret vice" and when an associate found him out he confessed that he had got his fingers into some modelling clay about five years ago and had never succeeded in getting them out. Members of the family twitted him about how he had stopped up the plumbing making plaster casts in the bathtub and what with one thing and another the industrialist said he was "timid as a young girl" about his recent debut at the Studio Guild.

Minor is 59 and has been associated with the electrical industry ever since he graduated from Hamilton College in 1902. He was elected president of the International General Electric Company in 1925 after a glittering career in many parts of the world. It is said that no important electrical or hydro-electrical venture in both hemispheres in the past 10 years has not been submitted to him for technical and financial aid.

Like Redman he is untrained yet he, too, shows a great natural flair. Most of his work is small in size and can be easily handled in a homemade studio. And it is in the room that he devotes to his statuettes and bas-relief that Minor spends his most relaxed hours.

With Theophile Schneider art is such a compelling urge that he has his studio in the building in which he has his office. His studio is a wonderful place of old Oriental carpets, carved and ivory inlaid Chinese armchairs, bookcases filled with tooled leather volumes, 400-year-old bronze Buddhas, Japanese Gods, Tibetan swords and paintings of factories and farmhouses, or trees and pounding surf.

Schneider came to this country as a boy of 10 in 1882. Six years later his father died and since the only business the 16-year-old boy knew anything about was furs he obtained a job in that industry. He was married at 20 and from that marriage came a daughter Ethel whose first joint exhibition with her father was unprecedented in Eastern art circles.

SCHNEIDER began to paint in 1900 and since then has been more or less prolific. Like Redman and Minor he is self-taught but his talent displayed itself earlier and is more matured. His paintings and water colors have been exhibited in the Cincinnati Museum, the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts, the American Water Color Society, the New York Water Color Club, the Worcester Museum and the Brooklyn Museum in whose permanent collection. The Gallery of American Water Colors hangs his water color "Old Red Barn."

One critic said that Schneider's "landscapes seem to me best in their unforced employment of natural patterns such as the rolling countryside or the lines of houses and bridge supports."

John Swope is only 29 and the youngest of his father's sons. Two years ago while waiting for the start of the Honolulu yacht race he got a candid camera and took 2000 feet of film.

"I was surprised at the results," he said, "surprised and pleased. I set up a dark room. I was living with Henry Fonda, James Stewart and Joshua Logan, and I had my first dark room in a closet, but they objected so vehemently I moved it into a shed. Sometimes I worked in the dark room for 20 hours at a stretch."

Young Swope graduated from Harvard in 1930. Then he traveled around the world. On the trip he took a moving picture camera and exposed 3000 feet of film. Back in the United States he got a job with R. K. O. in the company's New York theaters. Then he spent a year experimenting in color films.

He considers his best photograph that of a gopher snake which had wrapped itself around a plate of fruit on a luncheon table.

As an indication of the quality of his work his 50 pictures followed an exhibition of Whistler pastels.

the new taste thrill
that adds magic to your menus

ON EVERY HAND you see and hear about "tender" hams and new processes, but here is the amazing story of Krey's! Early last year the Krey Packing Company quietly brought out a new TENDERATED ham. Not a line of advertising has appeared on it until now; we wanted to see if the people of St. Louis and vicinity would recognize and accept the superior taste and quality of this ham on the basis of true merit alone.

In a survey just completed by an independent research staff, among St. Louis retail grocers and meat markets, Krey's Tenderated Ham was reported as the highest selling favorite of all specially cured "tender" hams. Merchants said "our customers prefer Krey's because of its superior flavor, tenderness and quality." It's true! There IS a glorious new tenderness in ham today, thanks to the perfection of the secret Krey Tenderating process. You'll find Krey's delicious beyond all comparison, in tenderness, taste and luscious, mellow flavor. Krey's Tenderated Ham brings an unequalled taste delight to your table.

So try Krey's Tenderated Ham. See for yourself why it is the largest selling "tender" ham in St. Louis. Your first bite will easily prove the delicious difference of this leader among quality hams. Don't just ask for "tender" ham —ask for Krey's Tenderated Ham. Your grocer or meat market has it.

See Your Child's Doctor—

Before giving an unknown remedy or medicine to take

No mother can make a mistake in asking her family doctor before she gives her child an unknown medicine to take. That's simply insuring her child's health, welfare — maybe life itself.

Most mothers know this and care for their children on this safe principle. Some mothers, however, expose their children to unnecessary hazard by using unknown remedies. If you're one of these mothers, change from layman's advice about your children, and for their sake, turn to your doctor's advice.

Now — among the most widely used children's remedies is "milk of magnesia." And for over 60 years many doctors have favored "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia for your child." For PHILLIPS' is recognized as a standard, proved and reliable preparation for your child to take. So when you buy, ask for it by its full name — Phillips' Milk of Magnesia — not merely for Milk of Magnesia alone.

FORWARD TO HEALTH!

Try Saráka—the Laxative with Exercising Action

"IT'S grand to feel so healthy again," Alice tells herself, as she swings along. "What a lucky day for me . . . when I discovered Saráka*."

A few weeks ago, she was just another sufferer from constipation. For days at a time, she felt sluggish and depressed . . . physically . . . mentally. Life seemed dull and dreary.

Then a friend begged her to try Saráka. Alice bought a tin from her druggist. What a pleasant surprise to find how agreeable Saráka was to take!

The Saráka tin is filled with tiny brown granules. You measure out a teaspoonful of these granules—then swallow a few at a time while drinking a glass of water.

After passing through the stomach the Saráka granules absorb water. Gradually they e-x-p-a-n-d. And turn into soft, smooth BULK. But in Saráka you get more than bulk—you get Bulk Plus Motility.* For Saráka contains a specially prepared cortex frangula which stimulates intestinal muscles to get busy and do their work thoroughly. You know how outdoor sports build up your body . . . Saráka tones up your intestinal muscles by giving them gentle internal exercise.

Try this modern laxative. See for yourself how pleasant it is to take —and how pleasant after taking. Mail coupon today for a free trial-size tin.

SARÁKA

FACTS: The bulk-producing ingredient in Saráka is bassorit, sap of an East Indian tree. Its other active ingredient is specially treated cortex frangula which mildly stimulates the intestines. This gives you Bulk Plus Motility. Ask your doctor about this two-fold action of Saráka. We are confident he will tell you it is safe and non-habit forming. If you plan to use Saráka as an "occasional" laxative, ask your druggist for the new 49-cent Handi-size. If you suffer from habitual constipation, save money by buying the economical "Hospital Size."

NED BRANT

By BOB ZUPPKE

DRAWN BY B. W. DEPEW

LEAVE BRANT IN - LEAVE BRANT IN - LEAVE BRANT IN - LEAVE BRANT IN!
B. W. DePew
IT'S THE LAST OF THE NINTH, COACH, AND HE'S FANNED TWO-
HE'S ALSO WALKED TWO, JAKE, AND ONE MORE BALL WILL FILL THE BASES.
IF YOU LOSE THIS HITTER, I'M GOING TO YANK YOU, NED - BUT YOU'VE PITCHED A FINE GAME AND I'M PROUD OF YOU!
I'LL TRY TO GET IT RIGHT OVER THE PLATE, COACH BALL FOUR - TAKE A WALK!
NEVER MIND THAT, NED OLD BOY!
NED'S BEEN TAKEN OUT, DAD!
UNDOUBTEDLY BECAUSE STANDISH HAS ON BASE WHAT MIGHT BE THE TYING AND WINNING SCORES, GAIL SORRY TO LEAVE YOU IN SUCH A TOUGH SPOT, BUD
CARTER
THE SCORE WILL STILL BE CARTER 3, STANDISH 2, WHEN I COME DOWN OFF THAT HILL - SEE IF IT ISN'T!
The keen-eyed Standish hitter crashed the first ball pitched to deep center field.
WHAT A SMACKOLA! COME IN, EVERYBODY!
And then what looked like a certain home run is turned into a miraculous running one-hand stab by Stark, roaming the right-field pasture for Carter.
BALL PA
LOOKS LIKE BRANT IS A FLOP AS A PITCHER-
HE LOST HIS CONTROL WITH MEN ON BASES!
THAT LAST CLOUT OFF SHEKELS WAS LONGER THAN ANY HIT OFF BRANT!

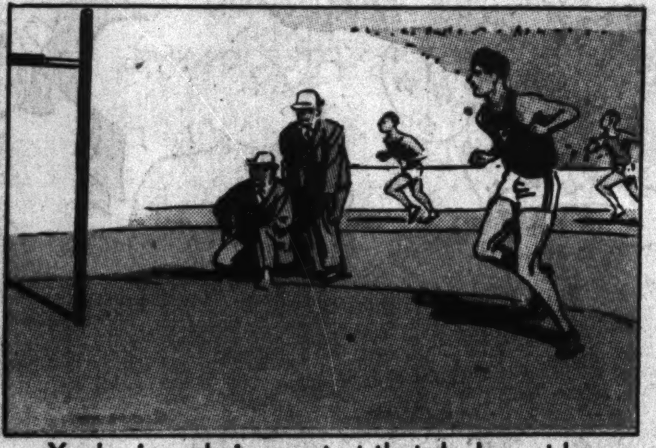
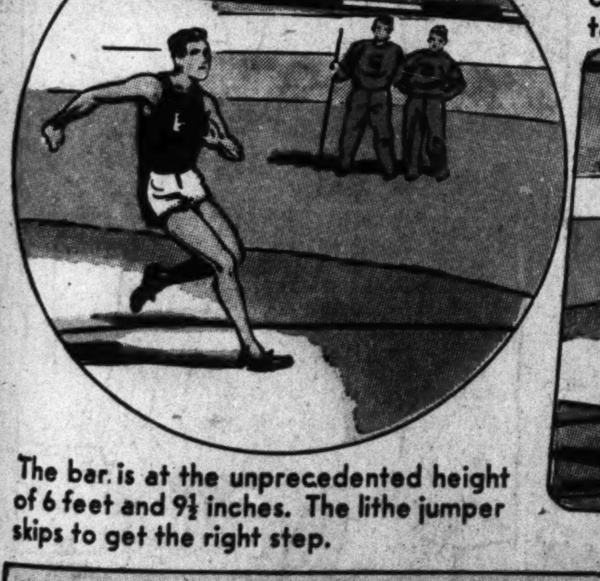
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About That Unprecedented High Jump.

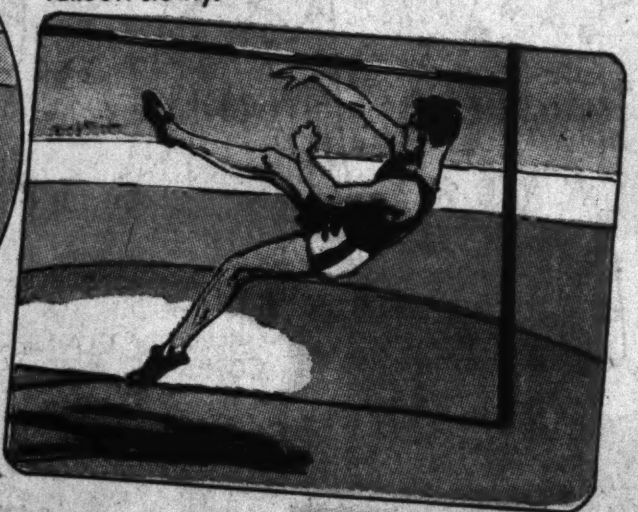
4-10



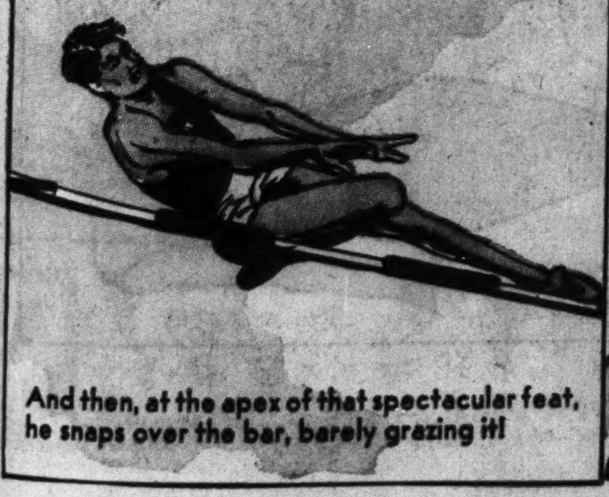
You're in a choice seat at that dual meet between Fresno State college and Sacramento college. A sensational high jumper starts his takeoff slowly.



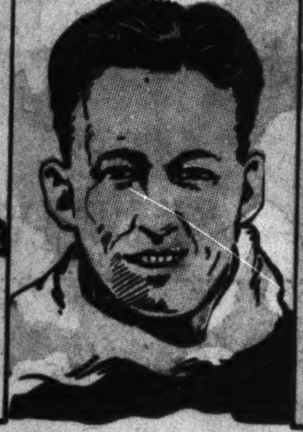
The bar is at the unprecedented height of 6 feet and 9½ inches. The lithe jumper skips to get the right step.



Up he goes toward that unbelievable height. You hold your breath with the others.



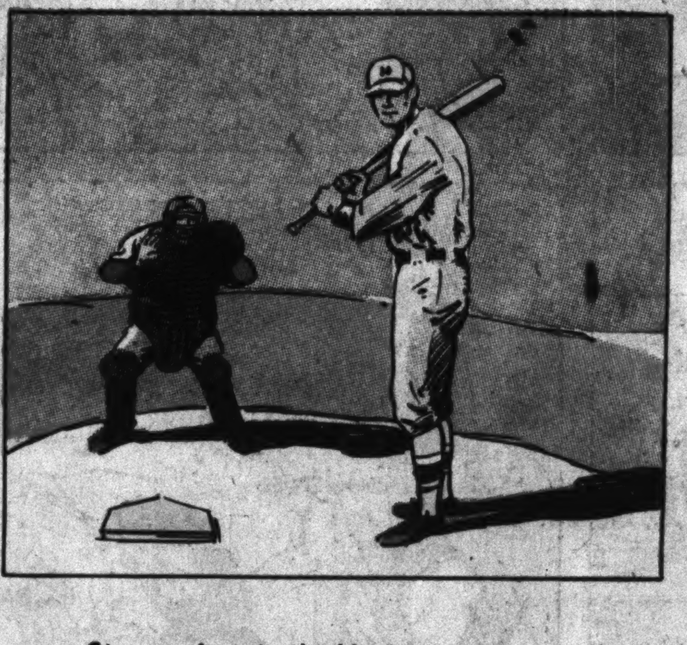
And then, at the apex of that spectacular feat, he snaps over the bar, barely grazing it!



It was Walter Marty of Fresno State college, ladies and gentlemen, who performed that unforgettable feat at Fresno, Cal., April 7, 1934.

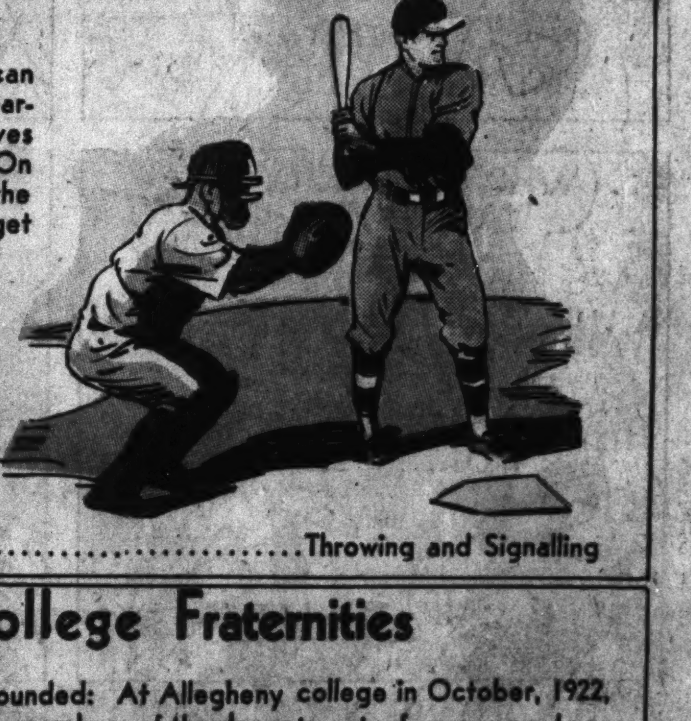
Baseball . . . . by NED BRANT

Catching.



Stand on the balls of your feet, hips, back and knees bent. Stay low, because it is easier to straighten up than it is to get down. Stay relaxed, fingers straight up or straight down. Get in front of the ball by shifting the body.

Stay as close to the hitter as you can remain with safety. It gets you nearer to the bases for a throw and gives the pitcher a better target. On throws to the plate, stand near the thirdbase line. On wide throws, get the ball and dive for the man.



Practice catching fly balls. Keep the ball directly over your head, if and when you get under it. Never stand still and attempt to reach out for the ball.

I KNOW IT ISN'T TRUE, IN SPITE OF WHAT SHE SAYS. SOMETHING IS WRONG, JACK!
COME UP TO MY OFFICE AND I'LL GIVE YOU MY HUNCH, BOB. AS A DENTIST, I'VE SEEN BAD BREATH BREAK UP MORE THAN ONE ROMANCE!
BOB, TESTS SHOW THAT MOST BAD BREATH COMES FROM DECAYING FOOD DEPOSITS IN HIDDEN CREVICES BETWEEN TEETH THAT AREN'T CLEANED PROPERLY. I RECOMMEND COLGATE DENTAL CREAM. ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THESE ODOR-BREEDING DEPOSITS. AND THAT'S WHY...

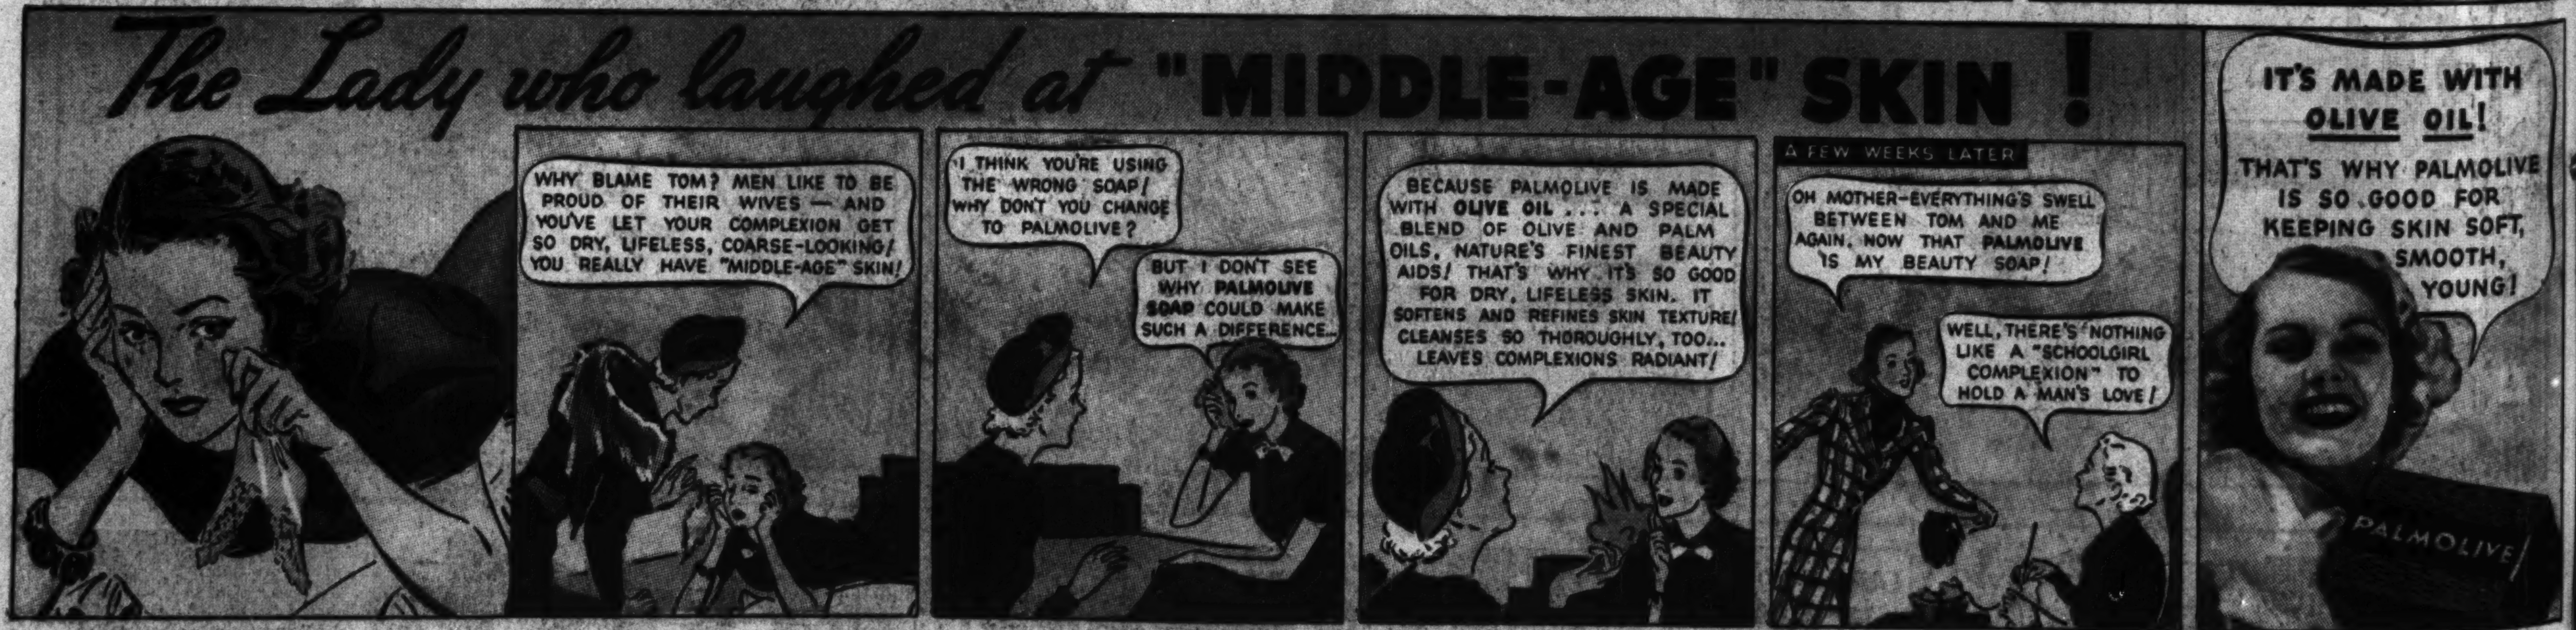
COLGATE DENTAL CREAM combats bad breath. Its special penetrating foam gets into the hidden crevices between your teeth that ordinary cleansing methods fail to reach . . . removes the decaying food deposits that cause most bad breath, dull, dingy teeth, and much tooth decay. Besides, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent thoroughly cleans the enamel, makes teeth sparkle!



The Lady who laughed at "MIDDLE-AGE" SKIN!
WHY BLAME TOM? MEN LIKE TO BE PROUD OF THEIR WIVES — AND YOU'VE LET YOUR COMPLEXION GET SO DRY, LIFELESS, COARSE-LOOKING! YOU REALLY HAVE "MIDDLE-AGE" SKIN!
I THINK YOU'RE USING THE WRONG SOAP! WHY DON'T YOU CHANGE TO PALMOLIVE?
BUT I DON'T SEE WHY PALMOLIVE SOAP COULD MAKE SUCH A DIFFERENCE...
BECAUSE PALMOLIVE IS MADE WITH OLIVE OIL... A SPECIAL BLEND OF OLIVE AND PALM OILS, NATURE'S FINEST BEAUTY AIDS! THAT'S WHY IT'S SO GOOD FOR DRY, LIFELESS SKIN. IT SOFTENS AND REFINES SKIN TEXTURE! CLEANSES SO THOROUGHLY, TOO... LEAVES COMPLEXIONS RADIANT!
A FEW WEEKS LATER
OH MOTHER—EVERYTHING'S SWELL BETWEEN TOM AND ME AGAIN, NOW THAT PALMOLIVE IS MY BEAUTY SOAP!
WELL, THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A "SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION" TO HOLD A MAN'S LOVE!
IT'S MADE WITH OLIVE OIL! THAT'S WHY PALMOLIVE IS SO GOOD FOR KEEPING SKIN SOFT, SMOOTH, YOUNG!
